Christian Seeks Intervention

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Leftist Moslem militiamen apparently won control of large Christian areas of Lebanon Tuesday. A powerful Christian leader called for intervention by the United States, the United Nations or Western Europe.

U.S., Lebanese, Syrian and Israeli government and military sources denied reports of massive Syrian armed intervention in the war but indicated that an estimated 1,500 troops of the Palestine Liberation Army had crossed into Lebanon from Syria to fight on the Moslem side.

U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger warned against outside intervention, and Arab League Secretary-General Mahmoud Riad called or an immediate Arab summit to settle the war.

State-run Lebanese television announced that Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam and the Syrian army and air force chiefs were due in Beirut on Wednesday to try to work out a settlement. Informed sources said Lebanese Moslem leaders had proposed Syrian Army Chief of Staff Gen. Hikmat Shehabi as a neutral negotiator.

A police spokesman said communications were out with much of the country but that Moslem forces appeared to have added most of northern and eastern Lebanon to the southern area they already controlled.

"The last messages received reported scores of tiny Christian villages besieged by Moslem tribal warriors in the north and east," he said. "Hundreds of Christian families there have already fled to neighboring Syria."

Right-wing Christian forces held onto an area along the coast and mountains between Beirut and Tripoli and part of the capital itself. They were cleaning out Moslem pockets, including the last Palestinian holdout in the corpse-strewn Karantina slum of Beirut.

Police said more than 200 people were killed, most of them combatants, in the previous 24 hours. That raises the death toll since Jan. 1 to more than 2,050, in addition to the estimated 8,000 killed last year.

"There is a wave of kidnapings in various suburbs of Beirut and some of the victims are being shot dead on the spot by street gunmen," the spokesman added.

Interior Minister Camille Chamoun, 76-year-old leader of one of the private Christian groups fighting Moslems and Palestinians, called for the foreign intervention after he was evacuated by helicopter from his besieged seaside mansion south of Beirut.

Chamoun, who as president in 1958 called in U.S. Marines to end another civil war situation, charged Monday night that up to 15,000 Syrian army troops had crossed into Lebanon. The Syrian government and Palestine guerrilla leaders denied it, and U.S. State Department and Israeli military officials discounted Chamoun's charge.

Palestinian and Lebanese military sources said Syrian-trained units of the Palestine Liberation Army — the official military wing of Yasir Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization — had moved into Lebanon. Intelligence sources here estimated their number at 1,500, and U.S. and Israeli officials agreed with it.

Large numbers of Palestinian guerrillas have been involved in the war for months, but only in recent days have there been reports of organized army units arriving.

Israeli military sources said the Palestinian army could tip the balance to the Moslems in the battle for Beirut. They estimated that Moslem and Christian forces were otherwise about evenly divided with some 20,000 fighters each.

Palestinian sources said that Israel was massing troops along Lebanon's southern border, but Lebanese authorities denied it. Israeli Defense Minister Shimon Peres toured the border and said the presence of large numbers of Palestinian guerrillas in the neighboring country had "direct implications on Israel's security."

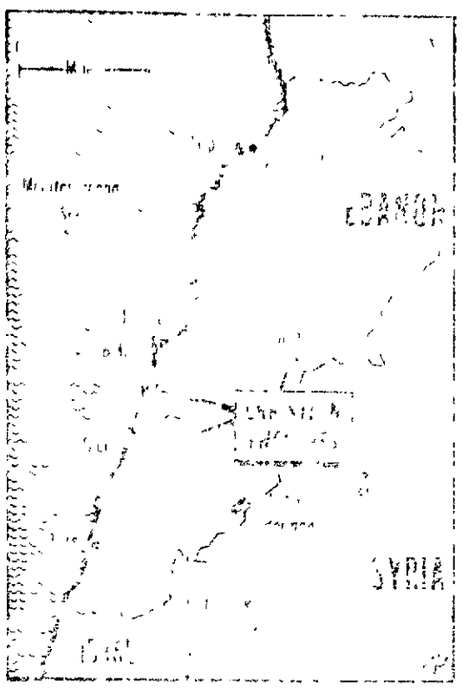

Israel has previously indicated it will intervene in Lebanon if Syria does so, but has not said whether it considers Syrian-trained Palestinian army units to constitute Syrian intervention.

Kissinger issued his warning against outside involvement in "the tragedy now befalling Lebanon" during a stopover in Copenhagen on his way to Moscow. He said the war "has the potential for drawing in outside powers" and warned against "any unilateral action that could lead to an expansion of hostilities."

In Washington, White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said the State Department had sent warnings through diplomatic channels for all outside parties not to interfere in Lebanon.

Arab League Secretary-General Riad asked Arab governments to respond within 72 hours to his call from Cairo for a summit, which he proposed should take place before the end of the month.

In New York, a U.N. announcement said Lebanese Ambassador Edouard Ghorra told Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim that he had not received any instructions from his government to bring the Lebanese situation before the Security Council.

Carter Now Contender

By R. W. APPLE JR.

Des Moines — Former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia established himself as a major contender for the Democratic presidential nomination Tuesday as late reports from Monday night's Iowa precinct caucuses gave him a solid victory.

Carter defeated his closest rival, Sen. Birch Bayh of Indiana, by a margin of better than 2 to 1. In a field of six candidates, he amassed more than a quarter of the votes. He scored impressively among farmers as well as urban folk, among Roman Catholics as well as Protestants, among blue-collar as well as white-collar workers, even among Iowa's few blacks.

The 51-year-old Carter, a retired naval officer who raises seed peanuts in Plains, Ga., went a long way toward dispelling questions about his credibility in this first test of strength among Democratic presidential hopefuls.

It remains to be seen whether he will do as well in primary states, whose larger electorates make impractical the kind of person-to-person campaigning and precinct-level organizing that helped Carter here. His most severe test remains his effort to defeat or damage Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama in the March 9 primary in populous Florida.

Having burst from the pack in this state, Carter will also face rigorous questioning about his stand on the issues. He underwent some of that here, especially in regard to seemingly contradictory comments about abortion, but it came late and did not appear to have filtered down to the voters.

In the Republican caucuses, the picture was less clear.

Unlike the Democrats, the Republicans were not required to state their preferences, so the only guides to public sentiment were straw votes. The Republican state committee, in a random sample of 62 precincts statewide, found President Ford edging former Gov. Ronald Reagan of California, 264 votes to 248.

In a survey in conservative Black Hawk County, the major population center and the only Iowa congressional district currently held by the Republicans, Reagan won, 255 to 207.

Like most recent national and state polls, the Iowa straw votes seemed to portend a close contest between the two, somewhat on the order of the Robert A. Taft-Dwight D. Eisenhower fight of 1952, unless there are major upheavals.

All 2,530 of Iowa's precincts were scheduled to hold caucuses Monday night, but party officials estimated that only about 2,350 actually took place. For one reason or another, no one showed up for the rest.

The results from 2,212 precincts, almost 95% of those where votes were cast, showed the following breakdown:

Uncommitted: 37.15%; Carter 27.63; Bayh, 13.16; Fred R. Harris, 9.93; Morris K. Udall, 5.97; Sargent Shriver, 3.30; Henry M. Jackson, 1.10; all others, 1.76.

118 New Bills Include Major Tax Proposals

By DON WALTON

Senators dumped 118 new bills, including several major tax proposals, onto the legislative agenda Tuesday.

It was the 10th and last day for bill introduction by individual senators — and they responded with a final flurry which brought the total of new bills thus far introduced in the 1976 session to 353.

Among them were three measures from Sen. Frank Lewis of Bellevue to revise and limit the current tax exemption program for farm and business inventory and equipment.

Sen. Richard Maresh of Milligan produced a bill to apply the sales tax to gasoline purchases, with revenue allocated for road and street construction.

Legislature stories on Pages 11, 12, 13

$1,000 Ceiling

The three-pronged Lewis tax plan would revise the personal property tax relief plan this year to place a $1,000 ceiling on exemptions for any taxpayer.

That proposal was contained in LB914.

The other bills, LB850 and LB851, would freeze the exemption level at 37½% in 1977, and limit state reimbursements to local government to $33 million a year.

Without such a freeze, the exemption is scheduled to rise over the next two years from 37½% to 62½%.

Estimated cost for reimbursements in the coming fiscal year under the rising rate of exemption is $42 million.

The Maresh tax proposal, contained in LB863, would distribute gasoline sales tax revenue on a basis of 53 1/3% to the state, 23 1/3% to the counties and 23 1/3% to the cities.

$13.5 Annually

The state sales tax would produce an estimated $13.5 million in annual revenue, Maresh said.

The bill also would apply the 1% city sales tax in Omaha, Lincoln and Bellevue to motor vehicle fuels, with the revenue retained by the cities.

Tuesday's deluge also included two more bills relating to medical malpractice insurance problems, a measure to repeal the general state prohibition against sale of liquor on Sunday and a proposal which would require recipients of unemployment benefits to perform public service jobs.

Veterans Home

Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood authored the latter proposal, LB924, along with a bill (LB927) to purchase the John F. Kennedy College facilities at Wahoo for a state veterans home.

Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh introduced LB931, ending the ban on Sunday sale of liquor in Nebraska.

DeCamp also proposed, in LB933, that the corporate farm reporting law be repealed, and all such reports be destroyed by the secretary of state.

Other DeCamp bills would abolish all state agencies in 1980 unless a legislative study found some or all were necessary, and provide for Public Service Commission regulation of gas rates.

Those measures, in order, are LB934 and LB935.

Sen. Gary Anderson of Axtell authored a proposal to allow Nebraskans to check off $1 of their state income tax payment for donation to one of the political parties. His proposal is contained in LB918.

Lottery Solutions

Bills were offered to scuttle and save the Omaha lottery plan.

Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha produced LB901, which would require the gross proceeds of such lotteries to be used completely for charitable or community betterment purposes.

DeCamp offered a bill which would revise the statutes to allow the Omaha lottery to continue.

Among other new bills were proposals to allow private marriage contracts, establish a state energy office, delay implementation of the new probate code until 1979, create a state office of consumer general, and provide a new system of establishing senatorial wages.

Under the latter plan, contained in LB928, sponsored by Sen. Walter George of Blair, the salaries would be set by a two-thirds vote of county board chairmen in Nebraska.

Such a proposal would require a vote of the people to amend the constitution.

Retarded's Parents Ask Appeal Route

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

Parents of mentally retarded persons Tuesday asked state senators for a process to appeal any effort to move their children from the Beatrice State Home to a community retardation program.

Support was voiced for Adams Sen. George "Bill" Burrows' LB694 by parents who came from as far away as McCook and Burwell for a hearing held by Legislature's Public Health and Welfare Committee.

No action was taken on the bill, after questions were raised whether such an appeal process is not already part of a court agreement on treatment of the retarded signed by Gov. J. James Exon and representatives of the retarded.

The settlement, the product of a lawsuit to reduce dramatically the population of the Beatrice State Home, guarantees parents who object to moving their son or daughter from Beatrice to one of the 40 community programs a due process hearing.

What has concerned a number of parents is a provision that parental objections will not preclude placement in a community program, if evaluators deem it in the retarded person's best interests.

Burrows' bill would not allow parental objections to block placement but would put the hearing provision into law.

Added questions were raised by Sens. John Cavanaugh and Steve Fowler whether such a law would have any binding effect on the evaluation teams provided for in the agreement.

Cavanaugh suggested Burrows consult with Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas concerning whether the settlement or a state law takes precedence. Burrows replied that Douglas might not give the best answer since he said Douglas's involvement in the lawsuit has left him in a "compromised position."

Marvin L. Brown, representing the Mental Retardation Association of America, said without an appeal procedure, "The peace and tranquility of families could be disrupted."

Brown, whose daughter has been in Beatrice for 14 years, said, "I resent the fact someone might dictate to me how my daughter should be cared for."

He also read into the hearing record a statement from the Sarpy County Board that the final decision in placing the retarded "should be left entirely to the parents or legal guardians."

Citizens Committee Attacks Utilities Costs

Water and electricity rates in Lincoln almost took the route Tuesday night of the infamous tea in Boston Harbor 200 years ago.

Overboard! Along with the city charter and a few elected officials.

Talk of the dunking came at a public organizational meeting of nearly 200 people interested in the Lincoln Citizens Committee (LCC), a group which, according to acting chairman Ralph Reed, 3021 Stratford, was originally formed to "protect citizens from increases beyond reason in utility rates."

The environs of the nearly-packed Gateway Auditorium took on a Bicentennial flavor as Lincoln businessman Roy Billings and Lincoln Electric System legal counsel Norm Kirvosha exchanged words about what Billings called, "taxation without representation," after Krivosha explained the theory behind revenue bonds which the Lincoln Electric System sells to obtain operating capital.

Krivosha, a member of the Charter Revision Commission, the appointed body which annually reviews proposals for amendments to the charger, was granted a leave of absence from the commission which was meeting across town at the same time.

His initial remarks came during discussion of a motion to have the LCC legal counsel, Miles Johnston, draw up a petition to call a convention to perform an unprecedented complete revision of the city charter.

The petition drive, urged by Reed and co-chairman Clarence Williams, 1921 Monterrey Drive, was welcomed with applause and some positive response before Jack Singer, 4631 Claire Ave., asked if anybody in the room knew what the present charter said.

"I bet there aren't five people here right now who can tell me what it says, or if it has been abused."

During the ensuing silence in the audience, Krivosha said "the present charter is broad enough to accomplish the things you want to do." In addition, he noted the tremendous cost of a special election and defended the make-up of the present charter revision commission as being "as fair a cross-section of people as you could draw from this crowd tonight."

Then Billings took the floor and asked for an alternate proposal which he explained after Reed called for the original question and saw the measure defeated.

Billings' proposal called for a 10-member committee to "get the facts behind the costs of operation and the reasons behind the proposed rate increases of all publicly owned utilities."

Reed and LCC committee member Nate Beezley, 846 Mulder Drive, will screen a group of volunteers and announce the names of the investigative committee later this week.

The report of the committee, with special emphasis on the LES and the water department rate increases, will be received at the next meeting of the group Feb. 18 Reed said.

Ford Cutting Military Aid

Washington (AP) — President Ford said Tuesday that he was trimming the military aid budget 28 per cent in fiscal 1977 over the prior year but said it would be a mistake to end such aid completely

In a message to Congress, Ford said he was following their direction to review and reassess military aid with a view toward reducing or ending nonessential programs.

He reported that "grant material assistance" to Korea was being ended under the new budget as well as five small grant programs in Latin America, and that there were indications that additional cutbacks could be made for 1978.

While making some concessions to Congress' mandates in the Foreign Assistance Act passed in December 1974, Ford said there was "need for consistency and continuity" in American foreign policy and that he believes grant military aid in some form would remain a basic requirement.

Subcompacts Outsell Larger Cars By 2-1

DETROIT (AP) — The American driving public, which grew up behind the wheel of a roomy full-size family auto, is now purchasing four-passenger cars over the big models by nearly a 2-1 margin.

Last year, 2.8 million persons bought subcompact cars or minicars — vehicles no bigger than a Ford Pinto or Chevrolet Vega. That represents about a third of all the new cars sold in this country, including imports, during 1975.

By contrast, just under 1.5 million persons bought standard six-passenger cars: Chevrolets, Fords, Plymouths, Buicks and other models of similar size which once were the backbone of the U.S. auto industry.

The meteoric growth of little cars is all the more remarkable considering Detroit didn't even build an auto to seat four or fewer persons until 1969, when the first of the subcompacts went on sale.

But last year 2.1 million subcompact cars — the Chevy Vega, Ford Pinto, American Motors' Gremlin — were sold.

Now the American companies are rushing smaller-than-subcompact cars, called minicars, onto the market to meet a burgeoning demand for low prices and high gasoline mileage.

The little-car boom took off in 1973, when consumer worries about inflation and the subsequent Mideast oil embargo created an overnight demand for a size vehicle that Detroit used to call a fringe market.

"If you asked me two years ago if there was a market for minicars in this country, I'd have said 'forget it,'" one industry analyst said. "Now the industry is selling close to one minicar for every two full-size cars. That's unbelievable."

Sen. Richard Maresh of Milligan produced a bill to apply the sales tax to gasoline purchases, with revenue allocated for road and street construction.

$1,000 Ceiling

The three-pronged Lewis tax plan would revise the personal property tax relief plan this year to place a $1,000 ceiling on exemptions for any taxpayer.

That proposal was contained in LB914.

The other bills, LB850 and LB851, would freeze the exemption level at 37½% in 1977, and limit state reimbursements to local government to $33 million a year.

Legislature stories on Pages 11, 12, 13

Without such a freeze, the exemption is scheduled to rise over the next two years from 37½% to 62½%.

Estimated cost for reimbursements in the coming fiscal year under the rising rate of exemption is $42 million.

The Maresh tax proposal, contained in LB863, would distribute gasoline sales tax revenue on a basis of 53 1/3% to the state, 23 1/3% to the counties and 23 1/3% to the cities.

$13.5 Annually

The state sales tax would produce an estimated $13.5 million in annual revenue, Maresh said.

The bill also would apply the 1% city sales tax in Omaha, Lincoln and Bellevue to motor vehicle fuels, with the revenue retained by the cities.

Tuesday's deluge also included two more bills relating to medical malpractice insurance problems, a measure to repeal the general state prohibition against sale of liquor on Sunday and a proposal which would require recipients of unemployment benefits to perform public service jobs.

Veterans Home

Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood authored the latter proposal, LB924, along with a bill (LB927) to purchase the John F. Kennedy College facilities at Wahoo for a state veterans home.

Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh introduced LB931, ending the ban on Sunday sale of liquor in Nebraska.

Other DeCamp bills would abolish all state agencies in 1980 unless a legislative study found some or all were necessary, and provide for Public Service Commission regulation of gas rates.

Such a proposal would require a vote of the people to amend the constitution.

Retarded's Parents Ask Appeal Route

In addition, he noted the tremendous cost of a special election and defended the make-up of the present charter revision commission as being "as fair a cross-section of people as you could draw from this crowd tonight."

Then Billings took the floor and asked for an alternate proposal which he explained after Reed called for the original question and saw the measure defeated.

Billings' proposal called for a 10-member committee to "get the facts behind the costs of operation and the reasons behind the proposed rate increases of all publicly owned utilities."

Reed and LCC committee member Nate Beezley, 846 Mulder Drive, will screen a group of volunteers and announce the names of the investigative committee later this week.

The report of the committee, with special emphasis on the LES and the water department rate increases, will be received at the next meeting of the group Feb. 18 Reed said.

Ford Cutting Military Aid

Washington (AP) — President Ford said Tuesday that he was trimming the military aid budget 28 per cent in fiscal 1977 over the prior year but said it would be a mistake to end such aid completely.

In a message to Congress, Ford said he was following their direction to review and reassess military aid with a view toward reducing or ending nonessential programs.

He reported that "grant material assistance" to Korea was being ended under the new budget as well as five small grant programs in Latin America, and that there were indications that additional cutbacks could be made for 1978.

While making some concessions to Congress' mandates in the Foreign Assistance Act passed in December 1974, Ford said there was "need for consistency and continuity" in American foreign policy and that he believes grant military aid in some form would remain a basic requirement.

Subcompacts Outsell Larger Cars By 2-1

DETROIT (AP) — The American driving public, which grew up behind the wheel of a roomy full-size family auto, is now purchasing four-passenger cars over the big models by nearly a 2-1 margin.

Last year, 2.8 million persons bought subcompact cars or minicars — vehicles no bigger than a Ford Pinto or Chevrolet Vega. That represents about a third of all the new cars sold in this country, including imports, during 1975.

By contrast, just under 1.5 million persons bought standard six-passenger cars: Chevrolets, Fords, Plymouths, Buicks and other models of similar size which once were the backbone of the U.S. auto industry.

The meteoric growth of little cars is all the more remarkable considering Detroit didn't even build an auto to seat four or fewer persons until 1969, when the first of the subcompacts went on sale.

But last year 2.1 million subcompact cars — the Chevy Vega, Ford Pinto, American Motors' Gremlin — were sold.

Now the American companies are rushing smaller-than-subcompact cars, called minicars, onto the market to meet a burgeoning demand for low prices and high gasoline mileage.

The little-car boom took off in 1973, when consumer worries about inflation and the subsequent Mideast oil embargo created an overnight demand for a size vehicle that Detroit used to call a fringe market.

"If you asked me two years ago if there was a market for minicars in this country, I'd have said 'forget it,'" one industry analyst said. "Now the industry is selling close to one minicar for every two full-size cars. That's unbelievable."

IRS Begins Reaudit Of Nixon Tax Returns

©The New York Times

Washington — The Internal Revenue Service has begun a reaudit of former President Richard M. Nixon's tax returns for the years in which he claimed a $450,000 deduction for the gift of his vice presidential papers to the National Archives, to determine if he is liable for fraud penalties, according to sources familiar with the matter.

These sources, both in and out of government, said the pardon granted by President Ford protects Nixon from being prosecuted for tax fraud or any other criminal action while he was serving in the White House. But, these sources said, the IRS reaudit is aimed at determining whether the agency should assess fraud penalties against Nixon in connection with the conspiracy to backdate documents in claiming the deduction.

Ralph G. Newman, a literary scholar whose appraisal of the value of the vice presidential papers provided the basis for the deduction, was convicted and fined earlier this month on charges of lying to the IRS and preparing a false affidavit in connection with the backdating.

Edward L. Morgan, a former Treasury Department and White House aide, pleaded guilty in 1974 to tax fraud conspiracy in the case and served four months in prison. The Watergate special prosecutors charged and brought Nixon's tax lawyer, Frank DeMarco, to trial, but he was acquitted of similar charges.

The purpose of the reaudit, the sources said, is to determine whether Nixon was aware of or involved in the effort to backdate documents that made it possible for him to claim a tax deduction for donating the vice presidential papers to the archives.

If the IRS determined that Nixon was aware of or involved in an attempt to defraud the agency it could assess a 50% fraud penalty for 1969, 1970, 1971 and 1972. These were the years in which Nixon claimed the tax deduction. There is no statute of limitations on civil fraud cases, according to tax authorities.

When the backdating of the deed of Nixon's vice presidential papers became known, Nixon lost the $450,000 deduction for the gift.

Nixon paid additional taxes for 1970, 1971 and 1972. He was also assessed a 5% negligence penalty. His additional tax bill came to some $282,000.

He was also found to be deficient $148,080 for 1969. He pledged to pay this amount — there was no negligence penalty involved — but to date there is no indication that the bill has been paid.

If a fraud penalty were to be assessed for the four years it could cost Nixon as much as $175,000, plus interest, one source said.

Nixon's lawyers declined to comment on the report of the reaudit, as did a spokesman for the IRS, which routinely refuses to discuss any individual's tax return.

Plot Case To Be Shut

©The New York Times

Washington — Justice Department lawyers reviewing CIA activities have concluded that no grounds exist for a federal prosecution of CIA officials involved in plots to assassinate foreign heads of state, a spokesman said Tuesday.

Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi has been advised of the conclusions reached by lawyers in the criminal division and is expected to concur with their recommendation that the case be closed, spokesman Robert Havel said.

The decision that the plots — directed against Premier Fidel Castro of Cuba and the late Congolese Premier Patrice Lumumba — amounted to "a dry hole," as one department source put it, narrows considerably the scope of the investigation of CIA operations and past and present officials.

Rita Hayworth, 57, Half-Carried Off Jet

London (UPI) — Actress Rita Hayworth, Hollywood's red-haired "love goddess" of the 1940s, was half-carried off a transatlantic jet disheveled, distressed and waving her arms in protest, airline employes said Tuesday.

The incident at Heathrow Airport Monday followed what witnesses called rowdy behavior by Miss Hayworth, 57, who refused to leave her first class seat after the Trans World Airlines 747 arrived from Los Angeles.

The actress, whose five marriages — among them to crooner Dick Haymes, actor-director Orson Welles and playboy Prince Ali Khan — all ended in divorce, "did not drink on the plane," according to one of her entourage.

"She is just exhausted."

But others told reporters a different story.

"Miss Hayworth had been drinking when she boarded the plane and had several free drinks on the flight," a TWA stewardess was quoted as saying. "She made a bit of a nuisance of herself."

"She started shouting and waving her arms about," an unidentified airline official said. "She did not want to leave the plane."

"There was a bit of shouting going on and whether she was drunk, we don't know," a Frenchwoman said. "But she looked very ill."

Miss Hayworth finally left by the rear door after a woman from her party used the front in an unsuccessful effort to decoy waiting cameramen.

The actress, whose long-limbed charms promoted her from the chorus line to leads in movies such as "Gilda" and "Blood and Sand," was photographed as airline officials held her up, her long red hair flopping over her face in untidy strands.

Television company officials who invited Miss Hayworth to London for an interview show said Tuesday the actress "seems fine" and was "looking forward to the program" to be taped Thursday.

"She's not anxious to speak to the press," one TV official said.

The actress, born Margarita Carmeno Cansino in New York City Oct. 27, 1918, the daughter of a Spanish vaudeville dancer and a Ziegfeld chorus girl, told reporters at the height of her career, "A girl is . . . well, a girl. "It's nice to know that one is good at it."

Kozol Tests Patty

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A psychiatrist for the prosecution whose probing brought complaints from Patricia Hearst met with the jailed heiress for a second time Tuesday and conducted a lengthy examination.

Dr. Harry Kozol of Boston examined Miss Hearst for about four hours with a brief pause for lunch, a jail spokesman said.

Miss Hearst's lawyer, Albert Johnson, was at the jail throughout the examination and it appeared he and partner F. Lee Bailey had dropped previous protests to a second meeting between Kozol and Miss Hearst.

Miss Hearst is under a court order to cooperate with Kozol.

The newspaper heiress complained last week that Kozol harassed her to the point of hysteria during their first meeting. Her attorneys asked that the psychiatrist be barred from talking to her further.

However, U.S. District Judge Oliver J. Carter ruled there was no evidence of any misconduct by Kozol and ordered Miss Hearst to cooperate.

Another hearing on the matter is scheduled for Wednesday. Johnson has promised to present "newly discovered evidence" then which will challenge Kozol's qualifications to examine Miss Hearst.

China Charges Russians Plotting To Plunder Africa

TOKYO (AP) — China accused the Soviet Union on Tuesday of plotting to control Africa and its natural resources in order to increase its economic strength for a power struggle with the United States.

It said "the Soviet revisionists' open provocation of the civil war in Angola and intervention in African internal affairs . . . have unveiled their wild ambitions to step up expansion, plunder and domination of Africa."

The accusation was contained in an article in the People's Daily, the newspaper of China's Communist party. Its publication coincided with the visit to Moscow by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Peking's Hsinhua news agency broadcast the text that said, "The new czars have long cast a covetous eye over a chunk of rich meat — strategically important Africa with enormous natural resources."

In the broadcast monitored in Tokyo, Peking said industrial cooperation "preached by the Soviet social-imperialists is but a means to facilitate their expansion into and control of African countries.

"It means that the Soviet Union is to provide the money, equipment and technique, while African countries offer the manpower, natural resources and goods, semifinished or otherwise."

"Facts show that through 'industrial cooperation,' the new czars want to plunder and control the mineral resources of the African countries in the course of production," the broadcast said, "so as to add to their economic strength in their contention for hegemony with U.S. imperialism."

Cases Can't Be Returned To Speedier State Courts

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that federal judges may not return cases to state courts for trial except on the narrow grounds spelled out in federal law.

By a 5-3 vote the justices rebuffed a judge in Kentucky who sent an automobile accident case back to a state court on grounds it could be tried sooner there.

"That justice may move more slowly in some federal courts than in their state counterparts is not one of the considerations that Congress has permitted the district courts to recognize," Justice Byron R. White wrote for the court.

Justice William H. Rehnquist, speaking for the dissenters, said the court's decision would permit persons involved in lawsuits to "substantially delay justice" by insisting on federal court trial.

Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justice Potter Stewart joined him in the dissent.

The State Of The Message

The purpose of a president's annual message, or "State of the Union" message as it is now known, to congress is to issue a report card on the past year and chart a course for the future. In an election year, the message takes on other shades.

President Gerald Ford took care of Part One of the purpose Monday night by neatly summing up the state of our union as better than this time last year "but not good enough." That had an honest ring to it, it was plainly spoken and we liked it.

In charting a course for 1976, Ford naturally enough got mixed up in politics. Because even more than in any other year, a state of the union address in a presidential election year when the White House, the entire U.S. House of Representatives and a third of the Senate is up for grabs, is going to be a patently political speech. Could it be otherwise among mortals?

President Ford did not defy expectations. He poked at Reagan here, jabbed at Congress there, spoke fondly and protectively of "my programs," and produced generalities by the basketful. Only when specifics are outlined — for example, where the budget should be cut — will the generalities have any meaning at all. And the President in his eagerness to block Reagan on the right, ignored the obvious — as in his anti-crime suggestions. Unemployment and the proliferation of hand guns are major causes of crime and the President spoke against effective gun control and treated the subject of jobs as if it were a minor concern.

So it was basically a political speech; more aptly called a "state of the polls" speech than a state of the union. Nobody in their right minds thinks Congress and Ford will join together during an election year and adopt the President's programs and ideas of how to begin the third century. It is all so much talk. But it has to be said for the record we guess.

On the plus side for Ford, it was a strong, basic, conservative speech well delivered. It was one of his better efforts. He was in command of the speech all the way, although Ford, oratorically speaking is no Roosevelt. But there hasn't been a great presidential orator since Roosevelt. Only Kennedy approached greatness in that regard. Still, it must be honestly said that Ford is mastering the style of talking to a national audience.

The best part of the speech in our opinion, however, were the platitudes and the quotations from other great Americans with which all presidential speeches are sprinkled.

Ford's "better than last year, but not good enough" was fine. So was his Lincoln quote: "Right makes might," and his Eisenhower quote: "America is not good because it's great, but great because it's good."

That's the kind of stuff in a state of the union speech people can believe. Of everything else, they're skeptical.

As Iowa Goes. . .

The first big test of the early presidential election season is over with "uncommitted" ahead in the Iowa Democratic delegate race and President Ford barely hanging on in a straw poll among Iowa Republicans attending party caucuses Monday night.

At this stage of the game, the results of the Iowa neighborhood political meetings probably have as much lasting significance as Ford's State of the Union message.

But people persist in seeing trends, and perhaps the Iowa delegate selection process has given birth to patterns which will become stronger as the primary schedule unfolds. Perhaps.

First it should be pointed out that the elements of the media who had tried prior to Monday night to end the candidacies of several Democrats and the President had their published predictions shot down by the results. Former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter ran strong at the end. According to a number of observers, he was supposedly tailing off in recent days, hurt by alleged inconsistencies in campaign statements and his lack of name recognition. Carter defied those experts and was preferred by 28% of the Iowa Democrats caucusing Monday night — twice the percentage of runner-up Birch Bayh. Some in the media had also declared Morris Udall politically dead, but he did better than expected, as did Fred Harris.

Some experts had also predicted that Ronald Reagan was coming on so strong that Ford would suffer from a humiliating showing in the GOP straw poll. Reagan did come on strong, but the President edged him out.

Perhaps the most interesting signal broadcast from Iowa, however, was that 37% of the delegates elected to Democratic county conventions, the next step in the delegate selection process, were not committed to any candidate. Read that, if you will, either as extreme caution or true confusion. More likely, however, Hubert Humphrey is the first preference of most of those uncommitted and it does, indeed, indicate that the Democratic convention next summer could be deadlocked before a call goes out to the old pro.

The Iowa caucus didn't solve anything, of course. It suggests that just as preprimary speculation can be all wet, so one shouldn't place too much emphasis on the votes tabulated after the meetings were over.

Exhibition Of Rudeness

Lincoln, Neb.

Whenever I feel compassion for the so-called minority, something happens to make me wonder.

I refer to the three young black women, ages 18 to 20, who shoved themselves into a taxicab ahead of an old white woman who had been waiting for the cab at the Greyhound bus station about 6:30 Friday evening.

Incidentally, the station agent had called the cab for the elderly lady.

The Right To Life

Schuyler, Neb.

Jan. 22 is a tragic American anniversary. In 1973 the Supreme Court legalized abortion on demand. In this Bicentennial Year of 1976, we Americans are constantly reminded of our American heritage. Certainly sanctity for human life is the basis of this heritage. What good does it do to speak of human rights when the right to life is not recognized as inalienable and fundamental?

Read the Declaration of Independence. Abortion on demand reduces the value of human life to somebody's whim. All reliable medical testimony says that human life begins at conception. We should do all we can to insure that human life is sacred.

We should write our congressmen, sign petitions, picket, write letters to newspapers and write the numerous presidential candidates this year. Untold numbers are gone so far.

Point System Revisions

Columbus, Neb.

I dispute the difference in penalties between first and second revocations regarding the Nebraska point system for driving.

During the last session of the Nebraska Legislature, a bill was passed changing the revocation time from one year to six months for first-time offenders. Why wasn't a corresponding change in revocation time made for second-time offenders? I think the oversight is ridiculous. The latter of the two should also have been changed from three years to no more than a year and a half. This would have been consistent with the previous three-to-one ratio and therefore an appropriate move. Especially in cases where the individual has never been charged with drunken driving or reckless driving. I also think intoxicated and reckless drivers deserve a more severe second penalty. Maybe two years.

It's time a proper evaluation is made with proportional importance and fairness given to the component parts of this matter.

Breaker! Breaker! Nebraska senators, do you copy?

Reagan Plan: Substance And Spirit

WASHINGTON — Only six weeks after he briefly Galluped out in front of Gerald Ford, Ronald Reagan is being effectively depth-charged by Ford administration officials and journalists who criticize the alleged superficiality of his plan to cut the federal budget by $90 billion and shift many programs back to the states.

It remains to be seen whether Reagan will go the way of Barry Goldwater, George Romney and George McGovern, previous presidential candidates who found themselves stranded on the shallows of insufficiently thought-out remarks. But there is an additional dimension to the $90 billion budget cut debate.

Back in September, when Reagan first offered his scheme, this column expressed doubt about its substance but cheered its spirit. Now I find myself agreeing with the substance of many of the criticisms, but I regret their spirit.

It is a sad day when journalists lambast proposals to cut back the size of the federal government — a goal with which most Americans concur — while totally ignoring the records chalked up by opposition presidential candidates who have advocated increasing the federal governmental role by $90 or $100 billion. An unfortunate double standard is taking shape. Those who criticize Reagan's cures for bureaucracy and runaway federal spending should also examine the slapdash ideas of politicians who have advocated more federal bureaucracy, spending and programming.

Consider: Two and a half years ago, a young group of college and graduate students, calling themselves the Libertarian Task Force, spent many exhausting weeks analyzing the records of the members of the U.S. Senate in the 92nd Congress (1971-72). They did what few persons have bothered to do — they compiled "Fiscal Impact Ratings" including the cost of all the new legislative proposals introduced or co-sponsored by senators during the two years of that Congress.

The results were and are revealing. Back in 1971-72, many of the men now running for president were proposing massive increases in federal programming and spending. During the 92nd Congress, Indiana Senator Birch Bayh introduced legislation calling for $25.1 billion worth of new programs. Scoop Jackson's total came to $11 billion. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, relatively conservative, proposed only $6.3 billion. Then there's Edward Kennedy, who introduced $83.7 billion worth of new spending proposals. Edmund Muskie edged him with $95 billion, but the clear, runaway winner — the man whose "politics of joy" often shades into the economics of insolvency — is Hubert Horatio Humphrey. The ebullient Minnesotan introduced or co-sponsored a staggering $109 billion in new federal program proposals.

Unfortunately, no one seems to be analyzing this record. The past $90 and $100 billion budget increment ideas of Messrs. Humphrey, Muskie and Kennedy are nowhere under fire. Nobody is calculating what impact their 1971-72 schemes would have had on taxes, inflation, deficits or interest rates. And their 1973-75 legislative proposals have not to my knowledge been catalogued or costed out. Yet those policies have important economic implications.

Moreover, the specific objectives do not seem to merit such an inflationary increase in federal outlays. Among Senator Humphrey's 92nd Congress proposals, for example, were an Urban Parkland Corporation ($1 billion), a $59 billion health program, a $2 billion increase in aid to the mentally retarded, $10 billion for public service employment, a $15.2 billion "National Education Investment Act", and a $2.7 billion increase in civil service annuities, as well as many other lesser additions and increases. Alas, as of 1976, the Minnesota senator continues to believe that federal spending is a cure for everything but warts.

Even if Ronald Reagan's program has major deficiencies, it makes at least as much sense (and certainly has more of the right spirit) as the continuing proclivity of other candidates to increase rather than decrease federal outlays. Updated fiscal impact ratings should be prepared for all senators. Their mentality, not Reagan's, has gotten the United States in its present economic pickle.

So, How About Some Useful Info?

NEW YORK — The publication by certain European papers of names, home addresses and telephone numbers of resident CIA people in France and England raises very awkward questions of journalistic ethics, quite apart from Washington's charge that it is an invitation to murder.

No one who believes in the First Amendment can argue plausibly against a press' right to publish such data, and consequences be damned. Once it starts publishing these lists, however, elementary fairness demands that it plunge on and give us addresses and phone numbers, not only of CIA people, but of all those others in hundreds of lines of work whom the public would like to hound in the night.

If CIA people are to have phone numbers and addresses in the public domain, why not KGB people? Why not people working for the French and British secret services? Sound journalistic principle insists upon it.

The French newspaper, Liberation, which published one of the CIA lists, retreats into sophistry to explain why it did not run a similar list of Soviet KGB agents in Paris. If it knew who they were, it would expose them, it says, but in any case everyone assumes that everybody attached to the Soviet Embassy is suspect.

This is a confession of laziness which no American editor would dare make. If Liberation does not know who the KGB men in Paris are, surely the CIA does. It should take little journalistic guile to pry the information out of the CIA. Not for nothing is it known as the world's most public secret agency.

Is it worth publishing such data? Aside from the sport of baiting the spy crowd, it seems to have only small nuisance value. A Frenchman can now telephone a CIA man at his home at 3 a.m. and tell him his French is barbaric, but how many Frenchmen have nothing better to do at that time of night?

If the CIA truly thinks its people are endangered, it will presumably pull them all out and replace them with new agents under deeper cover, which is a nuisance but not a calamity.

Imagine a reversed situation in Washington, with the newspapers listing names, telephone numbers and addresses of Soviet agents around town. What service could this possibly do the American reader?

Washington and every other American city is swarming with people whose addresses and phone numbers most readers would much prefer to the addresses and phone numbers of the local spies. Most of these people live under cover just as deep as the average CIA agent in Paris, hiding behind unlisted phone numbers and office addresses which turn out to be no more than mail drops guarded by impassable receptionists.

A newspaper that tells you how to reach the KGB man at home on Saturday night has an equal obligation to inform its readers how to get hold of his senator and congressman, the secretary of state and the president of the local electric utility.

These people are supposed to be public servants. A press that assumes a duty to promote invasions of privacy can hardly draw the line in their favor simply because they do not happen to be Soviet spies.

I can scarcely conceive of circumstances in which I would want to call up a Soviet spy, or go knocking at his door at dinnertime. There are moments in the night, however, when I would desperately like to ring up Sen. Kennedy or Secretary Kissinger and give each a piece of my mind, or drop by their houses just at bedtime and ask them what in heaven's name they thought they were up to.

And what about newspaper people? The world is filled with people who would like to know where the editor lives so they could throw eggs at his window, like to know his home telephone number so they could ring him just before dawn and tell him what they think of his paper.

Disclosure is acceptable under the First Amendment — which is not widely observed in Europe, unfortunately — but if there is to be any disclosure of this kind of information, there must be full disclosure, or the journalistic obligation is betrayed.

If invasion of privacy of public men is to be promoted by the press, it can be justified only by making it equally easy to invade the privacy of important public men as it is to barge in on some lower-drawer Russian spy during his off hours.

If the French and British press seriously intend to serve their publics, let them move ahead from encouraging the commission of nuisances against inconsequential secret agents and start telling the British and French some truly helpful information. Prime Minister Wilson's weekend phone number. Where to locate Giscard d'Estaing between midnight and 2 a.m. Where to find the Concorde's creators for a dinnertime confrontation.

Publishing the CIA lists, they have satisfied no urgent public need in Europe, but merely forced the CIA to start moving its people around again, which will cost American taxpayers a sweet piece of money.

They indulge themselves in a meaningless but self-satisfying gesture, and we pay the bill. It might be worth it if they now get up their courage to do their countrymen some service with some truly useful disclosures. If not — we pay the bill anyhow.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE

The Markdown On Feminine Worth

NEW YORK — What's getting gray around the edges . . creaks louder than the mattress when she makes the bed . . and just got marked down $1,604 on the home labor market?

Answer: me.

And you, too, if you've reached that certain age statisticians (male, no doubt) use as the cut-off point after which a wife isn't worth much, economically, around the house.

When it comes to figuring a price tag for sweeping, dusting and child-chasing, we who prefer to think of ourselves as "mature" can't hold an apron to the junior members of the club.

Those peppy young things reach their peak value (to their husbands, presumable, since the boys who compute the GNP don't include housewives) between the ages of 25 and 29, when their market value is $6,417 a year.

That (try not to laugh, now) is what a Social Security team, using 1972 data, figure it would cost to hire someone to do what a young mother does for free.

When she hits 30, as if that weren't traumatic enough, her market value slips just a buck. From 35 to 39, she's worth $5,892, but in her early 40's her services suddenly go up $16. They don't explain why.

From 44 on, it's all downhill. And there's one age group there when Old Mom's value plummets from $5,222 to $3,618 the minute she blows out her birthday candles. Never mind how many.

In her 70's they discount her from $1,802 to $1,090 and in her 80's she's a cute-rate $359.

Grim, isn't it? But if those economists think they're going to get any complaints from this corner, they're mistaken. I'm with them all the way. I even suggest that they didn't go far enough.

Not only am I worth less to Old Dad these days, I cost more. And so do most of us "girls" who have raised and educated the kids and shoved them out of the nest. Now it's our turn.

I haven't been marked down because I've broken down. I've been marked down because I've quit.

Back in our struggling years I did the ironing and waxing and polishing and sewing. Now I send the shirts out and use that free time for writing and tennis. The house gets cleaned when company's coming. The rest of the time I ignore it until our shoes start sticking to the floor.

And I'd fire a cook who spent as little time as I do in the kitchen. But middle-aged waistlines don't need cakes and cookies and casseroles with cream. Broiled meat, salad and fruit — that's dinner.

There's another reason we old gals run up more bills than we used to: we're getting too fragile — or too smart — to tackle the tough jobs our "old boys" won't do any more, either.

There was a time when, if Old Dad needed an extra hand, I'd grab a snow shovel and clear the driveway. Or rake the leaves. Paint the living room, even.

Now he's too busy with corporate capers to bother with grubby chores like that. So I make a phone call and let George (or Bob or Joe) do it. And sometimes they even get it right.

Twenty years ago there wasn't enough stretch in the budget to cover airline tickets to foreign lands. The cost of a babysitter alone would have paid for a new washing machine, so guess what we bought? I tend to smile (okay, chortle) over that often as I pack my shiny new luggage to go poking around the world.

And when Old Dad goes berserk in a jewelry store the week before Christmas, do I tell him he shouldn't have? You know better. I figure it's my due . . as an old family retainer.

So I'm not insulted over my bargain-basement rating just because I'm getting along. I look upon it as early retirement.

And the fringes are fabulous.

The purpose of a president's annual message, or "State of the Union" message as it is now known, to congress is to issue a report card on the past year and chart a course for the future. In an election year, the message takes on other shades.

President Gerald Ford took care of Part One of the purpose Monday night by neatly summing up the state of our union as better than this time last year "but not good enough." That had an honest ring to it, it was plainly spoken and we liked it.

In charting a course for 1976, Ford naturally enough got mixed up in politics. Because even more than in any other year, a state of the union address in a presidential election year when the White House, the entire U.S. House of Representatives and a third of the Senate is up for grabs, is going to be a patently political speech. Could it be otherwise among mortals?

President Ford did not defy expectations. He poked at Reagan here, jabbed at Congress there, spoke fondly and protectively of "my programs," and produced generalities by the basketful. Only when specifics are outlined — for example, where the budget should be cut — will the generalities have any meaning at all. And the President in his eagerness to block Reagan on the right, ignored the obvious — as in his anti-crime suggestions. Unemployment and the proliferation of hand guns are major causes of crime and the President spoke against effective gun control and treated the subject of jobs as if it were a minor concern.

So it was basically a political speech; more aptly called a "state of the polls" speech than a state of the union. Nobody in their right minds thinks Congress and Ford will join together during an election year and adopt the President's programs and ideas of how to begin the third century. It is all so much talk. But it has to be said for the record we guess.

On the plus side for Ford, it was a strong, basic, conservative speech well delivered. It was one of his better efforts. He was in command of the speech all the way, although Ford, oratorically speaking is no Roosevelt. But there hasn't been a great presidential orator since Roosevelt. Only Kennedy approached greatness in that regard. Still, it must be honestly said that Ford is mastering the style of talking to a national audience.

The best part of the speech in our opinion, however, were the platitudes and the quotations from other great Americans with which all presidential speeches are sprinkled.

Ford's "better than last year, but not good enough" was fine. So was his Lincoln quote: "Right makes might," and his Eisenhower quote: "America is not good because it's great, but great because it's good."

That's the kind of stuff in a state of the union speech people can believe. Of everything else, they're skeptical.

As Iowa Goes. . .

The first big test of the early presidential election season is over with "uncommitted" ahead in the Iowa Democratic delegate race and President Ford barely hanging on in a straw poll among Iowa Republicans attending party caucuses Monday night.

At this stage of the game, the results of the Iowa neighborhood political meetings probably have as much lasting significance as Ford's State of the Union message.

But people persist in seeing trends, and perhaps the Iowa delegate selection process has given birth to patterns which will become stronger as the primary schedule unfolds. Perhaps.

First it should be pointed out that the elements of the media who had tried prior to Monday night to end the candidacies of several Democrats and the President had their published predictions shot down by the results. Former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter ran strong at the end. According to a number of observers, he was supposedly tailing off in recent days, hurt by alleged inconsistencies in campaign statements and his lack of name recognition. Carter defied those experts and was preferred by 28% of the Iowa Democrats caucusing Monday night — twice the percentage of runner-up Birch Bayh. Some in the media had also declared Morris Udall politically dead, but he did better than expected, as did Fred Harris.

Some experts had also predicted that Ronald Reagan was coming on so strong that Ford would suffer from a humiliating showing in the GOP straw poll. Reagan did come on strong, but the President edged him out.

Perhaps the most interesting signal broadcast from Iowa, however, was that 37% of the delegates elected to Democratic county conventions, the next step in the delegate selection process, were not committed to any candidate. Read that, if you will, either as extreme caution or true confusion. More likely, however, Hubert Humphrey is the first preference of most of those uncommitted and it does, indeed, indicate that the Democratic convention next summer could be deadlocked before a call goes out to the old pro.

The Iowa caucus didn't solve anything, of course. It suggests that just as pre-primary speculation can be all wet, so one shouldn't place too much emphasis on the votes tabulated after the meetings were over.

Exhibition Of Rudeness

Lincoln, Neb.

Whenever I feel compassion for the so-called minority, something happens to make me wonder.

I refer to the three young black women, ages 18 to 20, who shoved themselves into a taxicab ahead of an old white woman who had been waiting for the cab at the Greyhound bus station about 6:30 Friday evening.

Incidentally, the station agent had called the cab for the elderly lady.

The Right To Life

Schuyler, Neb.

Jan. 22 is a tragic American anniversary. In 1973 the Supreme Court legalized abortion on demand. In this Bicentennial Year of 1976, we Americans are constantly reminded of our American heritage. Certainly sanctity for human life is the basis of this heritage. What good does it do to speak of human rights when the right to life is not recognized as inalienable and fundamental?

Read the Declaration of Independence. Abortion on demand reduces the value of human life to somebody's whim. All reliable medical testimony says that human life begins at conception. We should do all we can to insure that human life is sacred.

We should write our congressmen, sign petitions, picket, write letters to newspapers and write the numerous presidential candidates this year. Untold numbers are gone so far.

Point System Revisions

Columbus, Neb.

I dispute the difference in penalties between first and second revocations regarding the Nebraska point system for driving.

During the last session of the Nebraska Legislature, a bill was passed changing the revocation time from one year to six months for first-time offenders. Why wasn't a corresponding change in revocation time made for second-time offenders? I think the oversight is ridiculous. The latter of the two should also have been changed from three years to no more than a year and a half. This would have been consistent with the previous three-to-one ratio and therefore an appropriate move. Especially in cases where the individul has never been charged with drunken driving or reckless driving. I also think intoxicated and reckless drivers deserve a more severe second penalty. Maybe two years.

It's time a proper evaluation is made with proportional importance and fairness given to the component parts of this matter.

Breaker! Breaker! Nebraska senators, do you copy?

Reagan Plan: Substance And Spirit

WASHINGTON — Only six weeks after he briefly Galluped out in front of Gerald Ford, Ronald Reagan is being effectively depth-charged by Ford administration officials and journalists who criticize the alleged superficiality of his plan to cut the federal budget by $90 billion and shift many programs back to the states.

It remains to be seen whether Reagan will go the way of Barry Goldwater, George Romney and George McGovern, previous presidential candidates who found themselves stranded on the shallows of insufficiently thought-out remarks. But there is an additional dimension to the $90 billion budget cut debate.

Back in September, when Reagan first offered his scheme, this column expressed doubt about its substance but cheered its spirit. Now I find myself agreeing with the substance of many of the criticisms, but I regret their spirit.

It is a sad day when journalists lambast proposals to cut back the size of the federal government — a goal with which most Americans concur — while totally ignoring the records chalked up by opposition presidential candidates who have advocated increasing the federal governmental role by $90 or $100 billion. An unfortunate double standard is taking shape. Those who criticize Reagan's cures for bureaucracy and runaway federal spending should also examine the slapdash ideas of politicians who have advocated more federal bureaucracy, spending and programming.

Consider: Two and a half years ago, a young group of college and graduate students, calling themselves the Libertarian Task Force, spent many exhausting weeks analyzing the records of the members of the U.S. Senate in the 92nd Congress (1971-72). They did what few persons have bothered to do — they compiled "Fiscal Impact Ratings" including the cost of all the new legislative proposals introduced or co-sponsored by senators during the two years of that Congress.

The results were and are revealing. Back in 1971-72, many of the men now running for president were proposing massive increases in federal programming and spending. During the 92nd Congress, Indiana Senator Birch Bayh introduced legislation calling for $25.1 billion worth of new programs. Scoop Jackson's total came to $11 billion. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas, relatively conservative, proposed only $6.3 billion. Then there's Edward Kennedy, who introduced $83.7 billion worth of new spending proposals. Edmund Muskie edged him with $95 billion, but the clear, runaway winner — the man whose "politics of joy" often shades into the economics of insolvency — is Hubert Horatio Humphrey. The ebullient Minnesotan introduced or co-sponsored a staggering $109 billion in new federal program proposals.

Unfortunately, no one seems to be analyzing this record. The past $90 and $100 billion budget increment ideas of Messrs. Humphrey, Muskie and Kennedy are nowhere under fire. Nobody is calculating what impact their 1971-72 schemes would have had on taxes, inflation, deficits or interest rates. And their 1973-75 legislative proposals have not to my knowledge been catalogued or costed out. Yet those policies have important economic implications.

Moreover, the specific objectives do not seem to merit such an inflationary increase in federal outlays. Among Senator Humphrey's 92nd Congress proposals, for example, were an Urban Parkland Corporation ($1 billion), a $59 billion health program, a $2 billion increase in aid to the mentally retarded, $10 billion for public service employment, a $15.2 billion "National Education Investment Act", and a $2.7 billion increase in civil service annuities, as well as many other lesser additions and increases. Alas, as of 1976, the Minnesota senator continues to believe that federal spending is a cure for everything but warts.

Even if Ronald Reagan's program has major deficiencies, it makes at least as much sense (and certainly has more of the right spirit) as the continuing proclivity of other candidates to increase rather than decrease federal outlays. Updated fiscal impact ratings should be prepared for all senators. Their mentality, not Reagan's, has gotten the United States in its present economic pickle.

So, How About Some Useful Info?

NEW YORK — The publication by certain European papers of names, home addresses and telephone numbers of resident CIA people in France and England raises very awkward questions of journalistic ethics, quite apart from Washington's charge that it is an invitation to murder.

No one who believes in the First Amendment can argue plausibly against a press' right to publish such data, and consequences be damned. Once it starts publishing these lists, however, elementary fairness demands that it plunge on and give us addresses and phone numbers, not only of CIA people, but of all those others in hundreds of lines of work whom the public would like to hound in the night.

If CIA people are to have phone numbers and addresses in the public domain, why not KGB people? Why not people working for the French and British secret services? Sound journalistic principle insists upon it.

The French newspaper, Liberation, which published one of the CIA lists, retreats into sophistry to explain why it did not run a similar list of Soviet KGB agents in Paris. If it knew who they were, it would expose them, it says, but in any case everyone assumes that everybody attached to the Soviet Embassy is suspect.

This is a confession of laziness which no American editor would dare make. If Liberation does not know who the KGB men in Paris are, surely the CIA does. It should take little journalistic guile to pry the information out of the CIA. Not for nothing is it known as the world's most public secret agency.

Is it worth publishing such data? Aside from the sport of baiting the spy crowd, it seems to have only small nuisance value. A Frenchman can now telephone a CIA man at his home at 3 a.m. and tell him his French is barbaric, but how many Frenchmen have nothing better to do at that time of night?

If the CIA truly thinks its people are endangered, it will presumably pull them all out and replace them with new agents under deeper cover, which is a nuisance but not a calamity.

Imagine a reversed situation in Washington, with the newspapers listing names, telephone numbers and addresses of Soviet agents around town. What service could this possibly do the American reader?

Washington and every other American city is swarming with people whose addresses and phone numbers most readers would much prefer to the addresses and phone numbers of the local spies. Most of these people live under cover just as deep as the average CIA agent in Paris, hiding behind unlisted phone numbers and office addresses which turn out to be no more than mail drops guarded by impassable receptionists.

A newspaper that tells you how to reach the KGB man at home on Saturday night has an equal obligation to inform its readers how to get hold of his senator and congressman, the secretary of state and the president of the local electric utility.

These people are supposed to be public servants. A press that assumes a duty to promote invasions of privacy can hardly draw the line in their favor simply because they do not happen to be Soviet spies.

I can scarcely conceive of circumstances in which I would want to call up a Soviet spy, or go knocking at his door at dinnertime. There are moments in the night, however, when I would desperately like to ring up Sen. Kennedy or Secretary Kissinger and give each a piece of my mind, or drop by their houses just at bedtime and ask them what in heaven's name they thought they were up to.

And what about newspaper people? The world is filled with people who would like to know where the editor lives so they could throw eggs at his window, like to know his home telephone number so they could ring him just before dawn and tell him what they think of his paper.

Disclosure is acceptable under the First Amendment — which is not widely observed in Europe, unfortunately — but if there is to be any disclosure of this kind of information, there must be full disclosure, or the journalistic obligation is betrayed.

If invasion of privacy of public men is to be promoted by the press, it can be justified only by making it equally easy to invade the privacy of important public men as it is to barge in on some lower-drawer Russian spy during his off hours.

If the French and British press seriously intend to serve their publics, let them move ahead from encouraging the commission of nuisances against inconsequential secret agents and start telling the British and French some truly helpful information. Prime Minister Wilson's weekend phone number. Where to locate Giscard d'Estaing between midnight and 2 a.m. Where to find the Concorde's creators for a dinnertime confrontation.

Publishing the CIA lists, they have satisfied no urgent public need in Europe, but merely forced the CIA to start moving its people around again, which will cost American taxpayers a sweet piece of money.

They indulge themselves in a meaningless but self-satisfying gesture, and we pay the bill. It might be worth it if they now get up their courage to do their countrymen some service with some truly useful disclosures. If not — we pay the bill anyhow.

VIRGINIA PAYETTE

The Markdown On Feminine Worth

NEW YORK — What's getting gray around the edges . . . creaks louder than the mattress when she makes the bed . . . and just got marked down $1,604 on the home labor market?

Answer: me.

And you, too, if you've reached that certain age statisticians (male, no doubt) use as the cut-off point after which a wife isn't worth much, economically, around the house.

When it comes to figuring a price tag for sweeping, dusting and child-chasing, we who prefer to think of ourselves as "mature" can't hold an apron to the junior members of the club.

Those peppy young things reach their peak value (to their husbands, presumable, since the boys who compute the GNP don't include housewives) between the ages of 25 and 29, when their market value is $6,417 a year.

That (try not to laugh, now) is what a Social Security team, using 1972 data, figure it would cost to hire someone to do what a young mother does for free.

☆ ☆ ☆

When she hits 30, as if that weren't traumatic enough, her market value slips just a buck. From 35 to 39, she's worth $5,892, but in her early 40's her services suddenly go up $16. They don't explain why.

From 44 on, it's all downhill. And there's one age group there when Old Mom's value plummets from $5,222 to $3,618 the minute she blows out her birthday candles. Never mind how many.

In her 70's they discount her from $1,602 to $1,090 and in her 80's she's a cute-rate $359.

Grim, isn't it? But if those economists think they're going to get any complaints from this corner, they're mistaken. I'm with them all the way. I even suggest that they didn't go far enough.

Not only am I worth less to Old Dad these days, I cost more. And so do most of us "girls" who have raised and educated the kids and shoved them out of the nest. Now it's our turn.

I haven't been marked down because I've broken down. I've been marked down because I've quit.

Back in our struggling years I did the ironing and waxing and polishing and sewing. Now I send the shirts out and use that free time for writing and tennis. The house gets cleaned when company's coming. The rest of the time I ignore it until our shoes start sticking to the floor.

And I'd fire a cook who spent as little time as I do in the kitchen. But middle-aged waistlines don't need cakes and cookies and casseroles with cream. Broiled meat, salad and fruit — that's dinner.

There's another reason we old gals run up more bills than we used to: we're getting too fragile — or too smart — to tackle the tough jobs our "old boys" won't do any more, either.

There was a time when, if Old Dad needed an extra hand, I'd grab a snow shovel and clear the driveway. Or rake the leaves. Paint the living room, even.

Now he's too busy with corporate capers to bother with grubby chores like that. So I make a phone call and let George (or Bob or Joe) do it. And sometimes they even get it right.

☆ ☆ ☆

Twenty years ago there wasn't enough stretch in the budget to cover airline tickets to foreign lands. The cost of a babysitter alone would have paid for a new washing machine, so guess what we bought? I tend to smile (okay, chortle) over that often as I pack my shiny new luggage to go poking around the world.

And when Old Dad goes berserk in a jewelry store the week before Christmas, do I tell him he shouldn't have? You know better. I figure it's my due . . . as an old family retainer.

So I'm not insulted over my bargain-basement rating just because I'm getting along. I look upon it as early retirement.

And the fringes are fabulous.

Recession Drags GNP Into Decline

Washington (UPI) — All major economic indicators showed the nation was solidly on the way to recovery at the end of 1975, the Commerce Department said Tuesday, although early-year recession dragged the gross national product into decline for a record second straight year.

Inflation was measured at 6 5% during the last three months of 1975 — the second lowest quarterly rate in three years.

The department said a 5.4% rise in real GNP in the fourth quarter was not enough to offset earlier drops in 1975, so that the nation's output of goods and services fell 2% for the year following a 1.8% drop in 1974.

The department said in a year-end report there have never been back-to-back yearly drops in the broadest measure of national economic activity since record-keeping began in 1946.

The GNP report nevertheless showed clearly the national economy was in recovery as the year ended with every major category of economic activity rising from the third to the fourth quarter, Commerce said.

"Although it might be moderate, economic recovery is under way," said Assistant Commerce Secretary James L. Pate. "It is a steady and sustainable recovery Nothing in the data would indicate a stalling of the economic recovery."

Pate said in the first half of 1976, "an increase in business spending will be forthcoming, which should provide sufficient impetus for a sustained economic recovery." And, despite "continued consumer cautiousness," Commerce also anticipated "strong growth in consumer outlays."

GNP measures the nation's total production of goods and services.

While GNP was rising as 1975 ended, Commerce said inflation was falling. Although inflation was measured at a 8.7% for the year — down from 9.7% in 1974 — it was estimated at 6.5% in the fourth quarter.

Commerce said GNP after adjustment for inflation was estimated at $1,186 billion in 1975, down from $1,210 billion in 1974 and $1,233 billion in 1973.

GNP in the fourth quarter was estimated at an annual adjusted rate of $1,217 billion, up from $1,202 billion in the third quarter. Third quarter GNP rose 12% from the second quarter when the 1974-75 recession officially ended.

Although the 5.4% increase was less than half the 12% rise in the third quarter, and 1.1% lower than officials said they expected last week, Commerce said it was an indication that recovery from the nation's worst recession since World War II was continuing.

U.S. Not Living Up To Pacts, Panel Told

Washington (AP) — The United States is not living up the spirit of treaties limiting the testing and spread of nuclear weapons, the chief U S. negotiator of the 1968 nonproliferation treaty said Tuesday.

Adrian Fisher, now dean of the Georgetown Law Center, told a Senate hearing the nation has lost sight of the true goals of that pact and the 1963 nuclear test bay treaty.

"I do have a sense of disappointment about the test ban," Fisher said. "It included a commitment to work as hard as we could to eliminate the production and testing of all nuclear weapons.

"Somewhere between 1963 and to date this has ceased to be true," he told a Senate Government Operations subcommittee.

The panel is considering legislation to reorganize federal controls over peaceful exports of nuclear technology and materials.

"I don't think we've lived up to our promises made to the world," Fisher testified. He said this attitude has, in turn, prompted other nations to minimize the catastrophic effects that could result from the spread of nuclear materials that could be turned into weapons.

On Monday, David E. Lilienthal, the first chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, called for a moratorium on all U.S. exports of nuclear materials and technology.

But Fisher said he wouldn't go that far because such an approach, although it might have a valuable "shock effect on the rest of the world," probably would be unworkable.

Instead, Fisher called for a ban on exports of such material to all nations except those which either have ratified the nonproliferation treaty or have agreed to abide by safeguards established by the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Current U.S. procedures for safeguarding nuclear exports are grossly inadequate, Fisher said.

Kissinger 'Won't Give' Superiority To Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger flew here Tuesday night for critical nuclear arms talks, pledging to the American people that "we will never concede strategic superiority to the Soviet Union."

With a dark-brown fur hat perched on his head, Kissinger stepped from his jet into a light snowfall at subzero Vnukovo Airport. "I've come here for serious talks," he told reporters. "I wouldn't have come here if I didn't mean it."

The top-level discussions begin Wednesday with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev at the Kremlin. Even if there is an agreement in principle on a new treaty to limit offensive nuclear weapons, there will be a long interval before it could be implemented, a senior U.S. official said.

A break through could lead to a visit by Brezhnev to Washington for a treaty signing with President Ford.

During a stop in Copenhagen, Denmark, Kissinger told a news conference that the Ford administration would not be influenced by political concerns in trying to achieve a nuclear agreement.

"The necessities of world peace will not be affected by our electoral process," he said.

The principal hangups at this point are whether to count the Russian Backfire bomber and the American Cruise missile against a ceiling of 2,400 strategic delivery vehicles for each power agreed to by Ford and Brezhnev in 1974.

The United States has offered a compromise that basically would exempt the Backfires, provided they are positioned beyond striking distance of the United States while limiting the range of Cruise, a low-flying drone descendant of World War II German buzz bombs.

The civil war in Angola figured to loom large in the talks.

For the first time, a senior Pentagon arms specialist is at Kissinger's side for the talks with Brezhnev He is James P. Wade, deputy secretary of defense and the U.S. military's top specialist on nuclear weapons negotiations

"He's here to keep us honest," a Kissinger aide quipped when asked why Wade was aboard

Wade's presence symbolizes Pentagon concern that in mailing down a treaty Kissinger could make too many concessions, particularly in regard to the favored Cruise missile.

Van With Guns Escape Object

TRENTON, N.J (AP) — State police said Tuesday that the prisoners who shot up Trenton State Prison were trying to get to a van loaded with guns and parked on a nearby street.

One automatic handgun was recovered from the inmates after the gun battle and an "inch-by-inch" search of the prison was being made for at least two other guns the prisoners were believed to have had

The escape attempt Monday night cost the life of one prisoner, John Clark, 30, of Newark, and resulted in the serious wounding of three guards and another inmate

The guards, Capt Robert Simmons, 39, Joseph Macaluso, 22, and Leonard Caruso, 42, were in critical condition at St. Francis Medical Center.

Inmate John Douglas, 28, of Jersey City was at St. Francis for treatment of a gunshot wound in the shoulder.

"Somewhere between 1963 and to date this has ceased to be true," he told a Senate Government Operations subcommittee.

The panel is considering legislation to reorganize federal controls over peaceful exports of nuclear technology and materials.

"I don't think we've lived up to our promises made to the world," Fisher testified. He said this attitude has, in turn, prompted other nations to minimize the catastrophic effects that could result from the spread of nuclear materials that could be turned into weapons.

On Monday, David E. Lilienthal, the first chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, called for a moratorium on all U.S. exports of nuclear materials and technology.

But Fisher said he wouldn't go that far because such an approach, although it might have a valuable "shock effect on the rest of the world," probably would be unworkable.

Instead, Fisher called for a ban on exports of such material to all nations except those which either have ratified the nonproliferation treaty or have agreed to abide by safeguards established by the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Current U.S. procedures for safeguarding nuclear exports are grossly inadequate, Fisher said.

Kissinger 'Won't Give' Superiority To Russia

MOSCOW (AP) — Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger flew here Tuesday night for critical nuclear arms talks, pledging to the American people that "we will never concede strategic superiority to the Soviet Union."

With a dark-brown fur hat perched on his head, Kissinger stepped from his jet into a light snowfall at subzero Vnukovo Airport. "I've come here for serious talks," he told reporters. "I wouldn't have come here if I didn't mean it."

The top-level discussions begin Wednesday with Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev at the Kremlin. Even if there is an agreement in principle on a new treaty to limit offensive nuclear weapons, there will be a long interval before it could be implemented, a senior U.S. official said.

A break through could lead to a visit by Brezhnev to Washington for a treaty signing with President Ford.

During a stop in Copenhagen, Denmark, Kissinger told a news conference that the Ford administration would not be influenced by political concerns in trying to achieve a nuclear agreement.

"The necessities of world peace will not be affected by our electoral process," he said.

The principal hangups at this point are whether to count the Russian Backfire bomber and the American Cruise missile against a ceiling of 2,400 strategic delivery vehicles for each power agreed to by Ford and Brezhnev in 1974.

The United States has offered a compromise that basically would exempt the Backfires, provided they are positioned beyond striking distance of the United States while limiting the range of Cruise, a low-flying drone descendant of World War II German buzz bombs.

The civil war in Angola figured to loom large in the talks.

For the first time, a senior Pentagon arms specialist is at Kissinger's side for the talks with Brezhnev. He is James P. Wade, deputy secretary of defense and the U.S. military's top specialist on nuclear weapons negotiations.

"He's here to keep us honest," a Kissinger aide quipped when asked why Wade was aboard.

Wade's presence symbolizes Pentagon concern that in nailing down a treaty Kissinger could make too many concessions, particularly in regard to the favored Cruise missile.

Van With Guns Escape Object

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — State police said Tuesday that the prisoners who shot up Trenton State Prison were trying to get to a van loaded with guns and parked on a nearby street.

One automatic handgun was recovered from the inmates after the gun battle and an "inch-by-inch" search of the prison was being made for at least two other guns the prisoners were believed to have had.

The escape attempt Monday night cost the life of one prisoner, John Clark, 30, of Newark, and resulted in the serious wounding of three guards and another inmate.

The guards, Capt. Robert Simmons, 39, Joseph Macaluso, 22, and Leonard Camiso, 42, were in critical condition at St. Francis Medical Center.

Inmate John Douglas, 28, of Jersey City was at St. Francis for treatment of a gunshot wound in the shoulder.

'Sloppy' Research Found At Searle

WASHINGTON (AP) — A six-month federal investigation of G. D. Searle & Co. has turned up widespread evidence of "sloppy" research studies that call into question the safety of drugs taken by millions of Americans, the commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration told Congress Tuesday.

Because of the initial findings in the $500,000 Searle investigation, Commissioner Alexander M. Schmidt said drug inspectors are expanding their review of similar data submitted by other major pharmaceutical companies.

Schmidt said he expects the concentrated effort to show that Searle was "the exception rather than the norm in industry," but that problems are frequent in laboratories conducting studies with animals.

The Searle data is being turned over to the Justice Department and, because of the possibility of prosecution, some of the findings must remain confidential, the commissioner said.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who was chairman of the hearing of the Senate subcommittees on health and administrative practices and procedures, said the fact that some of the Searle research data was false was of greater concern than whether it was intentional or accidental.

"Inaccurate science, sloppy science, fraudulent science — these are the greatest threats to the health and safety of the American people," Kennedy said "Whether the science is wrong because of clerical error, or because of poor technique, or because of incompetence, or because of criminal negligence is less important than the fact that it is wrong."

Schmidt said that as a result of the FDA investigation of Searle, new warning labels will be required for Flagyl, a drug used to treat a common vaginal infection, and Aldactone, a widely prescribed antihypertensive drug; the artificial sweetener Aspartame will be kept off the market until all safety questions are resolved; the cardiovascular drug Norpace probably will have marketing approval delayed a year; and a Searle oral contraceptive and an intrauterine contraceptive device, both new on the market, are being studied anew.

Speaking in general terms, because of the possibility of federal legal action, Schmidt described alleged incidents in which test data were altered before submission to the FDA or sent belatedly after the allegations were first raise in Senate hearings last July.

"Clerical errors, mixed-up animals, animals not getting drugs they were supposed to get, pathological specimens lost because of improper handling, and a variety of other errors, even if innocent, all conspire to obscure positive findings and produce falsely negative results," he said.

Some but not all of the Searle errors made drug products appear to be safer than actual test results would indicate, he said.

Daniel C. Searle, chief executive officer of the firm, told the subcommittees that management changes have been implemented which have "already produced some significant and tangible results."

In the view of the company, however, the FDA has not turned up any mistakes calling into serious question the safety of the Searle products, he said.

"First, no facts were developed supporting any conclusion of fraud, Second, no facts support any conclusion of misrepresentation. Third, errors of various kinds did in fact exist. Fourth, deficiencies in procedural controls were identified," Searle said.

High Blood Pressure Runs In Families

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — High blood pressure, a major killer disease, tends to run in families and there are indications the tendency can begin soon after birth, Harvard University researchers find.

They now are studying a group of children from birth through their first years, seeking to learn what establishes family trends in blood pressure, Dr. Edward H. Kass said Tuesday.

He and associates hope to "find leads into the earliest time when the child enters a blood pressure track that seems destined, on the whole, to operate for the remainder of the child's life."

Perhaps "the cause or causes of an initial rise in blood pressure can be discovered this way," and if the causes are something in the environment or life-style then they might be corrected or controlled, he told an American Heart Association Science Writers Forum.

One biochemical clue being investigated is an enzyme or chemical controller called Kallikrein, Kass said. People, including children, with elevated blood pressure have less of this enzyme than people with normal pressure. Kallikrein acts to dilate blood vessels, thus reducing resistance to blood flow. It can be detected in urine.

Some 24 million Americans are believed to have elevated blood pressure or hypertension, with most not aware of it because they have no evident symptoms. Continued high blood pressure damages blood vessels, increasing the risk of heart attacks, strokes and kidney damage. Drugs can often but not always bring the pressure under control.

Family trends in blood pressure were turned up recently and "the blood pressure of any individual, corrected for age and sex, tends to be reflected in the blood pressure of the individual's first order relatives" — meaning parents, brothers and sisters and children. Both heredity and environment undoubtedly play a role in this, Kass said.

Further, the individual with a relatively high blood pressure tends to maintain it.

These same trends now have been found in children with blood pressures measured at their homes with a recording machine.

Railroads Seek 7% Boost

Washington (AP) — The nation's railroads have asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to let them boost freight rates by seven per cent on Feb. 18.

The application, supported by all major railroads except the Southern Pacific, was filed with the ICC Monday.

The rail firms said the increase was necessary to offset increased labor costs and new fuel and material price hikes.

They claimed the 7 per cent general freight rate increase would produce $793 million a year in new revenues, or about $400 million less than needed to cover the cost increases the railroads claim to have incurred.

Reed Paper Workers Take Offer

Quebec (AP) — About 1,000 workers at Reed Paper Ltd. will end a four-month strike and return to work Thursday after voting to accept the company's latest contract offer, a Canadian Paperworkers Union official said Tuesday.

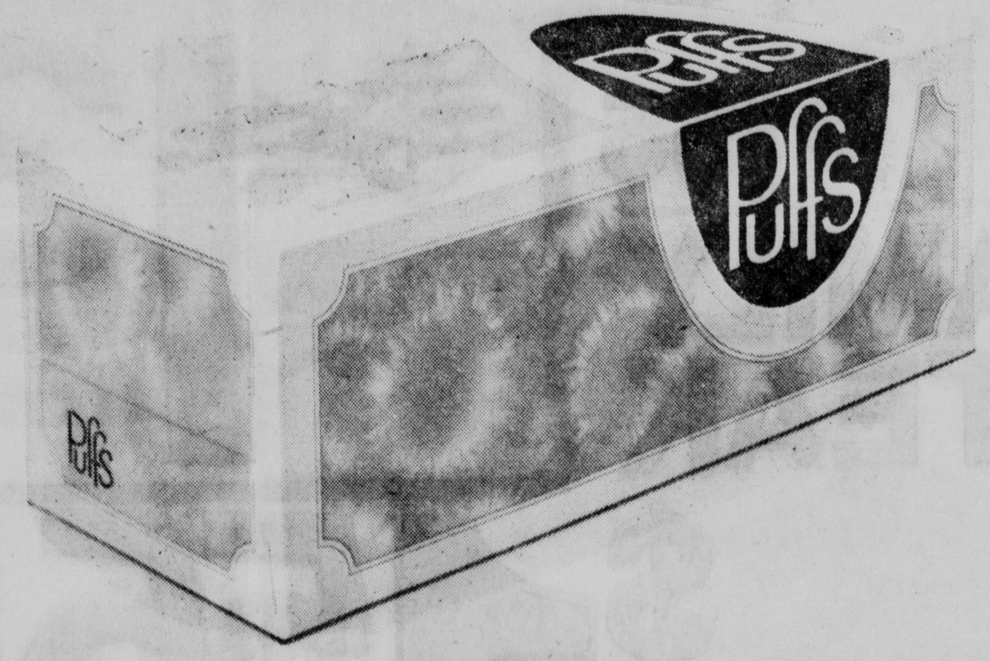

About 70% of the 650 paperworkers voted in favor of accepting the tentative offer, which provides for a 14% wage increase in the first year of a three-year contract, the official said. A 10% and 8% increase would be granted in the second and third years.

The Canadian federal anti inflation board recently ruled 14% of the first year of a contract was the maximum allowable.

'Sloppy' Research Found At Searle

WASHINGTON (AP) — A six-month federal investigation of G. D Searle & Co. has turned up widespread evidence of "sloppy" research studies that call into question the safety of drugs taken by millions of Americans, the commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration told Congress Tuesday.

Because of the initial findings in the $500,000 Searle investigation, Commissioner Alexander M. Schmidt said drug inspectors are expanding their review of similar data submitted by other major pharmaceutical companies.

Schmidt said he expects the concentrated effort to show that Searle was "the exception rather than the norm in industry," but that problems are frequent in laboratories conducting studies with animals.

The Searle data is being turned over to the Justice Department and, because of the possibility of prosecution, some of the findings must remain confidential, the commissioner said.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who was chairman of the hearing of the Senate subcommittees on health and administrative practices and procedures, said the fact that some of the Searle research data was false was of greater concern than whether it was intentional or accidental.

"Inaccurate science, sloppy science, fraudulent science — these are the greatest threats to the health and safety of the American people," Kennedy said "Whether the science is wrong because of clerical error, or because of poor technique, or because of incompetence, or because of criminal negligence is less important than the fact that it is wrong."

Schmidt said that as a result of the FDA investigation of Searle, new warning labels will be required for Flagyl, a drug used to treat a common vaginal infection, and Aldactone, a widely prescribed antihypertensive drug; the artificial sweetener Aspartame will be kept off the market until all safety questions are resolved; the cardiovascular drug Norpace probably will have marketing approval delayed a year; and a Searle oral contraceptive and an intrauterine contraceptive device, both new on the market, are being studied anew.

Speaking in general terms, because of the possibility of federal legal action, Schmidt described alleged incidents in which test data were altered before submission to the FDA or sent belatedly after the allegations were first raise in Senate hearings last July.

"Clerical errors, mixed-up animals, animals not getting drugs they were supposed to get, pathological specimens lost because of improper handling, and a variety of other errors, even if innocent, all conspire to obscure positive findings and produce falsely negative results," he said.

Some but not all of the Searle errors made drug products appear to be safer than actual test results would indicate, he said.

Daniel C. Searle, chief executive officer of the firm, told the subcommittees that management changes have been implemented which have "already produced some significant and tangible results."

In the view of the company, however, the FDA has not turned up any mistakes calling into serious question the safety of the Searle products, he said.

"First, no facts were developed supporting any conclusion of fraud, Second, no facts support any conclusion of misrepresentation. Third, errors of various kinds did in fact exist. Fourth, deficiencies in procedural controls were identified," Searle said.

High Blood Pressure Runs In Families

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — High blood pressure, a major killer disease, tends to run in families and there are indications the tendency can begin soon after birth, Harvard University researchers find.

They now are studying a group of children from birth through their first years, seeking to learn what establishes family trends in blood pressure, Dr. Edward H. Kass said Tuesday.

He and associates hope to "find leads into the earliest time when the child enters a blood pressure track that seems destined, on the whole, to operate for the remainder of the child's life."

Perhaps "the cause or causes of an initial rise in blood pressure can be discovered this way," and if the causes are something in the environment or life-style then they might be corrected or controlled, he told an American Heart Association Science Writers Forum.

One biochemical clue being investigated is an enzyme or chemical controller called Kallikrein, Kass said. People, including children, with elevated blood pressure have less of this enzyme than people with normal pressure. Kallikrein acts to dilate blood vessels, thus reducing resistance to blood flow. It can be detected in urine.

Some 24 million Americans are believed to have elevated blood pressure or hypertension, with most not aware of it because they have no evident symptoms. Continued high blood pressure damages blood vessels, increasing the risk of heart attacks, strokes and kidney damage. Drugs can often but not always bring the pressure under control.

Family trends in blood pressure were turned up recently and "the blood pressure of any individual, corrected for age and sex, tends to be reflected in the blood pressure of the individual's first order relatives" — meaning parents, brothers and sisters and children. Both heredity and environment undoubtedly play a role in this, Kass said.

Further, the individual with a relatively high blood pressure tends to maintain it.

These same trends now have been found in children with blood pressures measured at their homes with a recording machine.

Railroads Seek 7% Boost

Washington (AP) — The nation's railroads have asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to let them boost freight rates by seven per cent on Feb. 18.

The application, supported by all major railroads except the Southern Pacific, was filed with the ICC Monday.

The rail firms said the increase was necessary to offset increased labor costs and new fuel and material price hikes.

They claimed the 7 per cent general freight rate increase would produce $793 million a year in new revenues, or about $400 million less than needed to cover the cost increases the railroads claim to have incurred.

Reed Paper Workers Take Offer

Quebec (AP) — About 1,000 workers at Reed Paper Ltd. will end a four-month strike and return to work Thursday after voting to accept the company's latest contract offer, a Canadian Paperworkers Union official said Tuesday.

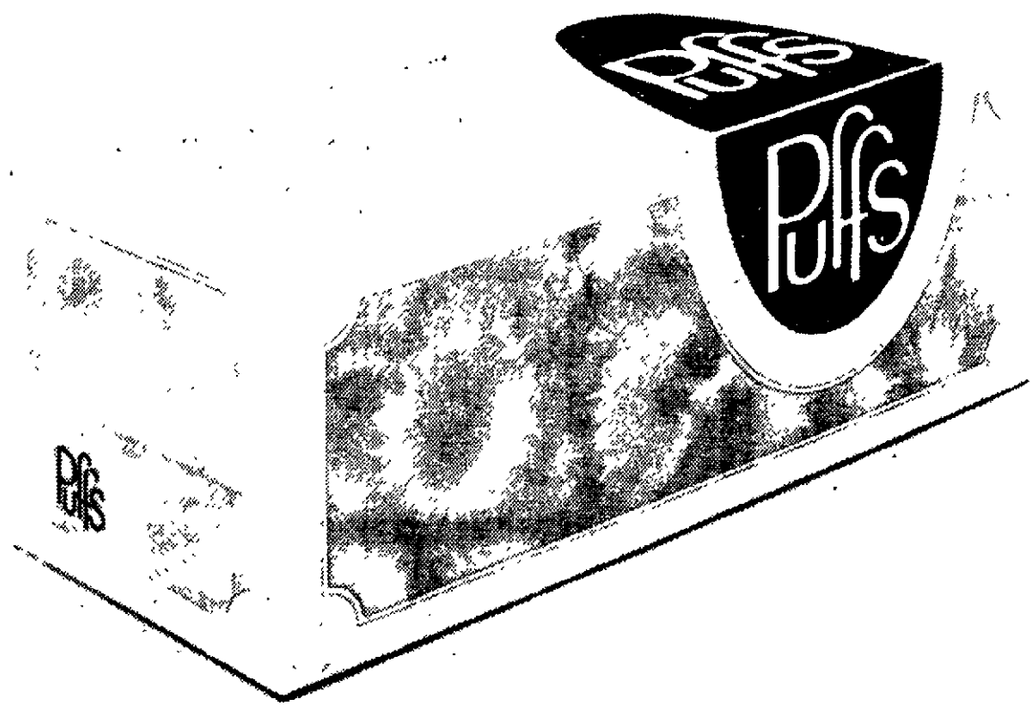

About 70% of the 650 paperworkers voted in favor of accepting the tentative offer, which provides for a 14% wage increase in the first year of a three-year contract, the official said. A 10% and 8% increase would be granted in the second and third years.

The Canadian federal anti inflation board recently ruled 14% of the first year of a contract was the maximum allowable.

I have been told several times recently by representatives of the People's Natural Gas Co. of Auburn that I cannot have gas heat installed in my home. Why is this?

— M. B., Fairbury

ACTION LINE: People's Natural Gas Co. has had a company-wide policy for about 18 months of refusing to accept any more "conversion" customers because of limited gas supplies, according to division manager Larry Loring. Such customers are those who already have fuel oil or some other method of heating. He said the company, now even must turn down applications from customers in homes without any other heat, such as new homes, for the same reason. Loring said it could be several years before the company will accept more conversion or new customers unless the gas supply improves.

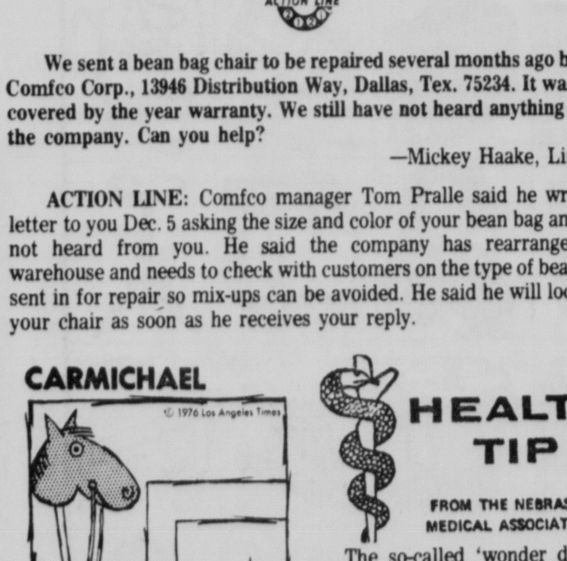

Recently the garbage men from the Gus Johns Refuse Service, Route 3, have not been emptying my garbage can when the garbage is loose, but they have been when it's in sacks in the can. Is this a new policy?

— C. H. M., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Gus Johns Jr., president of the service, said the collectors should be taking all of your garbage, regardless of how it is put in the cans. He said you should contact him about the situation. Even if your garbage is frozen or tightly packed in the can, the collectors are supposed to empty it, he said.

I've seen some men trapping pigeons with a large net along the railroad tracks near my home. I wonder whether this is legal. I'm also curious about what their purpose in doing this might be.

— M. W., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Like starlings and others, wild pigeons are considered "garbage" birds and can legally be trapped alive, according to Leroy Orvis, Lancaster County conservation officer. Orvis said the birds often are trapped for use in hunting dog training. The going price for live wild pigeons is about 50¢ each.

I'm a farmer and interested in getting a subscription to Capper's Weekly, a farm newspaper. No one I've talked to knows where the company is that publishes it. Can you help?

— M. M., Wahoo

ACTION LINE: You can contact Capper's Weekly about subscription information by writing to Capper's Weekly, Stauffer Publications, Sixth and Jefferson Sts., Topeka, Kan. 66607.

We sent a bean bag chair to be repaired several months ago by the Comfco Corp., 13946 Distribution Way, Dallas, Tex. 75234. It was still covered by the year warranty. We still have not heard anything from the company. Can you help?

—Mickey Haake, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Comfco manager Tom Pralle said he wrote a letter to you Dec. 5 asking the size and color of your bean bag and has not heard from you. He said the company has rearranged its warehouse and needs to check with customers on the type of bean bag sent in for repair so mix-ups can be avoided. He said he will look for your chair as soon as he receives your reply.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

The so-called 'wonder drugs' have accomplished such miracles of healing, that patients have come to expect a quick cure for every illness.

Unfortunately, says the Nebraska Medical Association, the virus infections, which include influenza and the common cold, are not influenced by any sulfonamide or antibiotic now known. The eventual hope for controlling these diseases lies in immunization or vaccination.

Not more than half the prescriptions filled today could have been filled 10 years ago. Yet, many patients demand that doctors give them a shot of penicillin or other antibiotic for colds or other virus infections.

The doctor who yields to such pressure not only adds an unnecessary item to the patient's drug bill, but exposes the patient to an unwarranted risk of sensitization to a drug which he may urgently need to survive a future illness.

Prescription drugs are issued with care and must be used with care. Any powerful drug is potentially dangerous if misused. For this reason, the Nebraska Medical Association points out that most prescriptions given today cannot be refilled without the doctor's permission. Patients should never use prescriptions issued for others.

Lead Poisoning Can Lead To Neurological Disorders

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My grandson had a test and they found he had lead in his blood. What is that sickness? What effects can it have?—C.S.

Lead poisoning, especially in youngsters, can be serious, leading to neurological damage. Many cases can be traced to ingestion of lead-based paint, particularly that found in pre-World War II homes. New laws require non-toxic paints.

Symptoms of lead poisoning are loss of appetite, irritability, drowsiness, apathy and abdominal pain. Some lead is found in all persons, although it serves no demonstrable biological purpose.

Lead intoxication can lead to behavioral problems in children, and there have been cases where improvement has followed treatment with drugs to remove lead from their bodies.

Parents raising youngsters in older homes should determine whether there is any of this paint-eating going on, and they should check the content of the particular paint to see if it contains lead.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a high level of triglycerides in my blood. Can you tell me what treatment is necessary to bring the level down? I've heard all about cholesterol, but never about triglycerides.—Miss G.K.

Of the variety of fatty materials circulating in the blood, two of the most important are cholesterol and triglycerides. Both materials have been associated with the formation of plaques (deposits on the walls of the arteries).

Heredity can be a cause. The condition is also associated with obesity, so weight reduction has been stressed more in recent years as a means of control.

But most assuredly, what you eat can be as important as how much you eat. If your triglycerides are high you may be getting too much of the sweet, starchy foods. So foods of this type should be restricted to lower the triglycerides. If the cholesterol is high, the culprit can be saturated fats — those that remain solid at room temperature. It is found in dairy products, meat fats, and eggs.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am writing for my husband. He wants to know if there is a difference in the aging of the skin if a man uses an electric razor or a razor blade with shaving cream. He and the fellows at the office argue about this and they would like to know if one or the other is easier on the skin.—Mrs. V.E.

No difference, and no evidence that any kind of shaving has any effect.

DATSUN.
NOW AMERICA'S
#1 SELLING IMPORT.

Why should I care?

Not many people give any thought to the fact that one auto company is outselling another. But that doesn't mean it isn't worth thinking about.

After all, Datsun outsold all other imports in 1975 for some good reasons.

Probably the most important is the way Datsuns stretch gas.

But there's more to it than that. Let's look at Datsun's strong points:

Choice of Models.

At a Datsun Dealer you can select from an entire economy car pool, wading right through hardtops and hatchbacks, stylish sedans and our legendary Z-Car. Wagons, too. Fourteen models in all, including America's #1 selling small pickup, Datsun's Li'l Hustler.

Gas Mileage.

While other cars are learning, their fuel keeps burning. Datsuns knew how to pass up a gas pump a long time ago, and we keep getting better. Right now, our champion gas squeezer, the B-210, gets an amazing 41 MPG on the highway and 29 MPG in the city. (EPA mileage estimate. Manual transmission. Your mileage may be more or less depending on the condition of your car and how you drive.)

Parts and Service.

Datsun takes care of its own. You can count on a dealer network with nearly 4,000 factory-trained service technicians, and a nationwide, computer-connected parts system. Your Datsun Dealer's very big on small car experience, too.

Value and Durability.

Datsun puts 'em together to stay together—with 43 years experience building today's size cars. Quality features like unibody construction, crankshafts with five main bearings and all-vinyl upholstery mean a Datsun not only saves, it survives.

The whole point is that we want you to know we're number one, but not to do a number on you. Datsun outsells other imports for good reasons: economy, durability, a wide selection of models and a fine dealer network. If you're in the market for a car, it's something you ought to care about. A lot.

Come look at number one.

Lincoln To Battle For Air Service

The Lincln Airport Authority Tuesday girded itself to do battle with Washington, D.C. bureaucrats.

Scratching and clawing like other localities for better air service, the board prepared to send a delegation to lobby for a nonstop flight from Lincoln into Chicago's O'Hare Airport by Frontier Airlines.

A request that Frontier be allowed to do that is pending before the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB). The airline is presently allowed to fly in Chicago's Midway Airport.

But Midway is much smaller than O'Hare and Frontier claims it can't use the facility because only small airliners can land there.

When the delegation of Airport Authority board members will take off for Washington has not yet been set. The action Tuesday merely clears the runway for the time the opportunity presents itself.

In other action, the board approved allowing a mystery firm to take a 30-day option on leasing the former airport terminal, now empty.

Chairman Fred Eiche said revealing the identity of the firm might jeopardize negotiations the firm is conducting with other companies in the overall transaction.

A year's lease would cost somewhere in the vicinity of $18,000.

The board also "reserved its place in line," in the words of authority Executive Director Rollie Harr, for federal funds to overlay the airport's 4,000-foot runway and taxiway.

The total cost of the overlay was pegged at $492,000. Of that amount $123,000 would be in local funds and $369,000 would be federal funds.

Annual figures on air travel in and out of the airport provided by the airlines showed that Frontier slipped .8% from its pace in 1974.

United, despite a strike in December, posted an increase of 2.9% over 1974. For the month of December United was down 57%, while Frontier was up 40%.

Three Finalists Chosen For Ms. Lincoln Center

Three finalists were recently named in the 1976 Ms. Lincoln Center competition.

The finalists, selected from 14 contestants, are Karen Bowlin, Sharon Riordan and Linda Arnold.

Ms. Arnold, who is married to Charles Arnold, has one child and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Jacobs of David City. She represents the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, where she has worked for nine years.

Representing the National Bank of Commerce, Ms. Bowlin has been affiliated with the firm since 1972. She is married to David Bowlin and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dale E. Retzlaff of Walton.

A native of Lincoln, Ms. Riordan is representing Commercial Federal Savings and Loan, where she has worked for four years. Married to Michael Riordan, she is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Jackson.

Winner of the competition will be named Thursday, Jan. 29, at the 1976 annual awards luncheon sponsored by the Lincoln Center Development Association, Downtown Lincoln Promotion Council and Park and Shop/Ride and Shop.

The new Ms. Lincoln Center will act as the official representative for the Downtown Lincoln Promotion Council and downtown Lincoln during 1976.

Thone Names 2 To AF Academy

First District Rep. Charles Thone has nominated two Nebraskans to attend the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs with four-year, all-expenses paid scholarships.

The nominees are Raymond A. Drew Miller of Lincoln, a senior at Lincoln East High School, and David M. Votipka of Alexandria, a senior at Hebron High School.

Rotary Club 14 Elects Directors

Four new members have been elected to the board of directors of Rotary Club No. 14. They are Wes Antes, Chan Tyrrell, Tom Miller and Norton Warner.

Officers of the club for the next year will be named by the board.

UNL Faculty Senate Re-Elects Eldridge

Satisfied that questions about the legality of the reorganized University of Nebraska-Lincoln Faculty Senate were unfounded, members Tuesday re-elected animal science Prof. Franklin E. Eldridge president for 1976.

Because the senate just completed a transition from a town hall body to an elected assembly this month, Eldridge reported questions were raised since its operating procedures require NU Regents approval.

Eldridge said UNL Interim Chancellor Adam C. Breckenridge interpreted campus bylaws as allowing the transition, agreed to by consensus among the new senators.

They also elected agronomy Prof. David P. McGill secretary for a one-year term, and authorized an ad hoc bylaws committee to address such possibilities as creating a new office of vice president or president-elect, and setting redistricting procedures.

The senate unanimously approved a motion by Prof. Donald Haack, directing Eldridge to appoint a five-senator committee to draft a proposed "memorandum of understanding" on how the group will work with, instruct and advise the UNL chapter of American Association of University Professors, should AAUP be designated the faculty collective bargaining agent in the Feb. 16 election.

Haack, AAUP chapter president-elect, and John W. Robinson, AAUP chapter president, both stressed that if AAUP should ever get to the negotiation table with regents, it doesn't intend to take over any Faculty Senate functions or usurp any of its constitutional powers.

Forty-four of the 53 senators were present at the organizational session. Eldridge announced two immediate vacancies, since C. LeRoy Michaelis of engineering was declared ineligible because of academic rank and Lindy C. Gunderson of aerospace studies is expected to depart Lincoln.

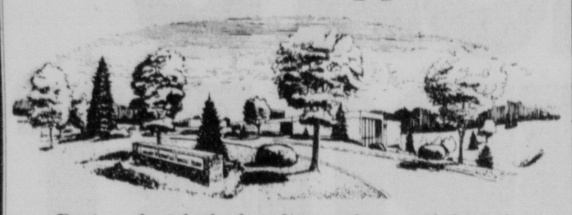

After voting 43-1 that the executive committee members must also be elected senators, the group nominated 18 for the nine-member panel that will replace the liaison committee. The election will be conducted by mail ballot within two weeks.

No more than two senators from an academic unit within UNL may serve on the executive committee. Senators who miss more than four meetings annually will be replaced.

Lincoln To Battle For Air Service

The Lincoln Airport Authority Tuesday girded itself to do battle with Washington, D.C. bureaucrats

Scratching and clawing like other localities for better air service, the board prepared to send a delegation to lobby for a nonstop flight from Lincoln into Chicago's O'Hare Airport by Frontier Airlines.

A request that Frontier be allowed to do that is pending before the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB). The airline is presently allowed to fly in Chicago's Midway Airport.

But Midway is much smaller than O'Hare and Frontier claims it can't use the facility because only small airliners can land there

When the delegation of Airport Authority board members will take off for Washington has not yet been set. The action Tuesday merely clears the runway for the time the opportunity presents itself.

In other action, the board approved allowing a mystery firm to take a 30-day option on leasing the former airport terminal, now empty.

Chairman Fred Eiche said revealing the identity of the firm might jeopardize negotiations the firm is conducting with other companies in the overall transaction.

A year's lease would cost somewhere in the vicinity of $18,000.

The board also "reserved its place in line," in the words of authority Executive Director Rollie Harr, for federal funds to overlay the airport's 4,000-foot runway and taxiway.

The total cost of the overlay was pegged at $492,000. Of that amount $123,000 would be in local funds and $369,060 would be federal funds.

Annual figures on air travel in and out of the airport provided by the airlines showed that Frontier slipped .8% from its pace in 1974.

United, despite a strike in December, posted an increase of 2.9% over 1974. For the month of December United was down 57%, while Frontier was up 40%.

Varner Seeks NU Flexibility

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

In a bid for more budgetary flexibility, University of Nebraska President D.B. Varner Tuesday unveiled a plan under which the Legislature could hold the university more accountable for its expenditures.

The proposal earned a passing grade, but no commitments, from Appropriations Chairman Richard Marvel of Hastings.

"A good job, and I congratulate you," he told Varner.

It was Marvel who asked for such an accountability plan in response to the Board of Regents request for a lump sum appropriation, giving it the flexibility to decide how the funds should be expended.

The Legislature usually divides the budget among NU campuses and among major programs within each campus.

"The ultimate management of the university is a constitutionally assigned responsibility of the Board of Regents," Varner told the Appropriations Committee.

"No management tool is more important than budgetary control.

"Under current arrangements, the regents have very limited budgetary control, and the ability of the board to govern effectively is substantially impaired."

Varner presented the senators with a six-page proposal under which the university would stipulate how it expected to spend appropriated funds, show how those funds had been expended and provide justification for any departure from the planned pattern of expenditure.

In turn, the Appropriations Committee and the Legislature could express their intentions as to how the funds should be expended in the appropriations bill.

"Clearly, a wise board would not ignore the expressed interests and intent of the Appropriations Committee," Varner noted.

The "burden of justification for (any) departures" from legislative intent would be on the Board of Regents, he said.

If its justification seemed inadequate, Varner pointed out, "the committee would have obvious recourse in the appropriation of funds in subsequent years."

In an institution as complex as the university, Varner told the senators, "changes occur during the course of the year which no one can anticipate."

Budgetary flexibility would give the regents ability to respond to such changes and govern the university more effectively, he said.

In answer to questioning by Sen. Robert Clark of Sidney, Varner said NU would like to have full flexibility in expending funds for salary hikes so it can supply merit increases "based on performance."

NU has asked for a 12.32% boost in faculty salaries.

The committee has tentatively approved a 4% hike for all state employes, and an additional 1% increase in salary budgets to fund merit hikes.

Sen. Douglas Bereuter of Utica told Varner he would like to be supplied with more information on any assessments of the quality of instruction at NU.

Delayed for discussion at another hearing scheduled for Jan. 28 was the committee's tentative policy decision to provide NU with a faculty workload budget based solely on teaching, without research.

A reversal of that decision would add $2.8 million to the committee's tentative general fund budget proposal for the university.

Its tentative $88 million tax funding proposal for fiscal 1976-77 compares with a current budget figure of about $76 million. NU has requested $100 million.

'Little Red Schoolhouse' Faces Scrutiny

By The Associated Press

A bill doing away with Nebraska's small Class I school districts was introduced in the legislature Tuesday by Columbus Sen. Donald Dworak. He said he expected "more positive reaction than negative" from rural residents.

His LB878 would dissolve all Class I districts by 1980 if they have not joined another school district by then.

There are 882 of the Class I districts in the state, according to Department of Education figures as of Tuesday. The department said 826 of the districts are operative; 53 are contracting with other districts for services and three are in "no school" status, meaning there probably are no students now in that district.

A Class I district offers only elementary education.

Dworak said his bill is aimed at having them merged with Class VI districts, meaning they would become part of a kindergarten through grade 12 system.

"They could also get together and form their own Class VI district and build their own high school," Dworak said.

Bellevue Sen. Frank Lewis, chairman of the Education Committee, said he would support the measure.

"This bill would accomplish a number of things," Dworak said. "Many children in the small districts now pay free-high tuition to attend high school in other districts, meaning their parents have no voice on the school board.

"This bill would give that voice and it would also do away with situations in which some are being charged too much tuition, or too little."

Dworak acknowledged the bill would "eliminate some" of the small schools.

"But many of them could remain operative by becoming attendance centers," Dworak said.

"That means the schools have some children attending classes there, rather than having them travel to another facility in the district," Dworak said.

Nebraska has been noted as the last bastion of the little red school house in which only a handful of pupils may be educated.

Rural residents have voiced opposition to their dissolution in the past, with arguments ranging from control of their children's education to higher mill levies that would come with a larger school district.

Committee Holds Equal Credit Bill

State Banking Director William H. Riley asked the Unicameral's Banking Committee Tuesday not to approve equal credit legislation because federal law already bans sex discrimination in lending.

Riley said LB640 was not needed because all state lending institutions are already covered by federal law and regulation.

The Judiciary Committee introduced the bill at the suggestion of Lincoln Sen. Shirley Marsh. The Banking Committee agreed to hold the bill until Sen. Marsh could study the matter further.

She asked for a state law, saying, "If we pass a state law, it will be more clearly understood than federal regulations or a federal statute."

Tax Breaks Suggested For Certain Improvements

The Legislature is being asked for a second straight year to give a property tax break to those who improve property in blighted or substandard areas.

A similar measure offered last year fell one vote short of approval.

This year's measure is LB894, offered by Omaha Sen. Harold Moylan. Moylan said he offered the bill for the City of Omaha.

The credit would be on improvements to property which the county assessor certifies as being in a blighted or substandard area. The size of the credit would be limited to the increased taxes that result from the improvements.

However, the credit would require a minimum $500 improvement and it could not exceed the property owner's income tax liability before any other credits are considered.

The credits could be used five consecutive years."

Last year's measure was sponsored by Omaha Sen. John Cavanaugh.

Sen. William Skarda of Omaha wanted the bill killed.

With the vote tally at 21-21, Whelan broke the deadlock by voting no. The bill was sent back to the Education Committee for a new hearing.

Whelan Casts 1st Tie-Breaker Of '76 Session

Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan cast his initial tie-breaking vote of the 1976 legislative session Tuesday.

The measure, LB148, would increase the numbers of handicapped children who could be transported to special education programs at state expense.

Estimated cost: $518,400 a year.

Delayed for discussion at another hearing scheduled for Jan. 28 was the committee's tentative policy decision to provide NU with a faculty workload budget based solely on teaching, without research.

A reversal of that decision would add $2.8 million to the committee's tentative general fund budget proposal for the university

Its tentative $88 million tax funding proposal for fiscal 1976-77 compares with a current budget figure of about $76 million. NU has requested $100 million.

'Little Red Schoolhouse' Faces Scrutiny

By The Associated Press

A bill doing away with Nebraska's small Class I school districts was introduced in the legislature Tuesday by Columbus Sen. Donald Dworak. He said he expected "more positive reaction than negative" from rural residents.

His LB878 would dissolve all Class I districts by 1980 if they have not joined another school district by then.

There are 882 of the Class I districts in the state, according to Department of Education figures as of Tuesday. The department said 826 of the districts are operative, 53 are contracting with other districts for services and three are in "no school" status, meaning there probably are no students now in that district.

A Class I district offers only elementary education.

Dworak said his bill is aimed at having them merged with Class VI districts, meaning they would become part of a kindergarten through grade 12 system.

"They could also get together and form their own Class VI district and build their own high school," Dworak said.

Bellevue Sen. Frank Lewis, chairman of the Education Committee, said he would support the measure.

"This bill would accomplish a number of things," Dworak said. "Many children in the small districts now pay free-high tuition to attend high school in other districts, meaning their parents have no voice on the school board.

"This bill would give that voice and it would also do away with situations in which some are being charged too much tuition, or too little."

Dworak acknowledged the bill would "eliminate some" of the small schools.

"But many of them could remain operative by becoming attendance centers," Dworak said.

"That means the schools have some children attending classes there, rather than having them travel to another facility in the district," Dworak said.

Nebraska has been noted as the last bastion of the little red school house in which only a handful of pupils may be educated.

Rural residents have voiced opposition to their dissolution in the past, with arguments ranging from control of their children's education to higher mill levies that would come with a larger school district.

Tax Breaks Suggested For Certain Improvements

The Legislature is being asked for a second straight year to give a property tax break to those who improve property in blighted or substandard areas.

A similar measure offered last year fell one vote short of approval.

This year's measure is LB894, offered by Omaha Sen. Harold Moylan. Moylan said he offered the bill for the City of Omaha.

The credit would be on improvements to property which the county assessor certifies as being in a blighted or substandard area. The size of the credit would be limited to the increased taxes that result from the improvements.

However, the credit would require a minimum $500 improvement and it could not exceed the property owner's income tax liability before any other credits are considered.

The credits could be used five consecutive years."

Last year's measure was sponsored by Omaha Sen. John Cavanaugh.

Whelan Casts 1st Tie-Breaker Of '76 Session

Lt. Gov. Gerald Whelan cast his initial tie-breaking vote of the 1976 legislative session Tuesday.

The measure, LB148, would increase the numbers of handicapped children who could be transported to special education programs at state expense.

Estimated cost: $518,400 a year.

Sen. William Skarda of Omaha wanted the bill killed.

With the vote tally at 21-21, Whelan broke the deadlock by voting no. The bill was sent back to the Education Committee for a new hearing.

Committee Holds Equal Credit Bill

State Banking Director William H. Riley asked the Unicameral's Banking Committee Tuesday not to approve equal credit legislation because federal law already bans sex discrimination in lending.

Riley said LB640 was not needed because all state lending institutions are already covered by federal law and regulation.

The Judiciary Committee introduced the bill at the suggestion of Lincoln Sen. Shirley Marsh. The Banking Committee agreed to hold the bill until Sen. Marsh could study the matter further.

She asked for a state law, saying, "If we pass a state law, it will be more clearly understood than federal regulations or a federal statute."

Omaha Branch Banking Bill Killed By Big Margin

By United Press International

A bill which would have allowed branch banking in Omaha was killed by a wide margin after extended debate in the Legislature Tuesday.

The vote to put Bellwood Sen. Loran Schmit's LB398 into the discard heap was 31-16.

"Today Omaha, tomorrow the whole state," said Sen. John Murphy of South Sioux City, who was among more than a score of lawmakers speaking out against the measure. "This most certainly is not a little bill for Omaha," he said.

He and others argued the state's unit banking system has and continues to work well.

It was Big Springs Sen. Jack Mills who made the kill motion. He said not all Omaha banks supported the proposal and added the deposits in big Omaha banks have not slipped.

The question confronting the legislators, Mills said, was whether the legislation would help the capital structure of out-state banks.

Sen. Donald Dworak of Columbus described LB398 as "the old foot in the door step and the first step in destroying the independent bank system."

Schmit said the future may see credit availability for agriculture and industry becoming a problem. "You will stifle Nebraska's growth if you don't make adequate capital available," he said.

He predicted "the time will come when the national banks branch and then the state banks will come and ask for the same thing."

In its original form, his bill called for branch banking in counties throughout the state but the banking committee struck this from the bill.

Sen. Eugene Mahoney of Omaha said it was "not fair or proper" to "strangle" the growth of downtown Omaha banks. "What's wrong with competition and letting the Omaha banks expand so they can compete?" he asked. "If the savings and loans from Fremont can migrate into Douglas county, what's wrong with allowing Omaha banks to have branch banking?"

Mahoney accused opponents of using "scare tactics" and said it was time for Nebraska "to move out of the 18th Century."

Murphy argued the health of a business community depends on the health of the financial institutions in that community depends on the health of the financial instutions in that community and added: "When money became very tight in 1969, there was no rush by the Omaha banks to make loans in out-state Nebraska."

According to Schmit, Nebraska doesn't need more banks but stronger banks to provide for the state's credit needs.

Here is the vote to kill the bill:

To kill — Anderson, Barnett, Bereuter, Burbach, Burrows, Chambers, Clark, Cope, Duis, Dworak, Fowler, George, Hasebroock, Johnson, Kelly, Kennedy, Kime, Koch, Kremer, F. Lewis, R. Lewis, Maresh, Mills, Moylan, Murphy, Nichol, Rasmussen, Rumery, Stull, Warner, Wiltse.

Against — Carsten, Cavanaugh, DeCamp, Fitzgerald, Goodrich, Luedtke, Mahoney, Marsh, Marvel, Savage, Schmit, Simpson, Skarda, Stoney, Swigart, Syas.

Not voting — Dickinson, Keyes.

Winnebago Indian Reservation Resolution Killed In Committee

The Legislature's Judiciary Committee Tuesday killed a resolution which would have made an offer to the federal government to end state control of the Winnebago Indian Reservation.

Killing the Retrocession Resolution, LR44, leaves the reservation under state and county law enforcement officials.

If the state had offered retrocession, and the federal government had accepted it, the Indians could have established their own government under federal control.

LB913 Would Allow Marriage Contracts

The Unicameral's Judiciary Committee introduced a bill Tuesday that would allow couples to write the terms of their own marriage contracts.

The bill, LB913, allows couples to say how their property will be divided if the marriage is broken.

It even allows the couples to name a sum of money that will be paid to the spouse if one party breaks the terms of the contract.

The couples would not be allowed to abrogate the statutory or common law rights of their children through the marriage contract.

They could spell out the duties of each partner, such as, one should support the family and the other should do housework.

The couple could also detail which property should belong to the marriage and which should be retained individually.

Bill Would Let Hall County Have Own Juvenile Court

The Legislature's Judiciary Committee voted approval Tuesday to Grand Island Sen. Ralph Kelly's bill to allow Hall County to establish a juvenile court.

If LB669 becomes law, the voters of Hall County could petition for an election to determine whether there would be a juvenile court.

The committee rejected suggestions that Howard County should be part of the juvenile court plan because it is in the same judicial district.

The only separate juvenile courts in the state are located in Lancaster and Douglas counties.

Witnesses said there was a drive under way in Sarpy County to create a separate juvenile court.

"The citizens are ready to go," Kelly said.

The bill lowers the minimum population necessary to establish a juvenile court in a county from 50,000 to 40,000. There are approximately 42,000 people in Hall County.

Busing Controversy Added To Bill On State School Aid

By The Associated Press

Busing for court-ordered desegregation of schools became a part of the already-hotly contested issue of state aid to schools Tuesday.

Omaha School Supt. Owen Knutzen told the Legislature's Education Committee it should amend a pending state aid bill to pick up a portion of the costs of court-ordered desegregation of schools.

The committee heard more than two hours of testimony on Ralston Sen. Gerald Koch's LB631, which would raise state aid to schools by $15 million and set a general fund budget ceiling for school districts.

Knutzen was among more than a dozen witnesses who testified for the bill.

Similar legislation was approved by the Unicameral last year, but senators failed to override a veto by Gov. J. James Exon.

Knutzen said Omaha, under a federal mandate to desegregate schools, would need to purchase 125 buses to transport some 8,000 students, and eventually faces the costs of maintaining the buses plus paying drivers and purchasing fuel.

Knutzen said he hoped state money for court-ordered desegregation would be "an inherent part of a state aid formula."

"The way things are stacked up now," Knutzen said, the school desegregation process could cost an additional $6 million to $7 million. But he added that figure could climb even higher.

Knutzen said he hoped the committee would "consider amendments which would assist in paying for school desegregation costs."

After the hearing, Koch said he hoped to "come in with an amendment relating to transportation that would solve some of the problems Superintendent Knutzen is concerned about."

The bill was opposed by former State Sen. Ramey Whitney and S.H. Brauer Jr., who represented the Nebraska School Improvement Association. Both men, along with three other witnesses, contended that the bill would penalize poorer rural school districts while failing to equalize educational opportunities.

The bill had supporting testimony from school superintendents or their representatives from Lincoln, Bellevue, Papillion, Millard, Gretna, Ralston, Fort Calhoun and Soutdh Sioux City.

Also supporting LB631 were the Board of Education, the Nebraska State Education Association and the Nebraska State School Board Association, along with the Nebraska Council of School Administrators.

Koch's plan is aimed at increasing state aid by $15 million annually until state aide reaches 40% of operating costs. However, one legislature cannot bind a future legislature to such a plan.

State Support Sought To Pay Busing Costs

By The Associated Press

The Omaha-area Unicameral delegation voted Tuesday to request that a "substantial majority" of Omaha school desegregation busing costs be funded by all of Nebraska's taxpayers.

The delegation's action also put most Omaha area legislators on record as favoring general increased state aid to schools this year only if the busing costs are substantially funded through state level tax resources.

Estimates of the busing cost disclosed during the meeting ran from a minimum of $3 million to a maximum of $6 million the first year, because of initial bus purchases and other, ongoing yearly operating costs of $750,000.

Omaha Sens. John Cavanaugh and Eugene Mahoney led the battle to take a strong position on the issue during a delegation caucus over the noon hour.

However, they agreed to abandon temporarily wording that would have locked the delegation into seeking 75% of the overall busing cost from state coffers.

The decision was reached only after a stormy session which rural Omaha Sen. James Dickinson stomped out of after he and Mahoney clashed. Dickinson stomped out of the session.

Dickinson, who is from Millard in suburban Omaha, asked how he could request taxpayers in his district to help fund court-imposed Omaha desegregation busing when they already have high property tax mill levies to support their own schools.

Mahoney said he couldn't help it if the Millard area schools had a low tax base. Cavanaugh said one of the problems with the issue was possible erosion of support from rural Omaha lawmakers.

"That's a statewide obligation and the people of the state ought to help shoulder the obligation," Cavanaugh said of the court-imposed busing order.

The decision to include state-level busing aid through state aid bills was chosen rather than introduction of a separate bill, thus further clouding the fate of Ralston Sen. Gerald Koch's $15 million state aid plan this year.

Chambers' Bill Would Eliminate Omaha Lottery

Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers introduced a bill Tuesday that would eliminate Omaha's Big Green lottery.

Chambers bill requires lotteries to give all their gross proceeds away in prizes or for charitable purposes.

It would eliminate lotteries with paid staff but would allow churches and other nonprofit groups to hold raffles, Chambers said.

Asked about the effect of his LB901 on Big Green, Chambers said, it would "wipe them out."

Emergency Malpractice Bill Offered

A bill introduced in the legislature Tuesday would make sure that Nebraska doctors, and other health care providers, have liability insurance even if an insurance company refuses to write policies for them.

Sen. John Murphy of South Sioux City offered LB917, which would authorize the Department of Insurance to set up a self-assessing pool for doctors in the event no malpractice insurance is available to them.

"It is for use in the case of an emergency only," Murphy said. "If doctors, nurses or anestheologists, or whatever, can still get insurance, there is no problem."

But if doctors, for example, could not get insurance, the Insurance Department would automatically form them into a pool.

They could be assessed not more than 2% of their gross income, which came from their medical work, in the previous calendar year.

If the fund ran short, money would be borrowed from the state general fund tax dollars and repaid through future pool assessments, Murphy said.

The legislation would expire in three years if not renewed by the legislature, Murphy said.

Cover Closes On Election Dispute

By United Press International

Secretary of State Allen Beermann put the "closed" tag on his files Tuesday concerning an election contest filed by former State Sen. Wayne Ziebarth of Wilcox against Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb., in a dispute over the Third Congressional District race two years ago.

Beermann's action follows a Monday night mailing of letters to election officials in the 61 counties in the district that they now have permission to destroy ballots kept for the last two years.

The letters and the "closed" tag were the result of two actions — dissolution of a court order and dismissal of congressional actions.

In that race two years ago, official records list Mrs. Smith the winner with 80,992 votes while Ziebarth had 80,225.

Ziebarth first filed a challenge in the state courts and after being rejected for lack of jurisdiction he filed a challenge with Congress.

Beermann also reported he's closing another election challenge file, one involving former State Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff and the 48th district seat in the Unicameral.

The secretary of state said all he needs is notification from Scotts Bluff County that the ballots in the dispute — Sen. William Nichol of Scottsbluff was declared the winner — have bene destroyed, before the file can be closed in his office.

On Monday, Beermann received letters from the House Subcommittee on Elections and from the state justice department.

The subcommittee letter said the House passed a resolution Monday morning dismissing the Ziebarth challenge. Rep. John H. Dent, D-Penn., subcommittee chairman, said that means "it is no longer necessary to maintain ballot boxes, voting machines or other voting paraphernalia in a condition of segregation or security."

With passage of that resolution, Attorney General Paul Douglas wrote Beermann that Lancaster County District Court Judge William Hastings dissolved his order of April 25, 1975, in which he instructed preservation of all ballots.

"You may now inform the county clerks and election commissioners within the Third Congressional District to proceed to destroy these ballots," Douglas said.

Ford Popularity Said Greater

Omaha (UPI) — Key organizer of the national committee to elect President Ford said Tuesday he felt Ford's popularity was "much greater" than that shown in a poll of select Iowa precinct caucuses.

R. L. "Dick" Herman of Omaha commented on the sampling of 2% or 62 of the 2,600 precincts by the Iowa Republican party Monday night to determine support for Ford and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

The results, compiled by a private polling firm, showed Ford with 45.2% of the delegates, Reagan with 42.5% and 10.6% uncommitted. All Iowa GOP delegate candidates must run uncommitted at the precinct level, and the poll was the only indication of Ford's or Reagan's popularity.

"I don't think that's a representative sampling of any group," Herman told UPI of the results. "I feel confident the President's rating is much greather than that and the Iowa results are not represenative of President Ford's popularity."

Herman, a former Nebraska GOP national committeeman, resigned that post last year and was one of the handful of GOP faithful to organize the Ford election committee last summer.

Herman was active in the 1964 and 1968 GOP presidential campaigns, and Iowa was part of his territory.

In 1972 Herman was in charge of arrangements for the GOP national convention and was in the middle of the convention location controversy between San Diego, Calif., and Miami Beach. Ford was permanent chairman of that convention and Reagan was temporary chairman.

"A new candidate coming into the field, particularly as popular as the former governor is and was," Herman said, "is naturally going to look exceedingly good."

However, Herman said the "outlook will be a lot different" on Reagn once he is pressed on issues such as his stand on Social Security, his $90 billion dollar proposal to return federal responsibilities to state and local governments, and his position of using "wheat as a diplomatic weapon contrasted as that of an economic assist for the farmer in the midwest."

"It's too early to determine what people are going to say and the platforms they will have," Herman, an Omaha trucking executive, said. "President Ford's programs, as to what he has done and will be doing," will be recognized, and he will receive the Republican nomination."

Herman said he was "really surprised" at the poor showing of Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., who had campaigned hard in Iowa, but finished among the 2.9% listed as "others" in Democratic results.

"He's been all over campaigning," Herman said, "and has aspired to the presidency in the past."

Former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter led the pack, and Herman said, "I was a little bit surprised at that. However, the governor's becoming a very popular individual in some quarters."

"I don't think you can discount the tremendous amount of uncommitted delegates," Herman said. The largest bloc of the Iowa Democratic delegates selected, 37.1%, was uncommitted.

In 1964, Herman said Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., lost the New Hampshire primary to then ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge. Lodge lost to then Gov. Nelson Rockefeller in the Oregon primary, but Goldwater won California by 60,000 votes and "that tied the end to it."

"This year, things will look a lot different on the governor (Reagan)," Herman said, "than they did on his first blush when he announced his campaign."

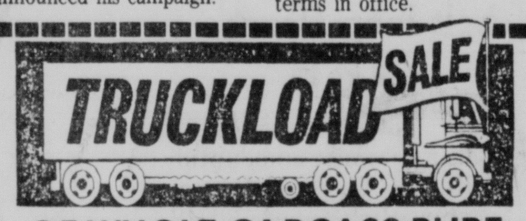

Proud Seeks Debate Over Busing Issue

Omaha (AP) — Richard Proud, Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate, said Tuesday he wants to debate the busing issue with his opponent Rep. John Y. McCollister and State Sen. Ernest Chambers.

In a news release, the former state senator said: "I have opposed forced busing and I have referred to it as legal kidnapping."

He also said if elected, he won't serve more than two terms in office.

Omaha Sen. Ernest Chambers introduced a bill Tuesday that would eliminate Omaha's Big Green lottery.

Chambers bill requires lotteries to give all their gross proceeds away in prizes or for charitable purposes.

It would eliminate lotteries with paid staff but would allow churches and other nonprofit groups to hold raffles, Chambers said.

Asked about the effect of his LB901 on Big Green, Chambers said, it would "wipe them out."

Emergency Malpractice Bill Offered

A bill introduced in the legislature Tuesday would make sure that Nebraska doctors, and other health care providers, have liability insurance even if an insurance company refuses to write policies for them.

Sen. John Murphy of South Sioux City offered LB917, which would authorize the Department of Insurance to set up a self-assessing pool for doctors in the event no malpractice insurance is available to them.

"It is for use in the case of an emergency only," Murphy said. "If doctors, nurses or anestheologists, or whatever, can still get insurance, there is no problem."

But if doctors, for example, could not get insurance, the Insurance Department would automatically form them into a pool.

They could be assessed not more than 2% of their gross income, which came from their medical work, in the previous calendar year.

If the fund ran short, money would be borrowed from the state general fund tax dollars and repaid through future pool assessments, Murphy said.

The legislation would expire in three years if not renewed by the legislature, Murphy said.

Exon Requests Tuesday Date With Senators

Gov. J.J. Exon wants to deliver his annual budget message and state of the state address to the Legislature next Tuesday.

Exon told Speaker Jules Burbach in a letter that "if it is satisfactory and convenient to the Legislature's schedule, I would like to request that time be reserved at 10 a.m. Tuesday, the 27th of January," for the address.

Cover Closes On Election Dispute

By United Press International

Secretary of State Allen Beermann put the "closed" tag on his files Tuesday concerning an election contest filed by former State Sen. Wayne Ziebarth of Wilcox against Rep. Virginia Smith, R-Neb., in a dispute over the Third Congressional District race two years ago.

Beermann's action follows a Monday night mailing of letters to election officials in the 61 counties in the district that they now have permission to destroy ballots kept for the last two years.

The letters and the "closed" tag were the result of two actions — dissolution of a court order and dismissal of congressional actions.

In that race two years ago, official records list Mrs. Smith the winner with 80,992 votes while Ziebarth had 80,225.

Ziebarth first filed a challenge in the state courts and after being rejected for lack of jurisdiction he filed a challenge with Congress.

Beermann also reported he's closing another election challenge file, one involving former State Sen. Terry Carpenter of Scottsbluff and the 48th district seat in the Unicameral.

The secretary of state said all he needs is notification from Scotts Bluff County that the ballots in the dispute — Sen. William Nichol of Scottsbluff was declared the winner — have bene destroyed, before the file can be closed in his office.

On Monday, Beermann received letters from the House Subcommittee on Elections and from the state justice department.

The subcommittee letter said the House passed a resolution Monday morning dismissing the Ziebarth challenge. Rep. John H. Dent, D-Penn., subcommittee chairman, said that means "it is no longer necessary to maintain ballot boxes, voting machines or other voting paraphernalia in a condition of segregation or security."

With passage of that resolution, Attorney General Paul Douglas wrote Beermann that Lancaster County District Court Judge William Hastings dissolved his order of April 25, 1975, in which he instructed preservation of all ballots.

"You may now inform the county clerks and election commissioners within the Third Congressional District to proceed to destroy these ballots," Douglas said.

Ford Popularity Said Greater

Omaha (UPI) — Key organizer of the national committee to elect President Ford said Tuesday he felt Ford's popularity was "much greater" than that shown in a poll of select Iowa precinct caucuses.

R. L. "Dick" Herman of Omaha commented on the sampling of 2% or 62 of the 2,600 precincts by the Iowa Republican party Monday night to determine support for Ford and former California Gov. Ronald Reagan.

The results, compiled by a private polling firm, showed Ford with 45.2% of the delegates, Reagan with 42.5% and 10.6% uncommitted. All Iowa GOP delegate candidates must run uncommitted at the precinct level, and the poll was the only indication of Ford's or Reagan's popularity.

"I don't think that's a representative sampling of any group," Herman told UPI of the resuits. "I feel confident the President's rating is much greather than that and the Iowa results are not represenative of President Ford's popularity."

Herman, a former Nebraska GOP national committeeman, resigned that post last year and was one of the handful of GOP faithful to organize the Ford election committee last summer.

Herman was active in the 1964 and 1968 GOP presidential campaigns, and Iowa was part of his territory.

In 1972 Herman was in charge of arrangements for the GOP national convention and was in the middle of the convention location controversy between San Diego, Calif., and Miami Beach. Ford was permanent chairman of that convention and Reagan was temporary chairman.

"A new candidate coming into the field, particularly as popular as the former governor is and was," Herman said, "is naturally going to look exceedingly good."

However, Herman said the "outlook will be a lot different" on Reagn once he is pressed on issues such as his stand on Social Security, his $90 billion dollar proposal to return federal responsibilities to state and local governments, and his position of using "wheat as a diplomatic weapon contrasted as that of an economic assist for the farmer in the midwest."

"It's too early to determine what people are going to say and the platforms they will have," Herman, an Omaha trucking executive, said. "President Ford's programs, as to what he has done and will be doing," will be recognized, and he will receive the Republican nomination."

Herman said he was "really surprised" at the poor showing of Sen. Henry Jackson, D-Wash., who had campaigned hard in Iowa, but finished among the 2.9% listed as "others" in Democratic results.

"He's been all over campaigning," Herman said, "and has aspired to the presidency in the past."

Former Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter led the pack, and Herman said, "I was a little bit surprised at that. However, the governor's becoming a very popular individual in some quarters."

"I don't think you can discount the tremendous amount of uncommitted delegates," Herman said. The largest bloc of the Iowa Democratic delegates selected, 37.1%, was uncommitted.

In 1964, Herman said Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., lost the New Hampshire primary to then ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge. Lodge lost to then Gov. Nelson Rockefeller in the Oregon primary, but Goldwater won California by 60,000 votes and "that tied the end to it."

"This year, things will look a lot different on the governor (Reagan)," Herman said, "than they did on his first blush when he announced his campaign."

Proud Seeks Debate Over Busing Issue

Omaha (AP) — Richard Proud, Republican candidate for the U.S. Senate, said Tuesday he wants to debate the busing issue with his opponent Rep. John Y. McCollister and State Sen. Ernest Chambers.

In a news release, the former state senator said: "I have opposed forced busing and I have referred to it as legal kidnapping."

He also said if elected, he won't serve more than two terms in office.

Day-Care Is Mothering Too

Grandpa Waddles was sound asleep on the couch, wrapped in a yellow blanket, while a spirited band marched a few feet away.

It was percussion band time at the Gordon house.

Mrs. Barb Gordon, full-time mother of five and part-time mother to an additional six, took a short leave from her duties as band director to get 10-month-old Benjie down from the high chair in the kitchen.

His morning cookie devoured, Benjie (Wismer) was ready to join the rest of the gang in a rousing song of Hickory Dickory Dock.

For about seven years Mrs. Gordon has supported her family by loving and teaching a houseful of children during the day. She is one of the hundreds of Lincoln day care mothers.

Kitchen Set Up

"Who wants to cut and paste?" asked the former elementary school teacher. And five 3- and 4-year-olds stormed out to the kitchen where paper, crayons and homemade flour paste awaited them.

Even Grandpa Waddle (Benjamin LeDuc) opened one almost 2-year-old eye and peered out from beneath the blanket.

His blonde hair awry, like socks just out of the dryer, he trundled out to a kitchen chair to do his special job — carefully pick the paper off a fat, yellow crayon.

Since 3 Weeks Old

Baby Benjie tucked on one hip, Mrs. Gordon leaned down to tousle the brown hair of Staci Van Hoozer, almost 3. "I've had her since she was 3 weeks old."

That's how it goes for day-care mothers. You love them and then their families move, or they grow up and go to school, and you miss them, explained Mrs. Gordon, who cannot remember the exact number of children she has cared for over the past seven years.

"There is one who never left," said Mrs. Dorothy Hof, Mrs. Gordon's mother and simply Grandma to the rest of the gang.

Kami, 3, once one of Mrs. Gordon's day-care charges, was relinquished to Mrs. Gordon by her natural mother, and is now the youngest of the five blonde Gordon girls ranging in age up to 20 years.

Wanted To Be Home

Mrs. Gordon got into the home day-care business about seven or eight years ago. Separated from her husband, she needed some means of support, yet wanted to be home with her family.

"I knew I didn't want four unwed mothers," she joked.

And so she began her "organized chaos."

The day begins early, about 6:30 a.m., when the first of the children, bundled in coats and blankets, begin arriving.

And though there is noise and activity a-plenty, things generally run smoothly. The television is on for Captain Kangaroo and Romper Room, followed by some planned activities — games or crafts or work on letters for the older children.

There must be some organization when seven little ones are underfoot, but Mrs. Gordon tries to keep it as home-like as possible. "I usually try to have the children help with bread baking or cookie making."

Holidays Celebrated

There's a cake and party for every birthday, special Halloween and Christmas parties — the latter complete with a visit from Santa. In the summer there is always time for a swim in the heated, backyard pool.

Mrs. Gordon gave up trying to please seven differing appetites and now asks parents to pack a lunch for each child.

For Mrs. Gordon the job is more than the care of children. She also listens, helps and counsels the adults.

Source Of Advice

She has helped single mothers work out budgets, set up study schedules for parents in school, listened to marital problems and kept an eye out for any developmental problems in the children who come to her each day.

She discovered that one young child appeared to have cerebral palsy. "I literally had to lock the front door and tell the mother to take the child to the hospital," she said.

For women who enjoy children, and have the patience to cope with the energy of preschoolers, being a day-care mother can offer rewards other than financial.

"I have these children enough hours of the day to be an influence," said Mrs. Gordon. "I feel I'm in a teaching situation and a mothering situation."

Step Omitted From Recipe

One step for making Yeast Peppernuts was inadvertently dropped in the Sunday Journal and Star.

After all ingredients are mixed and chilled, the dough should be pinched off in bits and rolled into pencil-like rolls about one-half inch in diameter. Slice into ¾-inch pieces. Place on ungreased baking sheet, making sure there's some spacing between pieces.

For teething biscuits, simply slice into larger sections.

That's how it goes for day-care mothers. You love them and then their families move, or they grow up and go to school, and you miss them, explained Mrs. Gordon, who cannot remember the exact number of children she has cared for over the past seven years.

"There is one who never left," said Mrs. Dorothy Hof, Mrs. Gordon's mother and simply Grandma to the rest of the gang.

Kami, 3, once one of Mrs. Gordon's day-care charges, was relinquished to Mrs. Gordon by her natural mother, and is now the youngest of the five blonde Gordon girls ranging in age up to 20 years.

Wanted To Be Home

Mrs. Gordon got into the home day-care business about seven or eight years ago. Separated from her husband, she needed some means of support, yet wanted to be home with her family.

"I knew I didn't want four unwed mothers," she joked.

And so she began her "organized chaos."

The day begins early, about 6:30 a.m., when the first of the children, bundled in coats and blankets, begin arriving.

And though there is noise and activity a-plenty, things generally run smoothly. The television is on for Captain Kangaroo and Romper Room, followed by some planned activities — games or crafts or work on letters for the older children.

There must be some organization when seven little ones are underfoot, but Mrs. Gordon tries to keep it as home-like as possible. "I usually try to have the children help with bread baking or cookie making."

Holidays Celebrated

There's a cake and party for every birthday, special Halloween and Christmas parties — the latter complete with a visit from Santa. In the summer there is always time for a swim in the heated, backyard pool.

Mrs. Gordon gave up trying to please seven differing appetites and now asks parents to pack a lunch for each child.

For Mrs. Gordon the job is more than the care of children. She also listens, helps and counsels the adults.

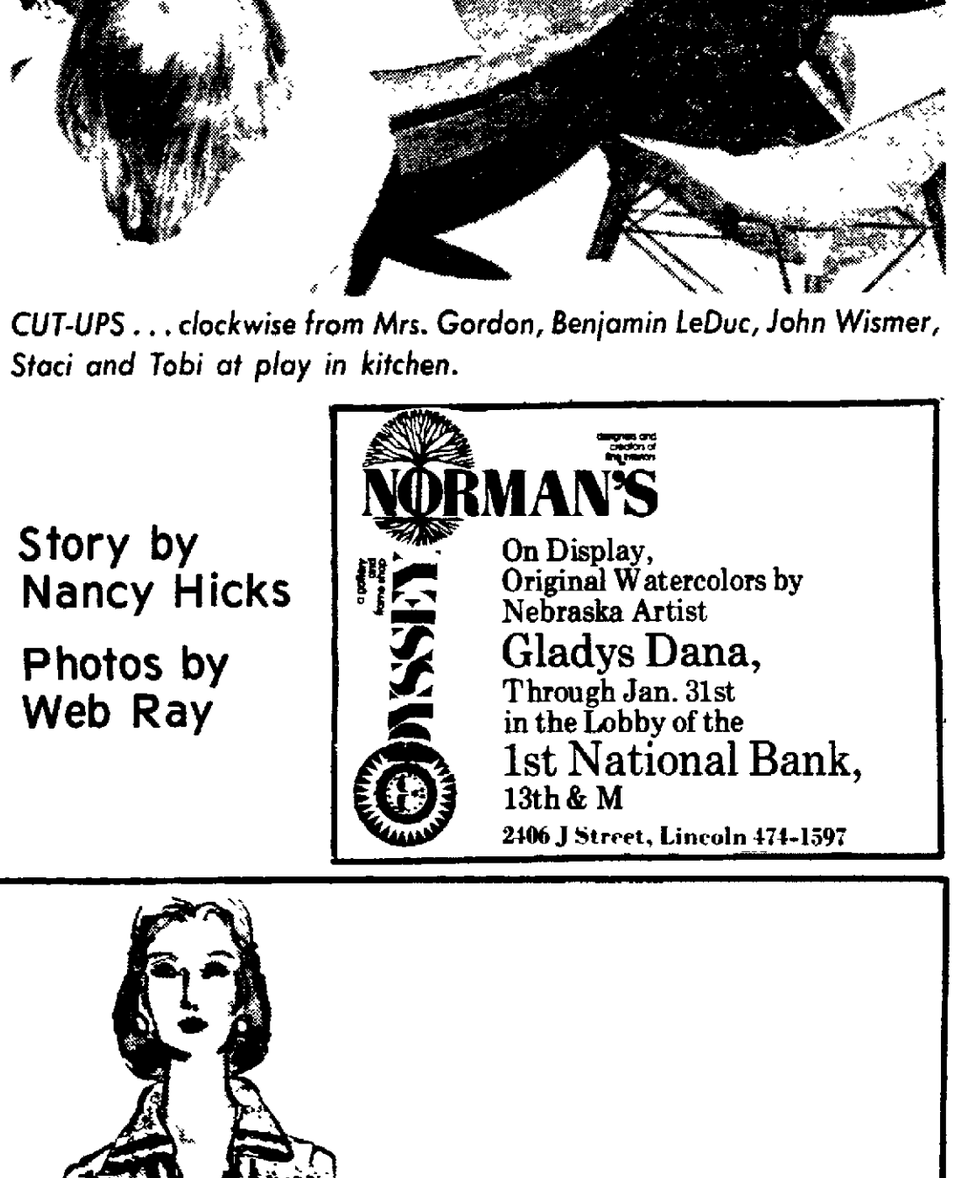

Source Of Advice

She has helped single mothers work out budgets, set up study schedules for parents in school, listened to marital problems and kept an eye out for any developmental problems in the children who come to her each day.

She discovered that one young child appeared to have cerebral palsy. "I literally had to lock the front door and tell the mother to take the child to the hospital," she said.

For women who enjoy children, and have the patience to cope with the energy of preschoolers, being a day-care mother can offer rewards other than financial.

"I have these children enough hours of the day to be an influence," said Mrs. Gordon. "I feel I'm in a teaching situation and a mothering situation."

Step Omitted From Recipe

One step for making Yeast Peppernuts was inadvertently dropped in the Sunday Journal and Star.

After all ingredients are mixed and chilled, the dough should be pinched off in bits and rolled into pencil-like rolls about one-half inch in diameter. Slice into ¾-inch pieces. Place on ungreased baking sheet, making sure there's some spacing between pieces.

For teething biscuits, simply slice into larger sections

Bringing Computers Down To Earth

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Mel Ray plans to remove the "priesthood" that so many people think exists in computing and provide some down-home, practical, everyday use for Nebraskans.

Director of the University of Nebraska computer network, Ray occasionally lets slip some jargon from that technical altar — easily maligned, little understood and often feared for increasingly omnipotent capabilities.

But Ray would program a better quality of life, declaring computers may "play a very significant role in our future."

Ray's vision extends beyond NU, where he heads a staff of 215 in a 24-hour-a-day operation with a $3.2 million budget. That supports $7 million worth of equipment linked by high-speed telephone lines to provide common services to the Lincoln, Omaha and Medical Center campuses.

Scratching Surface

The network is a "significant achievement in computerdom," Ray said, claiming similar attempts by other universities have not been that successful. Yet "We have just really scratched the surface."

That's why he chose to come last June from Stanford (Calif.) University — not to develop new hardware of merely another intricate payroll system, but because he saw "a unique opportunity" to make better use of what we've got — in and out of NU.

For example, NU staff work has already produced a prototype agricultural network to put computer information in the hands of farmers, ranchers and other ag interests.

Once in operation, a statewide "agri-net" would allow a farmer to go to his county agent, who would feed into a terminal facts such as climate, land location and history, proposed use and livestock information.

Then, Ray said, the NU computer network would "spit back" advice rapidly on feed mix for a cow or pig, what seeds to plant and what types of chemicals to use.

Improving Good Life

Increased yields or production, Ray deduces, will make one contribution to his insistent theme of improving "the good life" in Nebraska.

That includes "real opportunities in medicine." He cited the current problem of physicians' reluctance to "break away from the urban area" and its ready medical information.

Ray envisions the NU NU computer network's moving those up-to-date details on demand to even the remotest Nebraska locales, to ease and speed doctors' work. That also has implications for communities short on or without doctors.

While other states spawn such ideas, Ray said many suffer inertia or population problems, but Nebraska is "in an optimal niche to get serious" about linking the city with the country.

Head of Data Center

At 39, Ray brings into that niche a 20-year information processing career. The Ohio native spent eight years at Stanford, first in the Linear Accelerator Center for energy research, then heading the university data center where he played a principal role in reorganizing it along current NU lines.

The NU computer network serves three areas: academic, for classroom instruction and research; administrative, keeping track of buildings, people, inventories, budgets and students; and medicine, for UNMC patient care records, hospital support and management tasks.

For example, a UNL professor who only needs to do occasional computing can use a central, walk-in terminal, or often, one in his own department. High-volume users may have terminals in their own offices (the system takes care of pesky details, right down to billing for time) and some professors have portable units for work at home by telephone.

However, Ray said, administrative computer functions are "not designed to answer the kinds of questions that the university finds itself dealing with, day to day."

Difficult Job

Insufficient information or related pieces spread at varying stages of currency throughout the system mean that "top management is faced with the very difficult talk" of deciding where to spend limited dollars best, he said.

A seemingly insignificant decision on how the process operates today "can dig you into some pretty deep holes rather quickly."

Meanwhile, planning is underway to improve academic computing, and the hospital information system is being evaluated to improve patient care support at UNMC.

Eventually, Ray said, he wants to "integrate all three of these plans" to arm NU scouts with a decades-ahead computer eye that will also keep tabs on met or unmet tasks as they happen.

Said another way, Ray is forging electricity and tapes with steel into a readily available, reliable network to "support some exciting things that are going on" at NU.

Sometimes You Make Your Own Luck

(Today's "Write On" contributor is the senior high school librarian at Beatrice.)

By JANE LEECH

The day was clear and I had two hours and a tank of gas, so I drove across town into a section where the spacious homes of the twenties and thirties were sinking into decay. The money had been there, and I gambled that some of the former wealth might have sifted into junk shops or antique stores.

I cruised for about half an hour and finally found a shop on a side street. Through the window I could see a mixture of junk and some things I wanted to look at. I pushed open the door and walked in.

A bearded man, probably in his fifties, was seated at an old roll-top desk. He rose awkwardly from his chair and braced himself with a cane. I noted he dragged one leg slightly and moved with uncertain steps.

"Good day, madame," he said.

"Good morning," I replied. My eyes were going over the crowded shelves.

"You come from far?" he asked, moving across the room toward me.

"No, just across town — about twenty minutes," I answered. I kept moving down the aisle ahead of him.

"You would like to look? Yes?"

"Oh, yes. May I?"

"Indeed."

He shuffled back toward his desk. "Please bring me anything you want to ask about. I am recovering from a stroke, you see—" He dragged his weak leg back to the chair and sat down heavily.

I spent half an hour looking and found one thing — a blue glass vase about ten inches high. It had a ruffled top and a diamond pattern. When I held it up to the light it shone with a fiery opalescent red. On the base was an N with a line underneath.

"A real Northwood," I thought. The price was on the bottom. Two dollars! A steal. I took the vase to his desk.

"I want this," I said, putting two dollars on his desk.

"Ah, yes," he said. "You know beautiful things, I can see. Is there anything else?"

"Well — I could look."

A cabinet with glass doors was next to the desk. I could see some oriental plates, a teapot, and some vases. Several price tags in the hundreds were visible. The bearded proprietor shuffled toward me. "You like orientalia?"

"Oh, yes," I said, "but I can't afford these things." I had probably added fifty dollars to my net worth by the purchase of the Northwood, but I really didn't have the money for objects d'art costing hundreds of dollars.

"These are my beauties," he continued. "I hope I never have to sell them."

He moved toward the cabinet and pulled a key ring from his pocket. He unlocked the cabinet and took out a black bottle-shaped vase.

"This is a 'mirror black' made in China in the 1600's. The Chinese called it 'black gold,' or 'wu chin' in their language. They put as many as nine glazes on it, six by blowing and three more by painting."

He held the vase so the light shone on it directly. "Feel it," he continued. "There is nothing like it."

I stroked the vase. The texture was indescribable, and the black glaze shone under the light with tiny pinpoints of color.

"Beautiful," I murmured.

With his right hand, the shop keeper replaced the black vase in the cabinet, his left arm trembling as he leaned on his cane.

"Now I'll show you my greatest treasure," he said. His voice lowered, and I saw the trembling increase. He removed a small bulbous vase from the case. "This came from the Han Dynasty and was made about 200 B. C. It's fully authenticated," he continued. "I'll show you." A paper was inside the vase.

He handed me the vase to hold while he removed the paper. As God is my witness, I don't know how it happened, but in the exchange, the vase fell to the floor and shattered into several pieces.

The man made a low moan like a sob. Nothing was said. He tried to kneel, but could not.

"H-hand me the paper," he finally said in a hollow voice. There was the vase pictured in an article clipped from a trade journal. The valuation was $42,000.

"Oh, my poor beauty," he murmured.

I was stunned. In a moment's time I had incurred a $42,000 debt.

The owner went back to his desk and put his head down. While he sat there, I tried to think. I was too shocked to have any coherent thoughts. I was scared. I knelt and gathered the shards together. At least I would have the pieces.

Mechanically, I laid each piece on my outspread handkerchief. The last piece was apparently the base. I turned it over in my hand and saw the numbers 561. Two hundred B. C.? Chinese? Arabic numbers? No way.

It had to be a cheap imitation. Probably a forty-two cent Mexican pottery. Play it cool, old gal.

"Mister, —" I began.

He raised his head. "Ransome. John Ransome."

"I'm sorry, but I have no idea how I can pay for this vase."

"My lawyer," he said, and pulled a card out of the desk. "You break it, you buy it — everybody knows that."

"I'll pay for the vase, Mr. Ransome. Here's your money." I threw forty-two cents on the desk. "And forget about the one hundred thousand per cent mark up — Mr. Ransome!"

I grabbed the blue Northwood and ran to the door. Out to the car, key in ignition. He ran after me. No cane. No limp. He reached for the door. I pressed the lock, and gunned the motor.

"Thief!" I shouted.

ARE WE LOSING RESPECT FOR HUMAN LIFE??

JANUARY 22, 1973, THE SUPREME COURT RULED THE UNBORN ARE NOT LEGAL PERSONS.

Yet by the 18th to 25th day after conception, the unborn child's heart is beating. The unborn baby moves and brain waves can be measured by the sixth week. At the eighth week the unborn baby swims freely within the amniotic fluid and an electrocardiogram can be taken at the ninth week. The human body is completely formed at ten weeks and all organs are functioning at the eleventh week. The unborn child is breathing, swallowing and AND CAN FEEL PAIN when most abortions are done.

Each year more than a million unborn babies are destroyed by any one of five different methods of abortion. These are D & C, suction, salt poisoning, prostaglandin and hysterotomy (Caeserean section.)

Abortion can be said to be comparable to intrauterine child battering. Would you allow your neighbor to abuse his child without speaking up? Only continued, forceful public opposition can stop this act against helpless, voiceless, unborn children.

AS THE SITUATION NOW EXISTS LEGALLY, ONLY THREE THINGS ARE NECESSARY TO OBTAIN AN ABORTION. THE BABY MUST BE WITHIN HIS MOTHER, HIS MOTHER DOES NOT WANT HIM, AND SHE HAS FOUND A PHYSICIAN WHO IS WILLING TO PERFORM THE ABORTION.

Our group's goal is to change the law governing abortion.

What Should She Say About Previous Job?

DEAR ABBY: For three months during the past year I worked as a part-time secretary for a lawyer. I quit because I felt rather uncomfortable about certain things.

To start off with, my boss told me when I answered the phone to say that he wasn't in. It seems I had to constantly lie to his clients. Also, I know that he owed people a lot of money and was constantly dodging them.

Because I felt that he wasn't on the up and up, I quit.

Now the problem is this: I plan to look for another job, but what do I put on the application blank where it says, "The reason for leaving your job."

If I put down, "For personal reasons," it sounds as though he made a pass at me, which isn't true.

CLIFTON, N.J.

DEAR CLIFTON: Why not say that you were not happy with the working "conditions," which you weren't!

DEAR ABBY: I am 16 and very mature for my age. I have a 4-month-old baby son and a full-time job to support us.

To get to the point, I'm very much hung up on a guy who is 20. He's a real great guy until he starts drinking, then he gets terribly mean towards everyone — including me. He wants to fight, and he says a lot of things for which he is sorry afterwards.

When he's sober he begs me to forgive him, saying he didn't mean to hurt me, and because I love him I give him another chance.

I can't count the chances I've given him already.

Should I break off with him the next time he gets drunk, or stay with him and hope he outgrows his drinking problem? He keeps promising he will do so.

HOPELESS IN MONTANA

DEAR HOPELESS: Be a wise girl and quit seeing him right now. Tell him that AFTER he has solved his drinking problem, you will pick up where you left off. No one "outgrows" alcoholism. Suggest he call Alcoholics Anonymous, and if he's as "great" as you say he is, he will.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

Opening lead - king of spades.

Some of the deductions that can be drawn during the play of a hand are downright astounding and, to some players, they suggest a form of magic. But in most deals where sensationally effective plays occur, the logic is usually there to justify them. All one has to do is to take advantage of the clues that point the way.

Consider this deal where East-West cooperated perfectly to defeat four hearts. West led the king of spades and East, having donned his thinking cap, overtook the king with the ace and returned a diamond!

This magnificent play scored an instant success when West ruffed the diamond to bring the defense its second trick.

West, not to be outdone by partner, then played a low spade at trick three! This likewise proved to be highly successful when East won the spade return with his jack and led a second round of diamonds to put the contract down one.

When the play is examined microscopically, it is found that East's first two plays make a lot of sense. He had a right to assume from the bidding that South had four diamonds and that West therefore had none.

West's low spade play at trick three was equally sound. He realized that in order to stop the contract he had to put partner on lead to achieve another diamond ruff, and that by far his best chance of accomplishing this was to return a low spade. This would succeed if East had either no more spades or had started with the A-J doubleton.

Both defenders exercised the magic touch sometimes required to defeat a contract.

Turnabout Is Fair Play; Try Judo

LONDON (AP) — If your husband is a wife beater, learn judo and hit back, a British family doctor said.

Dr. John Abels, writing in the family doctors' newspaper, Medical News, said that's the advice he gave one young wife who came to him after her husband beat her.

He suggested she join his own daughter at judo classes and he didn't see her agan for two years.

When she did return to his office, Abels said, he assumed it was the old problem again — but he was wrong.

She told him she had taken his advice and then, six months after she started the class, her husband came home drunk and went for her.

She said she threw him over her shoulder and he landed with his feet sticking out of the front room window.

"He got up, looked at me in bewilderment, but he has never touched me since," she told the doctor. "I had to get the ambulance that night and he received 14 stitches."

Disney To Film 'The Cat From Outer Space'

Los Angeles (AP) — Cartoonist Ted Key knows his animals and hence has sold a third story to Walt Disney Productions.

Key, creator of the cartoon "Hazel," created an original story and screenplay, "The Cat from Outer Space," which will be produced and directed by Norman Tokar. Key also wrote "The $1,000,000 Duck" (1971) and the unreleased "Gus," about a donkey who kicks for a pro football team.

dear abby — What Should She Say About Previous Job?

DEAR ABBY: For three months during the past year I worked as a part-time secretary for a lawyer. I quit because I felt rather uncomfortable about certain things.

To start off with, my boss told me when I answered the phone to say that he wasn't in. It seems I had to constantly lie to his clients. Also, I know that he owed people a lot of money and was constantly dodging them.

Because I felt that he wasn't on the up and up, I quit.

Now the problem is this: I plan to look for another job, but what do I put on the application blank where it says, "The reason for leaving your job."

If I put down, "For personal reasons," it sounds as though he made a pass at me, which isn't true.

CLIFTON, N.J.

DEAR CLIFTON: Why not say that you were not happy with the working "conditions," which you weren't!

DEAR ABBY: I am 16 and very mature for my age. I have a 4-month-old baby son and a full-time job to support us.

To get to the point, I'm very much hung up on a guy who is 20. He's a real great guy until he starts drinking, then he gets terribly mean towards everyone — including me. He wants to fight, and he says a lot of things for which he is sorry afterwards.

When he's sober he begs me to forgive him, saying he didn't mean to hurt me, and because I love him I give him another chance.

I can't count the chances I've given him already.

Should I break off with him the next time he gets drunk, or stay with him and hope he outgrows his drinking problem? He keeps promising he will do so.

DEAR HOPELESS: Be a wise girl and quit seeing him right now. Tell him that AFTER he has solved his drinking problem, you will pick up where you left off. No one "outgrows" alcoholism. Suggest he call Alcoholics Anonymous, and if he's as "great" as you say he is, he will.

State Cattle Figures Up 20% Over '75

Nebraska cattle feeders were fattening 1,390,000 cattle for slaughter market on Jan. 1, up 20% from last year but 9% below two years ago, according to the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics.

During the October-December quarter, Nebraska feeders marketed 680,000 fat cattle, down 14% from last year, the bureau reported Monday. Placements during this same period amounted to 1,038,000, an increase of 9% from last year and 1% above two years ago.

Steers and heifers on feed Jan. 1 weighing 900 pounds or more totaled 526,000, up 10% from last year. Those in the 700-899 pound group numbered 508,000, up 19% from last year. Those in the under 700 pound category totaled 355,000, up 43% from a year ago.

Nebraska feeders intend to market 870,000 cattle in the January-March quarter, 15% more than last year's marketings, the division revealed.

Group Aim: Alternatives For Energy

A group of energy producers and consumers favoring development of non-polluting energy sources expects to be incorporated as Midwest Energy Alternatives (MEA) sometime this week.

About 30 people met Tuesday afternoon to discuss membership in the non-profit organization.

MEA plans to promote energy conservation and alternative energy systems, increase communication between producers and consumers and work for government-supported energy programs.

MEA's initial goals include developing an energy resource center, promoting conferences and workshops, making legislative and administrative contacts and supporting development of "a major research center in the Midwest."

Membership fees range from $10 a year for individual consumers to $500 a year for businesses.

Businesses or individuals interested in membership should contact Lincoln B. Justice of Martell at (402) 794-5310.

Bilingual Ballot Meeting Slated

Procedures for allowing bilingual ballots in Scotts Bluff and Thurston Counties will be established at a Jan. 29 meeting in Lincoln, Secretary of State Allen J. Beermann said Tuesday.

Attending that meeting, Beermann said, will be federal officials, the county attorneys and clerks from those two counties and representatives of the University of Nebraska language department.

Under federal law, counties were 5% or more of the population speaks a language other than English must offer voting assistance to those minorities.

The U.S. Census Bureau has notified Beermann that Scotts Bluff and Thurston Counties meet that standard. The purpose of the bilingual ballots is to protect the voting rights of all Americans.

In Scotts Bluff County, the ballots and instructions will have to be printed in both English and Spanish.

Assistance may also include interpreters, since the Indian language (Winnebago) used in Thurston County is primarily a spoken, not a written, language.

If lengthy initiative drives, such as the Political Reform Act, get on the ballot, translation to a written form could prove difficult. Prior to balloting, each proposal must be printed in both languages for publication in newspapers.

Small Town Rescue Units Won't Need Full Training

Scottsbluff (AP) — Resident of Harrisburg and other small Panhandle communities will not lose ambulance and rescue services because of state training requirements for attendants, said Lee Ehlers, director of Emergency Medical Services (EMS).

"Communities can be assured they will be able to run rescue units. because training will be made available to them," Mrs. Ehlers said.

She said the state board of ambulance advisers tentatively has agreed to grant waivers for attendants who have completed advanced Red Cross courses.

The 81-hour training course requirement was scheduled to go into effect July 1. About 160 Panhandle residents have completed the training, offered at Chadron, Gordon, Alliance and other communities.

About 44 area ambulance and rescue units are affected by the state requirement.

Members of the Banner County volunteer fire department say they will have trouble meeting the 81-hour training course requirement because of the time and travel involved.

"We'd like to have 15 to 18 members take this course," said John Bartling, a department member. However, he said he doubted many of the department's 62 members were willing to travel to Scottsbluff for the weekly three-hour course.

PSC Directive Attracts Fire Of Richendifer

Former State Sen. Blair Richendifer, a candidate for the Nebraska Public Service Commission, Tuesday criticized a commission directive that has been labeled a "gag rule."

Richendifer, who is running for the commission in the northeast Nebraska district represented by commission Chairman Duane Gay of Columbus, called the directive "ill-conceived and demoralizing."

The directive was passed 3-1 Monday by the commission, and prohibits commission staff from acting or speaking in the name of the commission without prior authorization from a commission majority.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — What with the winter social season swinging along, I got into one of those standup cocktail parties the other day. Nothing compares to such torture — except maybe a flogging through the Fleet.

"Don't get up. Please!" said the hostess. I'd found a corner out of the way and was just getting comfortable. But no. The hostess on these gigs has the eyesight of a vulture.

She sees you're down and she begins circling, circling. ("See them buzzards, podner?" I said. "Reckon they know we're down to our last canteen of water.")

The hostess came at me on my blind side. Zeroed in on me out of the sun.

When she spoke I spilled my drink on my pants. Then I jumped up and clicked my heels like a von Stroheim movie of World War I.

She said: "Oh, you shouldn't have gotten up. Have you tried the pu-pus yet?" (Pu-pus is Hawaiian for hors d'oeuvres. Shows her suntanned soul.)

The message: "Come out of your corner, little Jack Horner and sing for your supper."

☆ ☆ ☆

So you want to be The world's greatest lover? Play the guitar. That's the advice from a romantic Italian named Spinelli.

"While a man plays guitar, he can talk and make love, too." (He has his hands full though.)

Anyway, what the chap means is if you play trumpet, the chicks are going to look for a dude who puckers up his lips for more romantic pruposes.

(I got out my guitar and plucked off a little number: "Old Pal, Why Don't You Answer Me?" But nobody was here to hear it but the cat.)

☆ ☆ ☆

"Ah, love, love! When thou seizeth us,

"We may well say, goodbye prudence!"

Speak to a poet about love and he covers the scratch paper with wall-to-wall iambics.

I keep a file on love. Love unrequieted. Love in bloom. Love among the natives. It is easy to get in love. Getting out is another matter. (He who rides the tiger cannot dismount.)

"Maid of Athens, ere we part,
"Give, oh give me back my heart!"

So in the shadow of the Acropolis, a maid name of Angelika, 20, thought her boy friend, Spiridon, was too friendly with other girls. She took a razor blade and they had to put Spiridon together again like a jigsaw puzzle.

☆ ☆ ☆

Now Angelika figured she had gone too far. (A 20-year old chick is flighty.) She decided to leave the cruel world. She dived out of a window.

Fortunately, the window was only one floor high. So she wound up in the same hospital with Spiridon and they were married.

I imagine Spiridon didn't keep a razor and grew a beard.

(Great opportunity for the razor blade company's commercial: "More close shaves with bleep-bleep than any other blade!"

If you're looking for romance, never mind the standup cocktail party. Such parties are given so that hostess and invited chicks can case each others clothes. ("Marked down to only $399? You don't say!")

It is better to die on your feet than to live on your knees.

Off-Duty Officers Keep Cars, Curb Crime

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — John Szesnat was about to pick up his son at school when the radio in his cruiser blared out the police code for a bank robbery in progress.

"I was right across the street," said Szesnat, a deputy in the Orange County Sheriff's Department. "And because I was in street clothes, I just walked into the bank and told the guy it was all over. He sure was surprised."

Szesnat's arrest of the bank robber was only one of several hundred attributed to off-duty deputies in this Central Florida county since police officers were allowed the full-time use of their patrol cars 10 months ago.

Officials call the new plan an important new police technique and recommend the program to police departments caught in the squeeze between tight budgets and increased demands for protection.

"That's what happened here," says Capt. Stan Yurkiewicz, commander of the sheriff's patrol division. "We needed to find a way to increase service without having to keep going back to the county commission for more money.

"Of course, our first choice would be to hire more policemen, but the way the economy is these days we just couldn't. So we started looking around for alternatives and hit upon this concept of letting officers keep their patrol cars as their own."

In adopting the plan, Yurkiewicz said, Orange County joined about 20 other police agencies around the nation now using the system developed by the Indianapolis, Ind., police department.

"We liked the idea," he said. "We had all these trained men on the street so why not make more use of them. In adopting the plan, we've got 24-hour-a-day service for seven days a week instead of eight hours a day for five days a week."

And in addition to increasing available manpower, Yurkiewicz said the program also has boosted the morale of deputies.

"It's an economic benefit for the officer because he has private transportation for free," Yurkiewicz says. "And here in Orange county, we encourage our officers to use their cars in their everyday lives. They go to the supermarket in them, haul their kids around town, take their wives out to dinner or just about anything."

There are 70 deputies now in the program, about half the force, and those in the program do have some restrictions in the private use of their marked cruisers.

"While in the unit they must dress in a certain manner," Yurkiewicz says. "For example, they can't drive around town on the weekend with a two-day beard and wearing a tee shirt and cut-offs."

"And because there is a potential for criticism, we don't want them parked at any lounges or clubs."

Carl Reiner Getting Wish

Los Angeles (AP) — Carl Reiner got his wish — to play an angel who grants wishes to earthlings.

Reiner will star in "Good Heavens," a comedy series scheduled for the ABC television network in early March. He will play Mr. Angel, who will reward citizens for good deeds, provided their wish is something money can't buy.

State Cattle Figures Up 20% Over '75

Nebraska cattle feeders were fattening 1,390,000 cattle for slaughter market on Jan. 1, up 20% from last year but 9% below two years ago, according to the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics.

During the October-December quarter, Nebraska feeders marketed 680,000 fat cattle, down 14% from last year, the bureau reported Monday. Placements during this same period amounted to 1,038,000, an increase of 9% from last year and 1% above two years ago.

Steers and heifers on feed Jan. 1 weighing 900 pounds or more totaled 526,000, up 10% from last year. Those in the 700-899 pound group numbered 508,000, up 19% from last year. Those in the under 700 pound category totaled 355,000, up 43% from a year ago.

Nebraska feeders intend to market 870,000 cattle in the January-March quarter, 15% more than last year's marketings, the division revealed.

Group Aim: Alternatives For Energy

A group of energy producers and consumers favoring development of non-polluting energy sources expects to be incorporated as Midwest Energy Alternatives (MEA) sometime this week.

About 30 people met Tuesday afternoon to discuss membership in the non-profit organization.

MEA plans to promote energy conservation and alternative energy systems, increase communication between producers and consumers and work for government-supported energy programs.

MEA's initial goals include developing an energy resource center, promoting conferences and workshops, making legislative and administrative contacts and supporting development of "a major research center in the Midwest."

Membership fees range from $10 a year for individual consumers to $500 a year for businesses.

Businesses or individuals interested in membership should contact Lincoln B. Justice of Martell at (402) 794-5310.

Bilingual Ballot Meeting Slated

Procedures for allowing bilingual ballots in Scotts Bluff and Thurston Counties will be established at a Jan. 29 meeting in Lincoln, Secretary of State Allen J. Beermann said Tuesday.

Attending that meeting, Beermann said, will be federal officials, the county attorneys and clerks from those two counties and representatives of the University of Nebraska language department.

Under federal law, counties were 5% or more of the population speaks a language other than English must offer voting assistance to those minorities.

The U.S. Census Bureau has notified Beermann that Scotts Bluff and Thurston Counties meet that standard. The purpose of the bilingual ballots is to protect the voting rights of all Americans.

In Scotts Bluff County, the ballots and instructions will have to be printed in both English and Spanish.

Assistance may also include interpreters, since the Indian language (Winnebago) used in Thurston County is primarily a spoken, not a written, language.

If lengthy initiative drives, such as the Political Reform Act, get on the ballot, translation to a written form could prove difficult. Prior to balloting, each proposal must be printed in both languages for publication in newspapers.

Small Town Rescue Units Won't Need Full Training

Scottsbluff (AP) — Resident of Harrisburg and other small Panhandle communities will not lose ambulance and rescue services because of state training requirements for attendants, said Lee Ehlers, director of Emergency Medical Services (EMS).

"Communities can be assured they will be able to run rescue units. because training will be made available to them," Mrs. Ehlers said.

She said the state board of ambulance advisers tentatively has agreed to grant waivers for attendants who have completed advanced Red Cross courses.

The 81-hour training course requirement was scheduled to go into effect July 1. About 160 Panhandle residents have completed the training, offered at Chadron, Gordon, Alliance and other communities.

About 44 area ambulance and rescue units are affected by the state requirement.

Members of the Banner County volunteer fire department say they will have trouble meeting the 81-hour training course requirement because of the time and travel involved.

"We'd like to have 15 to 18 members take this course," said John Bartling, a department member. However, he said he doubted many of the department's 62 members were willing to travel to Scottsbluff for the weekly three-hour course.

PSC Directive Attracts Fire Of Richendifer

Former State Sen. Blair Richendifer, a candidate for the Nebraska Public Service Commission, Tuesday criticized a commission directive that has been labeled a "gag rule."

Richendifer, who is running for the commission in the northeast Nebraska district represented by commission Chairman Duane Gay of Columbus, called the directive "ill-conceived and demoralizing."

The directive was passed 3-1 Monday by the commission, and prohibits commission staff from acting or speaking in the name of the commission without prior authorization from a commission majority.

Zany Miss Blue Big Hit On Radio

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "Dear Miss Blue, I am interested in joining the women's lib movement, and I'd like to know if it's all right for me to burn my bra."

"Go ahead and burn your bra if you want to," Miss Blue responds on the air, "but make sure you take it off, first."

Some of Miss Blue's advice to her more than 100,000 listeners probably would make Ann Landers cringe and send Abigail Van Buren into hysterics, but perhaps that's the secret to her success.

In the past few months she has become one of the best-known radio personalities in the St. Louis area.

Miss Blue in real life is Miriam Blue, a 62-year-old black grandmother from East St. Louis who, until recently, drew her only income from a seven-day-a-week cleaning job at KMOX. The CBS-owned radio station claims 48 per cent of the market in an area where 36 stations fill the airwaves.

Twice a week now, Miriam Blue parks her trash can and strips off her rubber gloves to sit behind a microphone and answer questions read to her by Jack Carney, zany radio veteran and irrepressible funnyman.

Carney, whose natural humor often wanders to the outer edge of respectability, is a master of the double entendre. Some of his questions might seem risque on a live show, even when directed at a woman who professes to be "more than a little religious."

But Miss Blue, who doesn't seem flustered by the knowledge that thousands of people are waiting for her answer, seems unable to see the risque elements of a question and comes up with an answer so straight that it's funny.

"Dear Miss Blue," Carney reads from a card, "I can't seem to get close to my husband anymore since he bought this big dog that crowds in between us when we are in bed. What can I do about it?"

"That's simple," she answers immediately. "Get a bigger bed and then the dog won't have to crowd you."

Miss Blue, whose cheerful "All is well" greeting was well known to station employes before it became her trademark on the air, says the instant fame has not changed her life. Even though she is now a member of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, she says her greatest joys are still her daughter and grandchildren with whom she lives.

"I'm still the same old me," she says.

She admits that it's fun to be recognized on the street by people who smile and shout "All is well." And she enjoys being asked to make personal appearances at stores where "All is well" T-shirts and caps have appeared on the shelves.

POSTCARD by Stan Delaplane

San Francisco — What with the winter social season swinging along, I got into one of those standup cocktail parties the other day. Nothing compares to such torture — except maybe a flogging through the Fleet.

"Don't get up. Please!" said the hostess. I'd found a corner out of the way and was just getting comfortable. But no. The hostess on these gigs has the eyesight of a vulture.

She sees you're down and she begins circling, circling. ("See them buzzards, podner?" I said. "Reckon they know we're down to our last canteen of water.")

The hostess came at me on my blind side. Zeroed in on me out of the sun.

When she spoke I spilled my drink on my pants. Then I jumped up and clicked my heels like a von Stroheim movie of World War I.

She said: "Oh, you shouldn't have gotten up. Have you tried the pu-pus yet?" (Pu-pus is Hawaiian for hors d'oeuvres. Shows her suntanned soul.)

The message: "Come out of your corner, little Jack Horner and sing for your supper."

☆ ☆ ☆

So you want to be The world's greatest lover? Play the guitar. That's the advice from a romantic Italian named Spinelli.

"While a man plays guitar, he can talk and make love, too." (He has his hands full though.)

Anyway, what the chap means is if you play trumpet, the chicks are going to look for a dude who puckers up his lips for more romantic pruposes.

(I got out my guitar and plucked off a little number: "Old Pal, Why Don't You Answer Me?" But nobody was here to hear it but the cat.)

☆ ☆ ☆

"Ah, love, love! When thou seizeth us,

"We may well say, goodbye prudence!"

Speak to a poet about love and he covers the scratch paper with wall-to-wall iambics.

I keep a file on love. Love unrequieted. Love in bloom. Love among the natives. It is easy to get in love. Getting out is another matter. (He who rides the tiger cannot dismount.)

"Maid of Athens, ere we part,

"Give, oh give me back my heart!"

So in the shadow of the Acropolis, a maid name of Angelika, 20, thought her boy friend, Spiridon, was too friendly with other girls. She took a razor blade and they had to put Spiridon together again like a jigsaw puzzle.

☆ ☆ ☆

Now Angelika figured she had gone too far. (A 20-year old chick is flighty.) She decided to leave the cruel world. She dived out of a window.

Fortunately, the window was only one floor high. So she wound up in the same hospital with Spiridon and they were married.

I imagine Spiridon didn't keep a razor and grew a beard.

(Great opportunity for the razor blade company's commercial: "More close shaves with bleep-bleep than any other blade!"

If you're looking for romance, never mind the standup cocktail party. Such parties are given so that hostess and invited chicks can case each others clothes. ("Marked down to only $399? You don't say!")

It is better to die on your feet than to live on your knees.

Off-Duty Officers Keep Cars, Curb Crime

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — John Szesnat was about to pick up his son at school when the radio in his cruiser blared out the police code for a bank robbery in progress.

"I was right across the street," said Szesnat, a deputy in the Orange County Sheriff's Department. "And because I was in street clothes, I just walked into the bank and told the guy it was all over. He sure was surprised."

Szesnat's arrest of the bank robber was only one of several hundred attributed to off-duty deputies in this Central Florida county since police officers were allowed the full-time use of their patrol cars 10 months ago.

Officials call the new plan an important new police technique and recommend the program to police departments caught in the squeeze between tight budgets and increased demands for protection.

"That's what happened here," says Capt. Stan Yurkiewicz, commander of the sheriff's patrol division. "We needed to find a way to increase service without having to keep going back to the county commission for more money.

"Of course, our first choice would be to hire more policemen, but the way the economy is these days we just couldn't. So we started looking around for alternatives and hit upon this concept of letting officers keep their patrol cars as their own."

In adopting the plan, Yurkiewicz said, Orange County joined about 20 other police agencies around the nation now using the system developed by the Indianapolis, Ind., police department.

"We liked the idea," he said. "We had all these trained men on the street so why not make more use of them. In adopting the plan, we've got 24-hour-a-day service for seven days a week instead of eight hours a day for five days a week."

And in addition to increasing available manpower, Yurkiewicz said the program also has boosted the morale of deputies.

"It's an economic benefit for the officer because he has private transportation for free," Yurkiewicz says. "And here in Orange county, we encourage our officers to use their cars in their everyday lives. They go to the supermarket in them, haul their kids around town, take their wives out to dinner or just about anything."

There are 70 deputies now in the program, about half the force, and those in the program do have some restrictions in the private use of their marked cruisers.

"While in the unit they must dress in a certain manner," Yurkiewicz says. "For example, they can't drive around town on the weekend with a two-day beard and wearing a tee shirt and cut-offs."

"And because there is a potential for criticism, we don't want them parked at any lounges or clubs."

Manor Patient Opinion Issued

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

Lancaster Manor can accept patients able to pay their expenses, but whether these patients would actually have to pay for their care is in doubt, according to a county attorney's opinion released Tuesday.

The Lancaster County Board could, under existing state laws, allow private paying patients at the Manor, according to the opinion given to the Manor's Advisory Board.

The Manor has served primarily welfare recipients and the County Board's current policy has been against allowing private paying residents to enter the home.

However, four of the manor residents are currently on a temporary private-paying status.

Assets Can Change

This happens when an individual on welfare inherits some money or sells his home and his assets go above the welfare guidelines, Manor Director Jerry Gibson explained.

For a short period, this person is not eligible for welfare and pays for his care at the manor. But when that money is depleted, the resident again goes back to welfare status, Gibson said.

Though no formal action was taken, the general feeling of those at the board meeting seemed to be that these individuals should not be forced to move to a private nursing home for a short time, only to be transferred back to Lancaster Manor when the private funds ran out.

"This is a traumatic experience for older people to move from one home to another," said several board members.

Charge In Question

In studying state laws, County Deputy Attorney Mike Heavican wrote, "There is some question as to whether private paying patients can be charged for living at the Manor."

"This brings up a twist we hadn't anticipated," said Gibson.

Heavican suggested that the private paying patients still be billed for the total cost of their care, currently running about $26 to $27 a day.

In other action, the advisory board unanimously put an end to the practice of allowing residents to carry matches or lighters.

Instead, the new smoking policy will allow employes to light cigarettes or pipes for the residents, explained Gibson.

Matches Cause Concern

"I'm concerned about some of these people carrying lighting instruments around," said Gibson. "Some of these people shouldn't have any (matches). They may be confused or they may give matches to other residents who shouldn't have them."

Current Manor smoking policy allows smoking only in specified areas and residents cannot smoke in their own rooms.

With education and an empathetic attitude by the staff, initial resistance to the new rule should die down, said one board member.

A check of six local nursing homes showed that three allowed residents to have matches or lighters, while three did not; and only one allowed residents to smoke in their own rooms, Gibson said.

B. Hamilton Earns Title Of 'Speedy'

Commissioner Bruce Hamilton started off his tenure as chairman of the County Board with a show of efficiency.

His first meeting set a recent record for shortness — 9½ minutes by unofficial estimates from approval of minutes to official adjournment.

And among the routine administrative matters handled were the appointment of seven new members to the Juvenile Attention Center Advisory Board.

Five Lincolnites Named 'Outstanding'

Five young Lincolnites were cited Tuesday night for their contributions to the community or their profession.

Named Outstanding Young Individuals at the awards banquet sponsored by the Lincoln Jaycees were Michael L. Merwick, Dale L. Blanchard, Dennis J. Lyon, Donna L. Polk and Linda Sundberg.

Merwick, 1014 Eldon Drive, is administrative assistant to Mayor Helen Boosalis. A former fire inspector, he is a charter member of the National Fire Protection Association and member of the International Association of Firefighters. He is a member of the Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drugs and of the Lincoln Jaycees which he served as a board member and vice president. A registered lobbyist for the city of Lincoln, he formerly served on the muscular dystrophy board and on the Region II Crime Commission Pretrial Diversion Committee.

Blanchard, 1800 High, is vice president and manager of the commercial banking division, National Bank of Commerce. A graduate of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, he is a member of the American Institute of Banking, International Trade Association and Nebraska Bankers Association. Other activities include the Arnot R. Folsom Zoological Society, Lincoln Chamber of Commerce, Lincoln Kiwanis, United Fund and the State of Nebraska Department of Economic Development advisory committee.

Lyon, 7110 Lexington Ave., a Lincoln architect, is president-elect of the Lincoln Section of the American Institute of Architecture. A UNL graduate, he is a former deacon of the First Presbyterian Church. He is active in the Cornhusker Boy Scout Council.

Ms. Polk, 1773 N. 29th, is equal employment opportunity officer for the State Department of Labor. She is hostess and executive producer of "Frankly Female," a local television show for and about women. Currently enrolled at UNL, she is a member of the Nebraska Commission on the Status of women, Women's Equity Action League, Mayor's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped and the National Black Feminists Program. A former board member of Planned Parenthood of Lincoln, she currently is vice chairperson of the Lincoln Opportunities Industrialization Center and a board member of the Lincoln YWCA.

Mrs. Sundberg, 2927 Plymouth, a homemaker and civic leader, is a member of the Lincoln General Hospital Auxiliary and the Lincoln Council on Alcoholism and Drugs. She served as president of the Sheridan School PTA and has been involved in coaching girls in track competition. She also has been active in the South Lincoln Track Club and the AAU Junior Olympics.

Parole Board Studies 'Shuffling' Prisoners

In two separate cases, state agencies cannot agree on where to keep convicted criminals — in the prison or in a mental health center — and the possibility exists they may have to be set free when their prison terms are up.

The cases were discussed at a meeting of the state Pardon Board, composed of Gov. J. J. Exon, Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas and Secretary of State Allen Beermann, which was reviewing applications for early release under provisions of LB567. Prisoners granted the "rights of LB567" earn early release for good behavior.

In one of the cases, a Penal Complex inmate has been shuffled from the complex to a regional center and back to the complex. He was transferred back to the Penal Complex to make room for another person at the regional center, according to Warden Robert Parratt.

Some months ago Gov. Exon said an agreement had been reached between the Institutions Department and the Correctional Services Department whereby more mentally ill complex inmates would be housed in regional centers.

But apparently this agreement has snagged on the numbers involved. Parratt told the Pardon Board only seven inmates could be transferred; Exon said he thought Jack Cleavenger, director of institutions, promised to accept 15.

In the other case, a woman has been transferred between the York prison and the Hastings Regional Center because the Hastings center refused to keep her.

According to Women's Center Supt. Jacqueline Crawford, people at the regional center "simply don't want to mess with . . . clients of the Corrections Dept."

This case worried the Pardon Board because the woman will be eligible for mandatory release in July and she has a history of aggressive behavior.

Two children died from drug overdoses she administered, she has made threats to the prison staff, and she has made statements she plans to kill a member of her family when she is released.

Neither of these inmates were granted commutations of their prison sentences, and the governor has asked for written information on the cases.

"Part of (the answer) lies with institutions, part with the law," he said.

The board did grant the rights of LB567 to a dozen inmates, and denied it to another 14. Inmates whose applications were accepted will be released in February, and those denied may still be paroled later.

Finch Sworn In

Jackson, Miss. (UPI) — With a vow to forge "a working partnership" with all citizens, Charles C. "Cliff" Finch became Mississippi's 57th governor.

Sikyta Plan For Transportation Would Build Loop Around City

City Councilman Bob Sikyta outlined his own transportation plan Tuesday which calls for the construction of a loop system around Lincoln's periphery.

Sikyta unveiled his eight-point plan to fellow lawmakers and county commissioners as being a way to get the transportation study back on the road again. Council members and commissioners said Sikyta's plan looked like a good place to start.

Traffic congestion in Lincoln could be relieved by building a loop system, Sikyta asserted. The loop would include 84th on the east, Old Cheney Road on the south, Coddington or Folsom and the proposed West Bypass on the west and Superior and N.W. 48th on the north.

Sikyta also urged acceptance of a county population figure projection being used to update the Comprehensive Plan. The figure adopted by the City-County Planning Commission is 325,000 county residents around the year 2000.

That population figure came under attack again last week by Councilman Bob Jeambey who pointed out many people think that figure is too high. Jeambey said a figure of 275,000 people is more realistic.

The reason that population projection is significant, officials say, is the estimate is being used to update the Comprehensive Plan. If the population figure is incorrect, the net effect could be erroneous planning and overbuilding for such facilities as streets and highways.

While Jeambey and several other lawmakers question that estimate, Sikyta says he believes the figure is accurate.

Other points in Sikyta's master traffic plan call for more car pooling. However, no one had concrete ideas on how to force people to carpool.

By increasing carpooling, Sikyta said officials could attempt to increase the car occupancy rate from the existing average of 1.4 persons per car to 1.75 persons per car.

The fourth step in Sikyta's plan, would be agreement that bus ridership will increase to 4% from the present 2% by the year 2000.

The fifth step is for the conversion of a number of streets into one-way pairs.

The sixth step in the plan is to widen 27th Street from Holdrege north to the interstate.

As the seventh step to combat inner city traffic congestion, Sikyta proposed widening arterial streets where practical and enough right-of-way is available.

The final step in the plan, and perhaps the most controversial, is the construction of a two-lane street in the supposedly defunct Northeast Radial's right-of-way.

Organic Farming No Panacea—Borlaug

Minneapolis (UPI) — A onetime Iowa farmboy who has spent 31 years fighting world hunger said Tuesday the backyard gardener raising six tomato plants and espousing the wonders of organic gardening has not had to struggle for food.

He said ardent environmentalists arguing against the use of chemicals and other technology in agriculture have forgotten the importance of foodmaking.

Both are indicative of a modern, affluent society that has lost contact with the soil, Dr. Norman Borlaug, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize in 1971, told the mid-winter meeting of the Minnesota Agri-Growth Council.

"It's my contention that agriculture has been so successful that it has isolated itself," Borlaug said. "After 31 years in food-deficit nations fighting a frustrating battle against hunger, when I come back home I am very concerned how we have lost contact with the man in the street, with the soil."

Organic gardening or a return to past agricultural methods "may be wonderful for producing six tomato plants in your backyard," he said, "but it's no damn good for feeding 4 billion people in the world."

Arguing against the "mania of Utopians and the environmental movement," Borlaug said, "we'll all starve to death if we try to go back to the good old days."

Borlaug said he remembers the good old days from his boyhood in Iowa.

"When I came home from country school," he said, "my grandfather and I would head for the potato patch.

"He would turn over the leaves with his cane that was actually a sawed-off broomstick and I would pick off beetles and drop them in a can of kerosene.

"My summer vacation was spent at the business end of a hoe trying to chop off Canadian thistles that came back two for every one I chopped off."

A "balanced approach" to farming and protecting the environment is needed, Borlaug said.

'Jaws' Director Makes 3rd Film

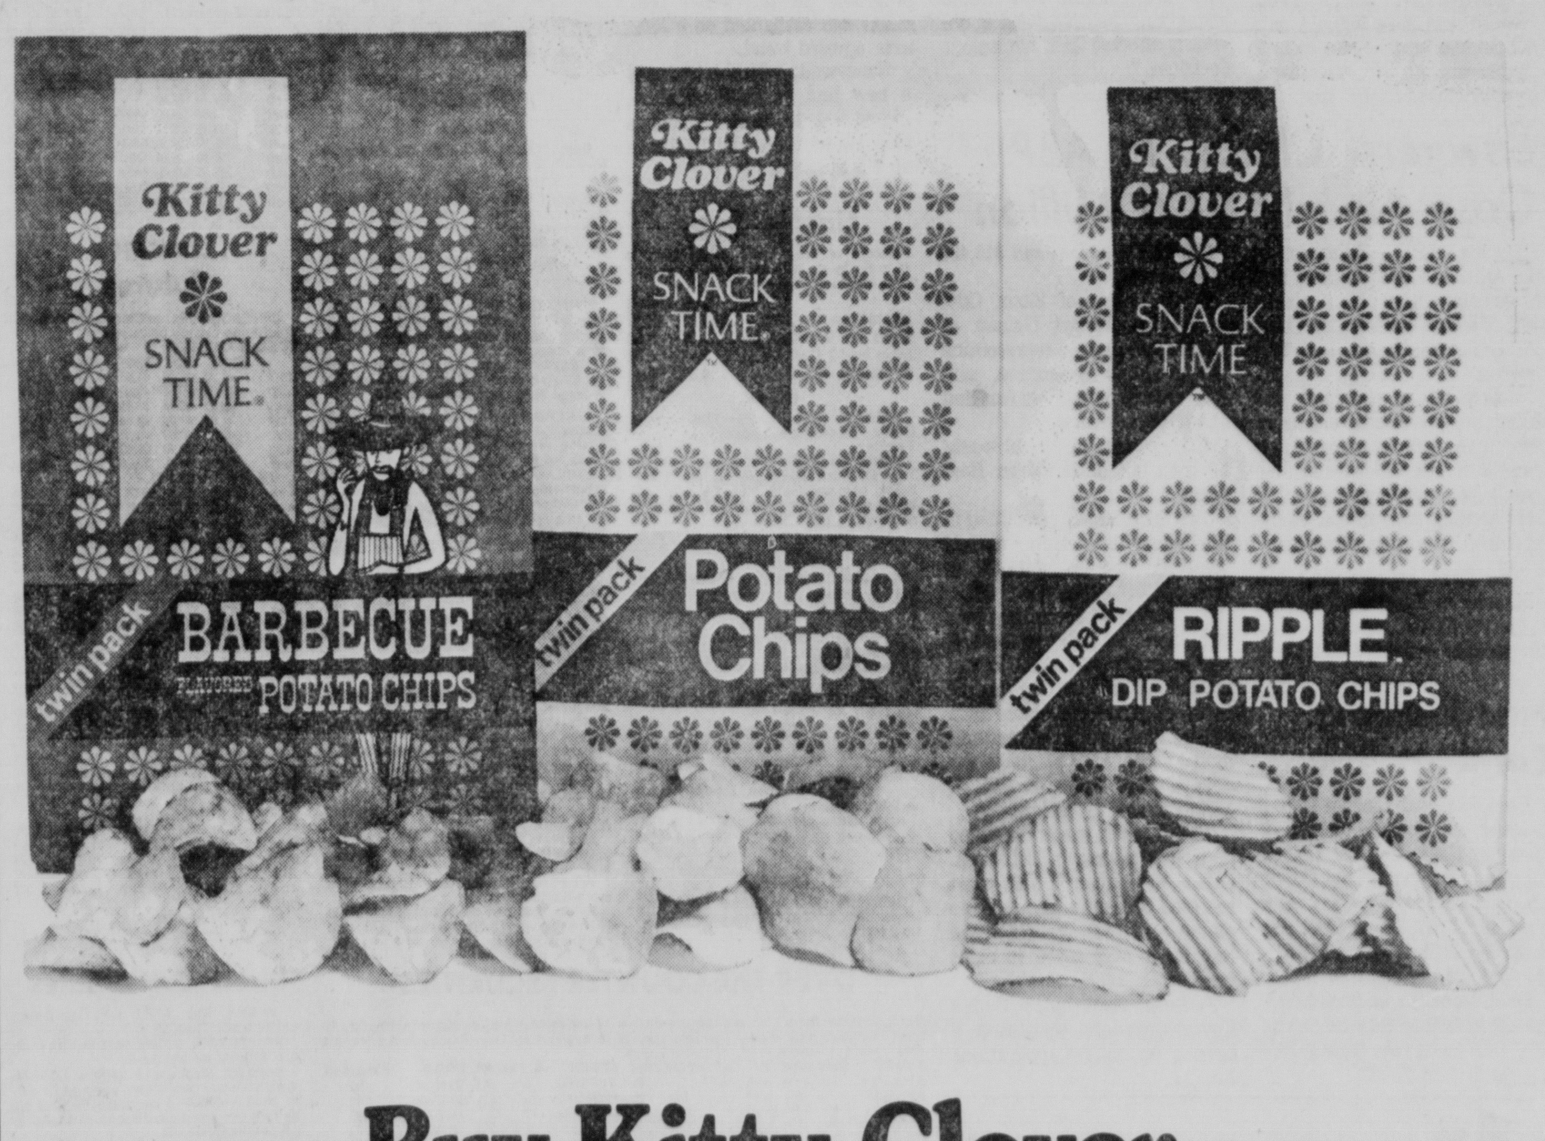

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Steven Spielberg has begun filming his third feature film, "Close Encounter of the Third Kind."

The director is making the science-fiction thriller, based on his own script, for Columbia Pictures. His first two films, "The Sugarland Express" and "Jaws," were for Universal.

Producers of "Close Encounter of The Third Kind" are Michael and Julia Phillips, who coproduced "The Sting."

Zany Miss Blue Big Hit On Radio

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "Dear Miss Blue, I am interested in joining the women's lib movement, and I'd like to know if it's all right for me to burn my bra."

"Go ahead and burn your bra if you want to," Miss Blue responds on the air, "but make sure you take it off, first."

Some of Miss Blue's advice to her more than 100,000 listeners probably would make Ann Landers cringe and send Abigail Van Buren into hysterics, but perhaps that's the secret to her success.

In the past few months she has become one of the best-known radio personalities in the St. Louis area.

Miss Blue in real life is Miriam Blue, a 62-year-old black grandmother from East St. Louis who, until recently, drew her only income from a seven-day-a-week cleaning job at KMOX. The CBS-owned radio station claims 48 per cent of the market in an area where 36 stations fill the airwaves.

Twice a week now, Miriam Blue parks her trash can and strips off her rubber gloves to sit behind a microphone and answer questions read to her by Jack Carney, zany radio veteran and irrepressible funnyman.

Carney, whose natural humor often wanders to the outer edge of respectability, is a master of the double entendre. Some of his questions might seem risque on a live show, even when directed at a woman who professes to be "more than a little religious."

But Miss Blue, who doesn't seem flustered by the knowledge that thousands of people are waiting for her answer, seems unable to see the risque elements of a question and comes up with an answer so straight that it's funny.

"Dear Miss Blue," Carney reads from a card, "I can't seem to get close to my husband anymore since he bought this big dog that crowds in between us when we are in bed. What can I do about it?"

"That's simple," she answers immediately. "Get a bigger bed and then the dog won't have to crowd you."

Miss Blue, whose cheerful "All is well" greeting was well known to station employes before it became her trademark on the air, says the instant fame has not changed her life. Even though she is now a member of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, she says her greatest joys are still her daughter and grandchildren with whom she lives.

"I'm still the same old me," she says.

She admits that it's fun to be recognized on the street by people who smile and shout "All is well." And she enjoys being asked to make personal appearances at stores where "All is well" T-shirts and caps have appeared on the shelves.

Stock Mart Rises Before Elections

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

Jane Bryant Quinn

New York — The stock market tends to rise in a presidential election year. As a matter of fact, it also tends to rise in the year before elections. No matter what they say to the contrary, politicians spend, spend, spend, whatever is necessary to produce at least the illusion of prosperity on election day. There's nothing like a bull market in stocks to make voters feel grateful to the party in power.

Here's the record for 19 election cycles since 1900, based on December averages of the Standard & Poor's composite index: The stock market made net gains adding up to 321% during election years and the one prior, according to Yale Hirsch, publisher of the Stock Trader's Almanac. By contrast, in the two years after the election the market had a net gain of only 83%.

Breaking the years down by political party presents a slightly sharper perspective. In the year prior to elections, Democratic presidents added enough money to the system to produce net market gains of 153%, while Republicans accounted for only one per cent. This underlines the image of Democrats as being quick with the dollars to get reelected.

Just Slower

However, Republicans do the same thing — historically, they've just been a little slower to get around to it. In the election year itself, incumbent Republican parties poured on enough juice for the market to rise a net of 147% in the years that they won the election. Incumbent Democratic winners had only enough spending power left to bring on a 44% increase.

If you consider only the years since World War II, you'll find that Republicans have adopted Democratic tactics. Since 1945 incumbent Republicans have been responsible for bigger pre-election-year stock markets than incumbent Democrats (witness President Ford's 32% increase last year). And they've had bigger election year markets besides.

Unfortunately, in the year after elections the market changes its mind about Republicans. Since 1945, Republicans have brought on a net decline for that year of 49%. Democrats, on the other hand, have produced a 47% gain.

Overall, the market has gained more points under Democrats than under Republicans. But the two best markets came during the stable regimes of Republicans Coolidge and Eisenhower, and the worst under the hapless Hoover.

There's one more way of looking at election-year markets — namely, according to whether the party in power won or lost. Here the message is pretty clear: When the electorate throws the rascals out, the market usually doesn't do very well — whether the rascals be Republican or Democrat. Says market analyst Edson Gould, "The market likes the status quo. It recoils from uncertainty."

What does all this add up to? A Republican win will probably be associated with a rising stock market, since the Republicans are the party in power and have a history of greasing the wheels in an election year. A changeover to the Democrats would be associated with a poorer market. So you tell me who's going to win the election, and I'll be more forthright about what's going to happen to stocks.

January Indicator

Since the election-year indicator is such a slippery character, perhaps you'd prefer the famous "January Indicator." Since 1950, the direction of the market in January has accurately forecast results for the year as a whole 88% of the time.

What's more, the first five days in January give an accurate forecast 84% of the time, and this year the first five days were terrific. The 12 best stock-market years out of the past 24 also had the 12 best January performances.

Yale Hirsch says that the January barometer began to work in 1934, the year that the new Congress began taking office early in January rather than the following December. "People could get a better idea of how the political year would shape up," he says, "and it obviously affected their investment decisions."

Stock Market Chalks Up Another Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market bucked profit taking pressures and some uneasiness about the fighting in Lebanon to rack up another gain Tuesday in the second busiest session on record.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down a little more than 2 at mid-day, rebounded to finish with a 6.14 advance at 949.86.

That put the widely recognized indicator more than 97 points above the level at which it started the new year less than three weeks ago.

It stood 372 points above its worst level in early December of 1974—and only a little more than 100 points below its record high of 1,051.70 on Jan. 11 1973.

New York Stock Exchange volume for the day climbed to 36.69 million shares — the largest total ever except for last Thursday's 38.45 million.

Advancing issues outnumbered those declining 957 to 568 among the 1,918 traded on the NYSE.

The market's latest batch of fireworks came against a background of news that Wall Streeters considered to be on the negative side.

Brokers reported some uneasiness in the market, particularly early in the day, over the question of whether the fighting in Lebanon might possibly create new diplomatic tensions in the middle East by drawing other nations into the struggle.

And the 5.4 per cent growth in the Gross National Product reported by the government for the fourth quarter was taken as a mild disappointment by observers who had been expecting it to be about 6 per cent.

Despite those uninspiring influences, however, it appeared the market was still able to generate its own energy.

Analysts said the dramatic rally since the start of the year evidently had convinced many investors, notably some big institutions, to continue buying programs in the belief that stocks had embarked on a long term upward trend.

Honeywell, which introduced a new line of minicomputers, gained 1¼ to 44¼. Burroughs rose 1⅛ to 102⅛ and IBM was up 2⅞ at 252⅞.

Manor Patient Opinion Issued

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

Lancaster Manor can accept patients able to pay their expenses, but whether these patients would actually have to pay for their care is in doubt, according to a county attorney's opinion released Tuesday.

The Lancaster County Board could, under existing state laws, allow private paying patients at the Manor, according to the opinion given to the Manor's Advisory Board.

The Manor has served primarily welfare recipients and the County Board's current policy has been against allowing private paying residents to enter the home.

However, four of the manor residents are currently on a temporary private-paying status.

Assets Can Change

This happens when an individual on welfare inherits some money or sells his home and his assets go above the welfare guidelines, Manor Director Jerry Gibson explained.

For a short period, this person is not eligible for welfare and pays for his care at the manor. But when that money is depleted, the resident again goes back to welfare status, Gibson said.

Though no formal action was taken, the general feeling of those at the board meeting seemed to be that these individuals should not be forced to move to a private nursing home for a short time, only to be transferred back to Lancaster Manor when the private funds ran out.

"This is a traumatic experience for older people to move from one home to another," said several board members.

Charge In Question

In studying state laws, County Deputy Attorney Mike Heavican wrote, "There is some question as to whether private paying patients can be charged for living at the Manor."

"This brings up a twist we hadn't anticipated," said Gibson.

Heavican suggested that the private paying patients still be billed for the total cost of their care, currently running about $26 to $27 a day.

In other action, the advisory board unanimously put an end to the practice of allowing residents to carry matches or lighters.

Instead, the new smoking policy will allow employes to light cigarettes or pipes for the residents, explained Gibson.

Matches Cause Concern

"I'm concerned about some of these people carrying lighting instruments around," said Gibson. "Some of these people shouldn't have any (matches). They may be confused or they may give matches to other residents who shouldn't have them."

Current Manor smoking policy allows smoking only in specified areas and residents cannot smoke in their own rooms.

With education and an empathetic attitude by the staff, initial resistance to the new rule should die down, said one board member.

A check of six local nursing homes showed that three allowed residents to have matches or lighters, while three did not; and only one allowed residents to smoke in their own rooms, Gibson said.

B. Hamilton Earns Title Of 'Speedy'

Commissioner Bruce Hamilton started off his tenure as chairman of the County Board with a show of efficiency.

His first meeting set a recent record for shortness — 9½ minutes by unofficial estimates from approval of minutes to official adjournment.

And among the routine administrative matters handled were the appointment of seven new members to the Juvenile Attention Center Advisory Board.

Parole Board Studies 'Shuffling' Prisoners

In two separate cases, state agencies cannot agree on where to keep convicted criminals — in the prison or in a mental health center — and the possibility exists they may have to be set free when their prison terms are up.

The cases were discussed at a meeting of the state Pardon Board, composed of Gov. J. J. Exon, Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas and Secretary of State Allen Beermann, which was reviewing applications for early release under provisions of LB567. Prisoners granted the "rights of LB567" earn early release for good behavior.

In one of the cases, a Penal Complex inmate has been shuffled from the complex to a regional center and back to the complex. He was transferred back to the Penal Complex to make room for another person at the regional center, according to Warden Robert Parratt.

Some months ago Gov. Exon said an agreement had been reached between the Institutions Department and the Correctional Services Department whereby more mentally ill complex inmates would be housed in regional centers.

But apparently this agreement has snagged on the numbers involved. Parratt told the Pardon Board only seven inmates could be transferred; Exon said he thought Jack Cleavenger, director of institutions, promised to accept 15.

In the other case, a woman has been transferred between the York prison and the Hastings Regional Center because the Hastings center refused to keep her.

According to Women's Center Supt. Jacqueline Crawford, people at the regional center "simply don't want to mess with . . . clients of the Corrections Dept."

This case worried the Pardon Board because the woman will be eligible for mandatory release in July and she has a history of aggressive behavior.

Two children died from drug overdoses she administered, she has made threats to the prison staff, and she has made statements she plans to kill a member of her family when she is released.

Neither of these inmates were granted commutations of their prison sentences, and the governor has asked for written information on the cases.

"Part of (the answer) lies with institutions, part with the law," he said.

The board did grant the rights of LB567 to a dozen inmates, and denied it to another 14. Inmates whose applications were accepted will be released in February, and those denied may still be paroled later.

Sikyta Plan For Transportation Would Build Loop Around City

City Councilman Bob Sikyta outlined his own transportation plan Tuesday which calls for the construction of a loop system around Lincoln's periphery.

Sikyta unveiled his eight-point plan to fellow lawmakers and county commissioners as being a way to get the transportation study back on the road again. Council members and commissioners said Sikyta's plan looked like a good place to start.

Traffic congestion in Lincoln could be relieved by building a loop system, Sikyta asserted. The loop would include 84th on the east, Old Cheney Road on the south, Coddington or Folsom and the proposed West Bypass on the west and Superior and N.W. 48th on the north.

Sikyta also urged acceptance of a county population figure projection being used to update the Comprehensive Plan. The figure adopted by the City-County Planning Commission is 325,000 county residents around the year 2000.

That population figure came under attack again last week by Councilman Bob Jeambey who pointed out many people think that figure is too high. Jeambey said a figure of 275,000 people is more realistic.

The reason that population projection is significant, officials say, is the estimate is being used to update the Comprehensive Plan. If the population figure is incorrect, the net effect could be erroneous planning and overbuilding for such facilities as streets and highways.

While Jeambey and several other lawmakers question that estimate, Sikyta says he believes the figure is accurate.

Other points in Sikyta's master traffic plan call for more car pooling. However, no one had concrete ideas on how to force people to carpool.

By increasing carpooling, Sikyta said officials could attempt to increase the car occupancy rate from the existing average of 1.4 persons per car to 1.75 persons per car.

The fourth step in Sikyta's plan, would be agreement that bus ridership will increase to 4% from the present 2% by the year 2000.

The fifth step is for the conversion of a number of streets into one-way pairs.

The sixth step in the plan is to widen 27th Street from Holdrege north to the interstate.

As the seventh step to combat inner city traffic congestion, Sikyta proposed widening arterial streets where practical and enough right-of-way is available.

The final step in the plan, and perhaps the most controversial, is the construction of a two-lane street in the supposedly defunct Northeast Radial's right-of-way.

Organic Farming No Panacea—Borlaug

Minneapolis (UPI) — A onetime Iowa farmboy who has spent 31 years fighting world hunger said Tuesday the backyard gardener raising six tomato plants and espousing the wonders of organic gardening has not had to struggle for food.

He said ardent environmentalists arguing against the use of chemicals and other technology in agriculture have forgotten the importance of foodmaking.

Both are indicative of a modern, affluent society that has lost contact with the soil, Dr. Norman Borlaug, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize in 1971, told the mid-winter meeting of the Minnesota Agri-Growth Council.

"It's my contention that agriculture has been so successful that it has isolated itself," Borlaug said. "After 31 years in food-deficit nations fighting a frustrating battle against hunger, when I come back home I am very concerned how we have lost contact with the man in the street, with the soil."

Organic gardening or a return to past agricultural methods "may be wonderful for producing six tomato plants in your backyard," he said, "but it's no damn good for feeding 4 billion people in the world."

Arguing against the "mania of Utopians and the environmental movement," Borlaug said, "we'll all starve to death if we try to go back to the good old days."

Borlaug said he remembers the good old days from his boyhood in Iowa.

"When I came home from country school," he said, "my grandfather and I would head for the potato patch.

"He would turn over the leaves with his cane that was actually a sawed-off broomstick and I would pick off beetles and drop them in a can of kerosene.

"My summer vacation was spent at the business end of a hoe trying to chop off Canadian thistles that came back two for every one I chopped off."

A "balanced approach" to farming and protecting the environment is needed, Borlaug said.

Stock Mart Rises Before Elections

Jane Bryant Quinn

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — The stock market tends to rise in a presidential election year As a matter of fact, it also tends to rise in the year before elections No matter what they say to the contrary, politicians spend, spend spend, whatever is necessary to produce at least the illusion of prosperity on election day There's nothing like a bull market in stocks to make voters feel grateful to the party in power

Here's the record for 19 election cycles since 1900, based on December averages of the Standard & Poor s composite index The stock market made net gains adding up to 321% during election years and the one prior, according to Yale Hirsch, publisher of the Stock Trader's Almanac By contrast, in the two years after the election the market had a net gain of only 83%

Breaking the years down by political party presents a slightly sharper perspective In the year prior to elections, Democratic presidents added enough money to the system to produce net market gains of 153%, while Republicans accounted for only one per cent This underlines the image of Democrats as being quick with the dollars to get reelected

However, Republicans do the same thing — historically, they've just been a little slower to get around to it In the election year itself, incumbent Republican parties poured on enough juice for the market to rise a net of 147% in the years that they won the election Incumbent Democratic winners had only enough spending power left to bring on a 44% increase

If you consider only the years since World War II, you'll find that Republicans have adopted Democratic tactics Since 1945 incumbent Republicans have been responsible for bigger pre-election-year stock markets than incumbent Democrats (witness President Ford's 32% increase last year) And they've had bigger election year markets besides

Unfortunately, in the year after elections the market changes its mind about Republicans Since 1945, Republicans have brought on a net decline for that year of 49% Democrats, on the other hand, have produced a 47% gain

Overall the market has gained more points under Democrats than under Republicans But the two best markets came during the stable regimes of Republicans Coolidge and Eisenhower, and the worst under the hapless Hoover

There's one more way of looking at election-year markets — namely, according to whether the party in power won or lost Here the message is pretty clear When the electorate throws the rascals out, the market usually doesn't do very well — whether the rascals be Republican or Democrat Says market analyst Edson Gould, "The market likes the status quo It recoils from uncertainty"

What does all this add up to? A Republican win will probably be associated with a rising stock market, since the Republicans are the party in power and have a history of greasing the wheels in an election year A changeover to the Democrats would be associated with a poorer market So you tell me who's going to win the election, and I'll be more forthright about what's going to happen to stocks

January Indicator

Since the election-year indicator is such a slippery character, perhaps you'd prefer the famous "January Indicator" Since 1950, the direction of the market in January has accurately forecast results for the year as a whole 88% of the time

What's more, the first five days in January give an accurate forecast 84% of the time, and this year the first five days were terrific The 12 best stock-market years out of the past 24 also had the 12 best January performances

Yale Hirsch says that the January barometer began to work in 1934, the year that the new Congress began taking office early in January rather than the following December "People could get a better idea of how the political year would shape up," he says, "and it obviously affected their investment decisions"

Stock Market Chalks Up Another Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market bucked profit taking pressures and some uneasiness about the fighting in Lebanon to rack up another gain Tuesday in the second busiest session on record

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down a little more than 2 at mid-day, rebounded to finish with a 6 14 advance at 949 86

That put the widely recognized indicator more than 97 points above the level at which it started the new year less than three weeks ago

It stood 372 points above its worst level in early December of 1974—and only a little more than 100 points below its record high of 1,051 70 on Jan 11 1973

New York Stock Exchange volume for the day climbed to 36 69 million shares — the largest total ever except for last Thursday's 38 45 million

Advancing issues outnumbered those declining 957 to 568 among the 1,918 traded on the NYSE

The market's latest batch of fireworks came against a background of news that Wall Streeters considered to be on the negative side

Brokers reported some uneasiness in the market, particularly early in the day, over the question of whether the fighting in Lebanon might possibly create new diplomatic tensions in the middle East by drawing other nations into the struggle

And the 5 4 per cent growth in the Gross National Product reported by the government for the fourth quarter was taken as a mild disappointment by observers who had been expecting it to be about 6 per cent.

The percentage figure is after adjustment for the effects of inflation

Despite those uninspiring influences, however, it appeared the market was still able to generate its own energy.

Analysts said the dramatic rally since the start of the year evidently had convinced many investors, notably some big institutions, to continue buying programs in the belief that stocks had embarked on a long term upward trend

Honeywell, which introduced a new line of minicomputers, gained 1¼ to 44¼ Burroughs rose 1⅛ to 102⅛ and IBM was up 2⅞ at 252⅞

HERITAGE RECIPES from Helen Davis

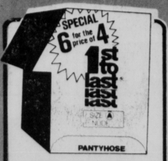

In the days before refrigeration and freezers, apples were picked, peeled, quartered and hung on cords in the kitchen. The dried apples were used to make pies in the winter. Families enjoyed them most at breakfast. This apple pie is tasty just about anytime.

CRUNCHY APPLE PIE

1 cup graham cracker crumbs
1 cup sugar
½ cup flour
½ cup walnuts
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
6 apples peeled, cored and sliced

Ed Board Warned Against Public Emotionalism

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln Schools Supt. John Prasch warned the Board of Education Tuesday not to become the tool of extremists.

In an implicit reprimand of board member Lu Pansing's attack last week on "Man: A Course of Study," a social studies program, Prasch offered "perspective and comment" in an informal board work session.

Also, four staff members who teach or have taught MACOS for six years in the Lincoln Public Schools and the district social studies consultant had a lengthy question-and-answer session with the board.

Citing unusually high district-wide enthusiams by students and teachers for MACOS, they insisted it helps children learn how to think inquiringly and erases prejudice about other cultures.

Out Of Context

The staff members said criticism of course conduct is erroneous, that objectionable quotes were pulled out of context from teachers' materials that children never see, that teachers never attempt to indoctrinate students to adopt behavior of other cultures that's offensive or criminal in American society, and point out the difference.

Moreover, the board was told, little course time is devoted to MACOS materials which have been sensationalized, and teachers have latitude but responsibility in guiding students in problem-solving, based on information presented.

"I have a lot of confidence in the integrity of the teachers" to omit potentially offensive materials, said Board President Louis Roper. His own daughter is enrolled in the course.

'Sort Out Propaganda'

Board member Pearl Goldenstein cited a need for the board and public to "know how to sort out propaganda," just as her own 12-year-old can to solve problems. "If we start this kind of censorship (a few people are demanding), we're really going to have to paw through everything."

Prasch said one board responsibility is "to be as fully informed as possible" to make "rational decisions." But those must be confined to the "policy-making level," he cautioned.

If the board should begin to implement practices under those policies, Prasch explained, that would weaken public accountability by teachers and switch that role to the board.

He declined to defend or attack MACOS. It "needs no apology from me."

But Prasch said he's convinced the schools must "not force children into programs that parents object to." That "ought to be written policy," he said, and urged offering alternative approaches and materials. Each school should also brief parents on course and allow frequent review.

Regarding personal-social development programs, Prasch said, "I think we should look at the possibility of some alternate type schools." Further, "We have an obligation to supervise our staff" to prevent abuses and monitor academic license. He suggested "outside evaluations" as another possibility.

In his personal opinion, however, Prasch said, "Irregardless of our intent, it's almost impossible to separate teaching of values from whatever we're doing."

"MACOS was not sneaked into the curriculum," Prasch said. After seven years, it is now used in 25 schools which alternate it annualy with a history course. Eight schools do not use MACOS.

Prasch also pointed out that board members have had three briefings on MACOS, the last covering a half-day in August, because it's been "controversial since its inception."

'Conscious Choice'

Its use in Lincoln has never been mandatory, but "a conscious choice of that building staff," and teachers get 30 to 40 hours of training or serve a year-long apprenticeship before conducting the course.

Dawes teacher John H. Fischer compared MACOS to a Sunday School class. The Bible, he said, contains episodes of "violence, immorality, breaking of commandments" which a church teacher could select for discussion but which might be offensive to parents or children.

The public schools teacher carries an identical responsibility, Fischer said.

Mrs. Pansing read from a congressional committee report, which declared if MACOS materials aren't handled well, they could be "traumatic" by raising "intense moral questions."

'No Teacher Would'

Mrs. Pansing said "open-ended" discussions with no guidance is "mandated" in MACOS. Former MACOS teacher Rutha B. Weatherl contended, however, that "No techer would leave (a topic) without letting the kids bring up (conclusions about behavior) we don't condone in our society" and then guide them positively.

Since it would be inappropriate to "just throw out" any course in mid-year, Prasch submitted that the "basic question is how does the board expect to function in these matters?"

"The way you handle this particular case will set a pattern for how you handle the next one (controversy)."

President Roper said that during second semester, he will arrange a mass board session with all school parent groups to allow them to express their complaints and compliments.

Tax Hike To Cover Lost School Income

A proposed Lincoln city charter amendment would shift some Lincoln Electric System (LES) revenues from ratepayers to the property tax rolls, equivalent to another 1.185 mills this budget year, a Lincoln Public Schools business official said Tuesday.

Associate Supt. Robert Den Hartog said LES paid $564,589 "in lieu of taxes" to the school district in 1975. That sum has increased steadily from $337,690 in 1971.

"If for any reason this action (payment method) is repealed, the district would lose income which would have to be transferred to property taxes under current legislation," Den Hartog wrote in a report, pointing out the district "has no other income-generating ability."

Schools attorney Edwin C. Perry noted a possibly "more serious" effect on the district building fund, limited to four mills. LES in-lieu-of-tax payments in 1975 to the fund totalled $47,609, which Perry said the district "can't replace without a bond issue."

The Board of Education has opposed that, but the administration this year has repeatedly reported problems and cutbacks resulting from the already stretched-thin building fund.

In lieu of taxes began in 1960 when law established that public electricity suppliers, among others, must pay 5% of their gross revenue during the previous year, derived from retail sales to the city.

The law directed those payments to be transferred to school districts, intending that their property tax mill levies be reduced the equivalent amount.

Den Hartog said the $564,589 for 1975 actually can be construed as up to $100,000 or more because electricity rates have been raised 20% to 30%.

The City Council will hold a public hearing on the proposed charter amendment Wednesday evening.

Term Of Office Limits Turned Down

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Proposals to limit the mayor and council members to two consecutive terms of office were skuttled by the city's Charter Revisions Committee Tuesday night.

The advisory group voted 8 to 3 not to forward the proposals on to the City Council, despite testimony from several councilmen on the measures.

A trio of city lawmakers were the only people testifying at the sparsely attended public hearing on the proposed changes in the city charter.

And, not surprisingly, each council member had a different opinion.

Opinions Differ

Councilman Max Denney wanted to limit the terms of both the mayor and council.

Councilman Dick Baker wanted to limit only the mayor's term, not the council's.

Councilwoman Sue Bailey didn't want either plan.

A majority of the Charter Revision Committee apparently subscribed to Mrs. Bailey's arguments more than they did to Baker's or Denney's.

Mrs. Bailey asserted that a proposal limiting office holders to eight years in office was an undue restraint on the voters. It is the peoples' responsibility to determine whether a mayor or council should be retained or kicked out of office, she said.

Eight Years Enough

Denney said he thinks eight years in office is enough.

He noted the increasing pressure being placed on council members and said the part-time job "is getting to be more and more frustrating and more and more complicated." Denney said he's not even sure he'll seek re-election to a second term in 1977.

Denney said several lawmakers have talked privately about turning the job into a full-time position, like the mayor's. Council members now are paid $4,000 annually. The mayor earns $28,000.

Even though there are hassles in the job, Mrs. Bailey said politicians can get out at any time.

"The door to public office swings both ways."

'Re-Election Changes View'

One of the perils of unlimited terms, Denney asserted, is that office holders who are consistently re-elected begin to think "it's their government, not the peoples' government."

Baker, on the other hand, felt that the mayor's term should be confined to eight years, as are the terms of many governors and the president's. He noted that congressmen and state senators can seek office without restraint and drew a parallel to city lawmakers' terms.

It's not as important for council members' terms to be restricted, he argued, since in Lincoln a councilman "is just one member of a seven-member team, opposed to the mayor who is a single entity."

Mrs. Bailey didn't think the city should follow the lead of federal fathers on the matter. She called the 22nd amendment to the U.S. Constitution limiting presidential terms "a dumb amendment."

Denney said he thought the issues should be placed on the ballot this spring so that Lincoln voters could decide if they wanted to impose a term limitation on officials.

The council still could decide to place those items on the ballot for voter approval or rejection, but both Denney and Baker said after the meeting they don't intend to bring the matter up.

The council will have an opportunity to study two other proposed charter amendments approved by the committee Tuesday.

Majority Not Needed

One amendment would allow the council to order streets or alleys paved without having a majority approval of abutting property owners for health, safety or welfare reasons. Public Works director Bob Obering favored the proposal.

The second amendment would give the City Council authority to determine how large a tract of land could be before it could be subdivided.

The Charter Revision Committee will hold another public hearing at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in City Hall on another proposed amendment. That measure would channel in lieu of tax payments made by the Lincoln Electric System to the city only. Currently, 5% of LES's gross revenues are divided between the state, county, city and school district.

Pampered Beef Faces Lawsuit

Cherokee, Iowa (UPI) — Two Buena Vista County farmers have filed suit in Cherokee County District Court against Pampered Beef Midwest, Inc., a livestock feeding operation near Aurelia.

Ted Braunschweig and Arne Erickson, whose land adjoins the confinement feeding operation, are seeking $75,000 in damages.

The plaintiffs contend "noxious" and "offensive" odors from Pampered Beef permeate their property and drinking wells. The odors were described in the suit as "permanent and continuing nuisances."

Grand Islander To Build Model

Washington (UPI) — The Smithsonian Institute has chosen Jerry Hall of Grand Island to build a model aircraft for display at the institution.

The plane is a scale model of a Gremlin AG Cat, a biplane used for applying fertilizers, insecticides and pesticides in agricultural areas.

Hall, a member of a local modelers association, said it will cost $350 to build the model, which will go on display in March.

Omaha Judge Gives Gambler Fine Of $1,500

Omaha (AP) — Tony J. Gigliotti, 56, of Omaha has been fined $1,500 after pleading no contest to three gambling charges.

Gigliotti appeared before Omaha Municipal Court Judge Walter Cropper on the misdemeanor counts.

City Prosecutor Gary Bucchino said Gigliotti was charged with placing bets totaling $1,540 with another man on December 26th, 27th and 28th. Police recorded the calls on the other man's phone with a court-ordered wiretap.

Bucchino said several other persons charged in the same case have pleaded guilty or no contest and been sentenced, while others are awaiting trial.

SeTech Board Favors Present Setup

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College (SeTech) Area Board Tuesday voiced its opposition to a bill introduced in the Nebraska Legislature by Sen. Richard Maresh of Milligan.

Under Maresh's LB762, Lancaster County would be carved out of what has been a 15-county Southeast Nebraska area, with campuses in Lincoln, Milford and Fairbury.

To retain a "positive" approach, the board unanimously approved a resolution favoring the Community College system as it currently exists rather than lambasting LB762.

SeTech Area President Robert S. Eicher of Lincoln said shuffling counties "is going to create chaos within the Community College System."

However, considering the board last September had resolved to close down the Fairbury campus, Eicher said "I think the people of Fairbury (and their State senator, Maresh) are reacting in a normal manner."

During its Jan. 6 meeting, the board rescinded its plan to close the Fairbury campus, but in so doing left the impression the school would continue in operation only through the 1976-77 school year.

Lloyd Wright, board member from Reynolds, said the feeling in Fairbury "is they're cutting off our nose an inch at a time."

Eicher said Tuesday he would "like to scratch out 1976-77" from the proposal. "My honest intent was to continue the program at Fairbury" indefinitely, he said.

On the Pershing College issue, the board voted 8 to 3 to support a resolution currently pending before the Legislature that would allow SeTech to acquire Pershing from the University of Nebraska Foundation through the NU Regents.

Board member Loretta Draper of Plattsmouth reversed her position on acquiring Pershing, since Fairbury is to remain open. Mrs. Draper contended SeTech "can't afford to operate four campuses" and noted that any expansion should first be at Peru.

Explaining his opposition, Ted Doyle of Fairbury said "it's like using a Cadillac for transportation while a bicycle would serve adequately.

"My reason for opposition from the start has been we can't use it all," Dunlap said, noting that only about 110 students would initially be utilizing the $3.1 million facility at Beatrice.

In other business, the board heard a suggestion from G. Alan Dunlap of Milford to buy an 11-unit Milford motel, priced at $50,000, and convert it into a wmen's dormitory.

The Milford campus currently has two men's dormitories but offers no dormitory facilities for the 25-28 female students. The board decided to inspect the motel during its next meeting in Milford before making a decision.

Robert Wekesser was re-elected chairman of the SeTech board and Dunlap was re-elected vice chairman. Re-appointed to positions as secretary and treasurer were Dr. Eicher and Dick Safarik, respectively.

Fairbury Campus Decision Seen Differently By Opposing Sides

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

The recent decision by the Southeast Community College (SCC) area board to leave its Fairbury campus open at least for next year is drawing vastly different interpretations.

Beatrice community leaders generally are acclaiming the move as a compromise that "should make both towns happy." Closely linked with the vote on Fairbury was a reaffirmation of the board's intent to acquire defunct Pershing College, then use it for a satellite vocational program.

Many Fairburians, on the other hand, say the yoked decision was designed mainly to put down opposition to Pershing and is little more than a temporary reprieve for the Fairbury campus.

Peters: Smokescreen

"The proposal is just a smokescreen to shut us up long enough to acquire Pershing," said Fletcher Peters, chairman of a Fairbury committee dedicated to saving the campus there. "After the one-year guarantee is up, we'll be told that two campuses are too expensive, and then comes another back stabbing."

Noting that the Legislature has before it a resolution that would convey Pershing to SCC via the University of Nebraska Board of Regents, Peters said that decision is the one that is crucial to Fairbury's future. "Once Pershing gets into the hands of Southeast, Fairbury's campus is dead," he predicted.

In Beatrice, Chamber of Commerce President Dan Ferguson said the proposed vocational program is "just the beginning" for Pershing. But he feels there is no intention to shift Fairbury's academic program to Beatrice eventually.

Loss to Lincoln

"The fear by many of us is that we're going to lose the whole thing to Lincoln and that's what we want to forestall," he said. "There's a really big need for vocational programs here in the southeast and it appears this is the best that's going to be available for everybody concerned."

Mayor Bob Sargent said it probably will take two or three years to determine the "economic feasibility" of maintaining both campuses. The perpetuations of either would depend upon future enrolment, he said.

"We'll just have to see which of the schools survives — perhaps both and maybe neither one."

Subject To Change?

Ted Doyle, Fairbury SCC board member who has vigorously resisted closing his town's campus, said the one-year aspect of the proposal "obviously makes it a decision subject to change.

"When a board's vote is to keep a campus open for 1976-77, you can read almost anything into that you want to," said Doyle. "Always the eternal optimist, I hope it means Fairbury forever, but words mean different things to different people."

Doyle said he is not against the vocational offerings proposed for Pershing, but he does question their location on a $3 million campus. "When a bicycle would do for your transportation, you don't buy a Cadillac," he reasoned.

Peters also objected to using Pershing for a satellite operation. He said he expects considerable opposition to the plan "once taxpayers of our 15-county area realize all that's involved here.

"The same board that's talking about a ton of money for Pershing is considering a new $7 million campus for Lincoln," he continued. "Where is all this money going to come from?"

Mrs. Deloris Henney, Fairbury campus staff member who also has fought the closing there, said she at least found solace in the board's decision to continue an academic transfer program somewhere.

"I am delighted that the board finally recognizes the full concept of a community college, including academic transfer," said the veteran educator. "It justifies our being for all these years."

CTU's Sale Of Cengas Announced

The sale of Cengas by Central Telephone and Utilities to Minnesota Gas Co. announced Tuesday is expected to be finalized by the end of March.

According to CTU Executive Director E.P. Alfonsin, the agreement in principle between CTU and the Minnesota firm has been reached, but purchase price based on net book value will not be determined until a more definitive agreement is reached.

He said that the transaction is not expected to affect the Lincoln operation management or location.

The sale, which will permit deferral of CTU's previously announced sale of common equity and reduce 1976 short and long-term borrowing, is not expected to affect the company's net income in 1976, Alfonsin said.

CTU and Minnesota Gas Tuesday submitted a joint filing to the South Dakota Public Utilities Commission in connection with the proposed sale. However, similar state regulatory procedures are not required in Nebraska where CTU serves 57 additional communities.

Leads Run Out In Arson Probe Of Pius X High

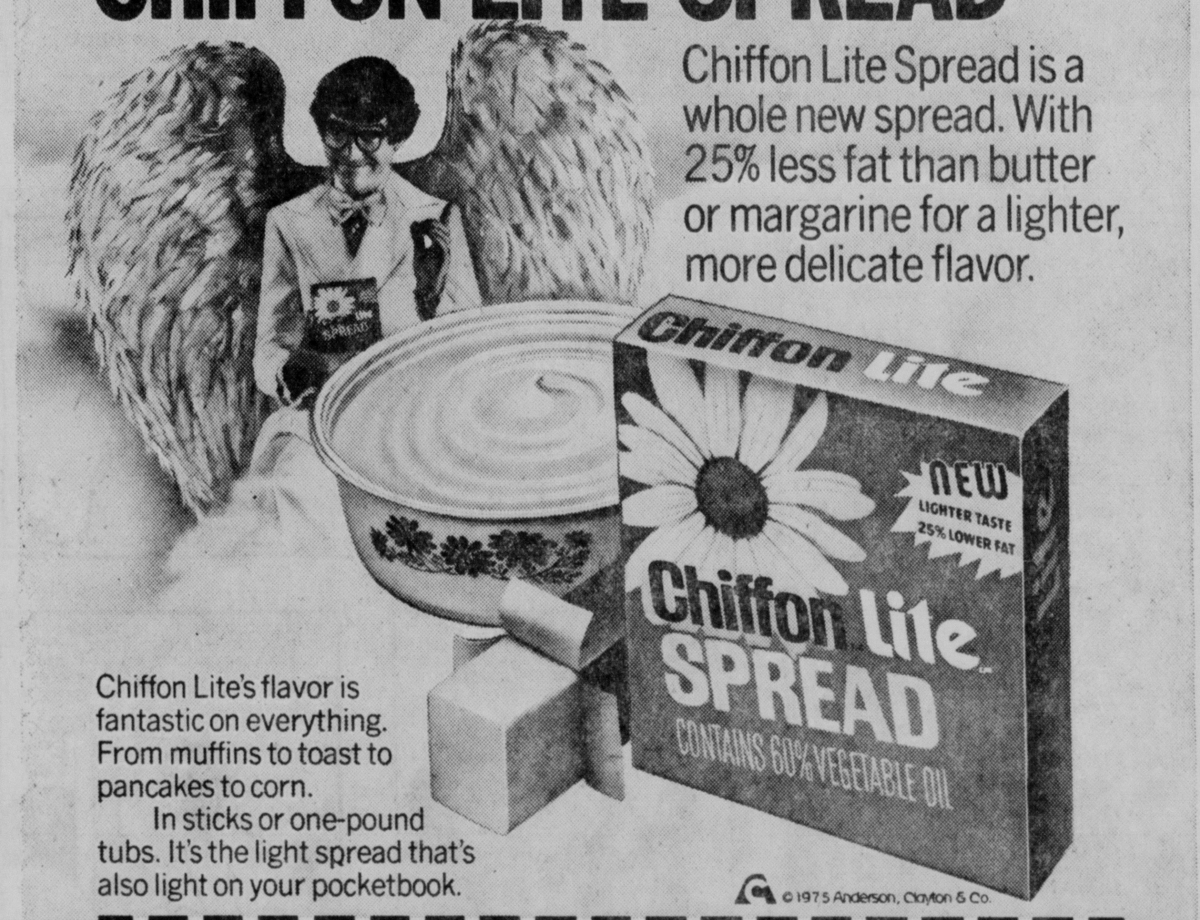

Authorities have "run out of leads" in the fire bombing of Pius X High School on Jan. 10, according to Chief Fire Inspector Dale Boettcher.

The fire did about $10,000 to $15,000 worth of damage to the office of Principal John Strope. Investigators found shards of thick glass, like that of a pop bottle, and traces of gasoline in the office.

Boettcher said that a number of people have been questioned in connection with the incident, including one youth who, as it turned out, had burned his hand on a popcorn popper.

"We haven't given up on it yet," Boettcher said. "We're hoping something new will come up."

Ed Board Warned Against Public Emotionalism

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

Lincoln Schools Supt. John Prasch warned the Board of Education Tuesday not to become the tool of extremists.

In an implicit reprimand of board member Lu Pansing's attack last week on "Man: A Course of Study," a social studies program, Prasch offered "perspective and comment" in an informal board work session.

Also, four staff members who teach or have taught MACOS for six years in the Lincoln Public Schools and the district social studies consultant had a lengthy question-and-answer session with the board.

Citing unusually high district-wide enthusiams by students and teachers for MACOS, they insisted it helps children learn how to think inquiringly and erases prejudice about other cultures.

Out Of Context

The staff members said criticism of course conduct is erroneous, that objectionable quotes were pulled out of context from teachers' materials that children never see, that teachers never attempt to indoctrinate students to adopt behavior of other cultures that's offensive or criminal in American society, and point out the difference.

Moreover, the board was told, little course time is devoted to MACOS materials which have been sensationalized, and teachers have latitude but responsibility in guiding students in problem-solving, based on information presented.

"I have a lot of confidence in the integrity of the teachers" to omit potentially offensive materials, said Board President Louis Roper. His own daughter is enrolled in the course.

'Sort Out Propaganda'

Board member Pearl Goldenstein cited a need for the board and public to "know how to sort out propaganda," just as her own 12-year-old can to solve problems. "If we start this kind of censorship (a few people are demanding), we're really going to have to paw through everything."

Prasch said one board responsibility is "to be as fully informed as possible" to make "rational decisions." But those must be confined to the "policy-making level," he cautioned.

If the board should begin to implement practices under those policies, Prasch explained, that would weaken public accountability by teachers and switch that role to the board.

He declined to defend or attack MACOS. It "needs no apology from me."

But Prasch said he's convinced the schools must "not force children into programs that parents object to." That "ought to be written policy," he said, and urged offering alternative approaches and materials. Each school should also brief parents on course and allow frequent review.

Regarding personal-social development programs, Prasch said, "I think we should look at the possibility of some alternate type schools." Further, "We have an obligation to supervise our staff" to prevent abuses and monitor academic license. He suggested "outside evaluations" as another possibility.

In his personal opinion, however, Prasch said, "Irregardless of our intent, it's almost impossible to separate teaching of values from whatever we're doing."

"MACOS was not sneaked into the curriculum," Prasch said. After seven years, it is now used in 25 schools which alternate it annualy with a history course. Eight schools do not use MACOS.

Prasch also pointed out that board members have had three briefings on MACOS, the last covering a half-day in August, because it's been "controversial since its inception."

'Conscious Choice'

Its use in Lincoln has never been mandatory, but "a conscious choice of that building staff," and teachers get 30 to 40 hours of training or serve a year-long apprenticeship before conducting the course.

Dawes teacher John H. Fischer compared MACOS to a Sunday School class. The Bible, he said, contains episodes of "violence, immorality, breaking of commandments" which a church teacher could select for discussion but which might be offensive to parents or children.

The public schools teacher carries an identical responsibility, Fischer said.

Mrs. Pansing read from a congressional committee report, which declared if MACOS materials aren't handled well, they could be "traumatic" by raising "intense moral questions."

'No Teacher Would'

Mrs. Pansing said "open-ended" discussions with no guidance is "mandated" in MACOS. Former MACOS teacher Rutha B. Weatherl contended, however, that "No techer would leave (a topic) without letting the kids bring up (conclusions about behavior) we don't condone in our society" and then guide them positively.

Since it would be inappropriate to "just throw out" any course in mid-year, Prasch submitted that the "basic question is how does the board expect to function in these matters?"

"The way you handle this particular case will set a pattern for how you handle the next one (controversy)."

President Roper said that during second semester, he will arrange a mass board session with all school parent groups to allow them to express their complaints and compliments.

Tax Hike To Cover Lost School Income

A proposed Lincoln city charter amendment would shift some Lincoln Electric System (LES) revenues from ratepayers to the property tax rolls, equivalent to another 1.185 mills this budget year, a Lincoln Public Schools business official said Tuesday.

Associate Supt. Robert Den Hartog said LES paid $564,589 "in lieu of taxes" to the school district in 1975. That sum has increased steadily from $337,690 in 1971.

"If for any reason this action (payment method) is repealed, the district would lose income which would have to be transferred to property taxes under current legislation," Den Hartog wrote in a report, pointing out the district "has no other income-generating ability."

Schools attorney Edwin C. Perry noted a possibly "more serious" effect on the district building fund, limited to four mills. LES in-lieu-of-tax payments in 1975 to the fund totalled $47,609, which Perry said the district "can't replace without a bond issue."

The Board of Education has opposed that, but the administration this year has repeatedly reported problems and cutbacks resulting from the already stretched-thin building fund.

In lieu of taxes began in 1960 when law established that public electricity suppliers, among others, must pay 5% of their gross revenue during the previous year, derived from retail sales to the city.

The law directed those payments to be transferred to school districts, intending that their property tax mill levies be reduced the equivalent amount.

Den Hartog said the $564,589 for 1975 actually can be construed as up to $100,000 or more because electricity rates have been raised 20% to 30%.

The City Council will hold a public hearing on the proposed charter amendment Wednesday evening.

Term Of Office Limits Turned Down

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Proposals to limit the mayor and council members to two consecutive terms of office were skuttled by the city's Charter Revisions Committee Tuesday night.

The advisory group voted 8 to 3 not to forward the proposals on to the City Council, despite testimony from several councilmen on the measures.

A trio of city lawmakers were the only people testifying at the sparsely attended public hearing on the proposed changes in the city charter.

And, not surprisingly, each council member had a different opinion.

Opinions Differ

Councilman Max Denney wanted to limit the terms of both the mayor and council.

Councilman Dick Baker wanted to limit only the mayor's term, not the council's.

Councilwoman Sue Bailey didn't want either plan.

A majority of the Charter Revision Committee apparently subscribed to Mrs. Bailey's arguments more than they did to Baker's or Denney's.

Mrs. Bailey asserted that a proposal limiting office holders to eight years in office was an undue restraint on the voters. It is the peoples' responsibility to determine whether a mayor or council should be retained or kicked out of office, she said.

Eight Years Enough

Denney said he thinks eight years in office is enough.

He noted the increasing pressure being placed on council members and said the part-time job "is getting to be more and more frustrating and more and more complicated." Denney said he's not even sure he'll seek re-election to a second term in 1977.

Denney said several lawmakers have talked privately about turning the job into a full-time position, like the mayor's. Council members now are paid $4,000 annually. The mayor earns $28,000.

Even though there are hassles in the job, Mrs. Bailey said politicians can get out at any time.

"The door to public office swings both ways."

'Re-Election Changes View'

One of the perils of unlimited terms, Denney asserted, is that office holders who are consistently re-elected begin to think "it's their government, not the peoples' government."

Baker, on the other hand, felt that the mayor's term should be confined to eight years, as are the terms of many governors and the president's. He noted that congressmen and state senators can seek office without restraint and drew a parallel to city lawmakers' terms.

It's not as important for council members' terms to be restricted, he argued, since in Lincoln a councilman "is just one member of a seven-member team, opposed to the mayor who is a single entity."

Mrs. Bailey didn't think the city should follow the lead of federal fathers on the matter. She called the 22nd amendment to the U.S. Constitution limiting presidential terms "a dumb amendment."

Denney said he thought the issues should be placed on the ballot this spring so that Lincoln voters could decide if they wanted to impose a term limitation on officials.

The council still could decide to place those items on the ballot for voter approval or rejection, but both Denney and Baker said after the meeting they don't intend to bring the matter up.

The council will have an opportunity to study two other proposed charter amendments approved by the committee Tuesday.

Majority Not Needed

One amendment would allow the council to order streets or alleys paved without having a majority approval of abutting property owners for health, safety or welfare reasons. Public Works director Bob Obering favored the proposal.

The second amendment would give the City Council authority to determine how large a tract of land could be before it could be subdivided.

The Charter Revision Committee will hold another public hearing at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in City Hall on another proposed amendment. That measure would channel in lieu of tax payments made by the Lincoln Electric System to the city only. Currently, 5% of LES's gross revenues are divided between the state, county, city and school district.

Pampered Beef Faces Lawsuit

Cherokee, Iowa (UPI) — Two Buena Vista County farmers have filed suit in Cherokee County District Court against Pampered Beef Midwest, Inc., a livestock feeding operation near Aurelia.

Ted Braunschweig and Arne Erickson, whose land adjoins the confinement feeding operation, are seeking $75,000 in damages.

The plaintiffs contend "noxious" and "offensive" odors from Pampered Beef permeate their property and drinking wells. The odors were described in the suit as "permanent and continuing nuisances."

Grand Islander To Build Model

Washington (UPI) — The Smithsonian Institute has chosen Jerry Hall of Grand Island to build a model aircraft for display at the institution.

The plane is a scale model of a Gremlin AG Cat, a biplane used for applying fertilizers, insecticides and pesticides in agricultural areas.

Hall, a member of a local modelers association, said it will cost $350 to build the model, which will go on display in March.

Omaha Judge Gives Gambler Fine Of $1,500

Omaha (AP) — Tony J. Gigliotti, 56, of Omaha has been fined $1,500 after pleading no contest to three gambling charges.

Gigliotti appeared before Omaha Municipal Court Judge Walter Cropper on the misdemeanor counts.

City Prosecutor Gary Bucchino said Gigliotti was charged with placing bets totaling $1,540 with another man on December 26th, 27th and 28th. Police recorded the calls on the other man's phone with a court-ordered wiretap.

Bucchino said several other persons charged in the same case have pleaded guilty or no contest and been sentenced, while others are awaiting trial.

Even Larry Cox can't understand why he saves his best basketball games for the Oklahoma Sooners.

"Oklahoma is just another team. I don't like to play them any more or any less than other teams," admitted Nebraska's senior center. "I guess it's just one of those things. It's not that I enjoy playing against them more than other teams. I really can't explain it."

Still, the 6-6 center has always played well against the Sooners. Cox and his Nebraska teammates get their second chance against OU this season in a 7:35 p.m. Wednesday match at the NU Coliseum.

In the first game, Cox paced Nebraska with 19 points as the Huskers rolled to an easy 75-53 victory over Oklahoma in the Big Eight Tournament in late December.

That was the first time that Cox had been matched with OU center Rick McNeil. In past years, Cox was forced to guard all-American Alvan Adams, who is now a standout with the Phoenix Suns of the National Basketball Association.

"Maybe that (competing against an all-American) had something to do with my good games against OU," Cox said. "Oklahoma is a different team now and you have to play them differently."

"I faced McNeil in the Big Eight Tournament. He's a lot smaller (6-7 against Adams' 6-9). He's a good player but there was only one Alvan Adams."

Cox had perhaps his best game all last season in a 68-61 Nebraska victory at Norman. He scored 20 points and consistently made the big play in the crucial stretch run.

Nevertheless, without Adams, the Sooners have had troubles this season under first-year coach Dave Bliss, a former Indiana assistant.

The Sooners have dropped 10 of 13 contests, including a double-overtime 71-69 game Saturday night at Colorado.

Kevin Jones, a 6-7 freshman forward from Indianapolis is the team scoring leader with a 9.9 average. He hit his season-high of 21 points in the earlier Nebraska contest.

McNeil, a junior from Lawton, Okla., is averaging eight points-per-game. He took team honors against Colorado with 18 points.

While Oklahoma has lost its last three games, the Huskers have won five straight and nine of their last 10.

But this is just the type of game that scares the Huskers and head coach Joe Cipriano.

Last season, Nebraska beat OU in Big Eight play and then won at Norman. That didn't bother OU as it tallied an upset 65-57 overtime triumph at the NU Coliseum. That was also a game NU was "supposed" to win.

"We have to win all our home games and especially the ones we're supposed to win," Cox said of NU's chances for a Big Eight title.

"I think it's good playing them here first this year," the Denver resident continued. "They'll be tougher since we know they'll be out to get us."

Luncheon Set

The Nebraska Rebounders Club has scheduled a Wednesday noon luncheon at the Villager Motel.

Open to the public, the luncheon will feature talks by Cipriano and Bliss.

Preliminary Game

A University intramural basketball game will begin at 5:15 p.m. in the NU Coliseum as a preliminary to the Nebraska-Oklahoma game.

Series Records

Oklahoma leads the NU series, 63-57. Of the 49 Lincoln affairs, Nebraska holds a slight 26-23 advantage.

Maupin's Career As Sub Reflected In Coaching Ideas

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Some basketball coaches may lack compassion for the bench jockeys on their teams.

Friend's Tom Maupin is just the opposite.

He earned his reputation as a player, coming in off the bench. His respect for that role has carried over into his first year of coaching.

Enjoyed Bench

"I really enjoyed coming in off the bench in high school and college," Maupin says of his roles at Lincoln Northeast and later at Nebraska Wesleyan.

"I started the first five games my senior year of high school and was sixth man the rest of the season," he recalls. "At Wesleyan, I was a sub until after the first five games my senior year. Then I was a starter.

"I think I liked the bench role better," he says. "It gave you a chance to see what the other guy's doing, so you might capitalize on it, offensively or defensively, when you got your chance."

The ability to change is part of Maupin's coaching doctrine.

Clinic Helpful

"My assistant coach and I went to a two-day basketball clinic in late September in Bloomington, Minn.," he offered. "The speakers were outstanding — John Wooden, Hank Iba, Al McGuire, Dick Motta, Tom Apke, Lou Henson . . ."

Essentially, Maupin learned "how a team should operate personality-wise and how a coach should treat a team personality-wise. You should let the players know where you stand, but still take ideas from them."

There should be no question, Maupin said, where the final decision rests. "Like Al McGuire said: 'I'm the one who gets paid for it, so I'm the one who has the final responsibility,'" noted Maupin.

"I've been able to implement that philosophy already," Maupin said. "Craig Jochim loves to rebound and we didn't have him in the best place to rebound at the start of the season.

"Since we've changed our offense completely, he's where he wants to be. He belonged there all the time. I've never seen anyone throw the outlet pass on the break better than he does.

Pinpoint Accuracy

"He can throw a two-hand, over-the-head pass three quarters downcourt with pinpoint accuracy," according to Maupin. "All our players pass well. We may be Class C, but I think we pass as well as a lot of Class A teams.

Such team play has laid the foundation for Friend's 10-0 start and No. 2 Class C rating behind Wood River in the Sunday Journal and Star.

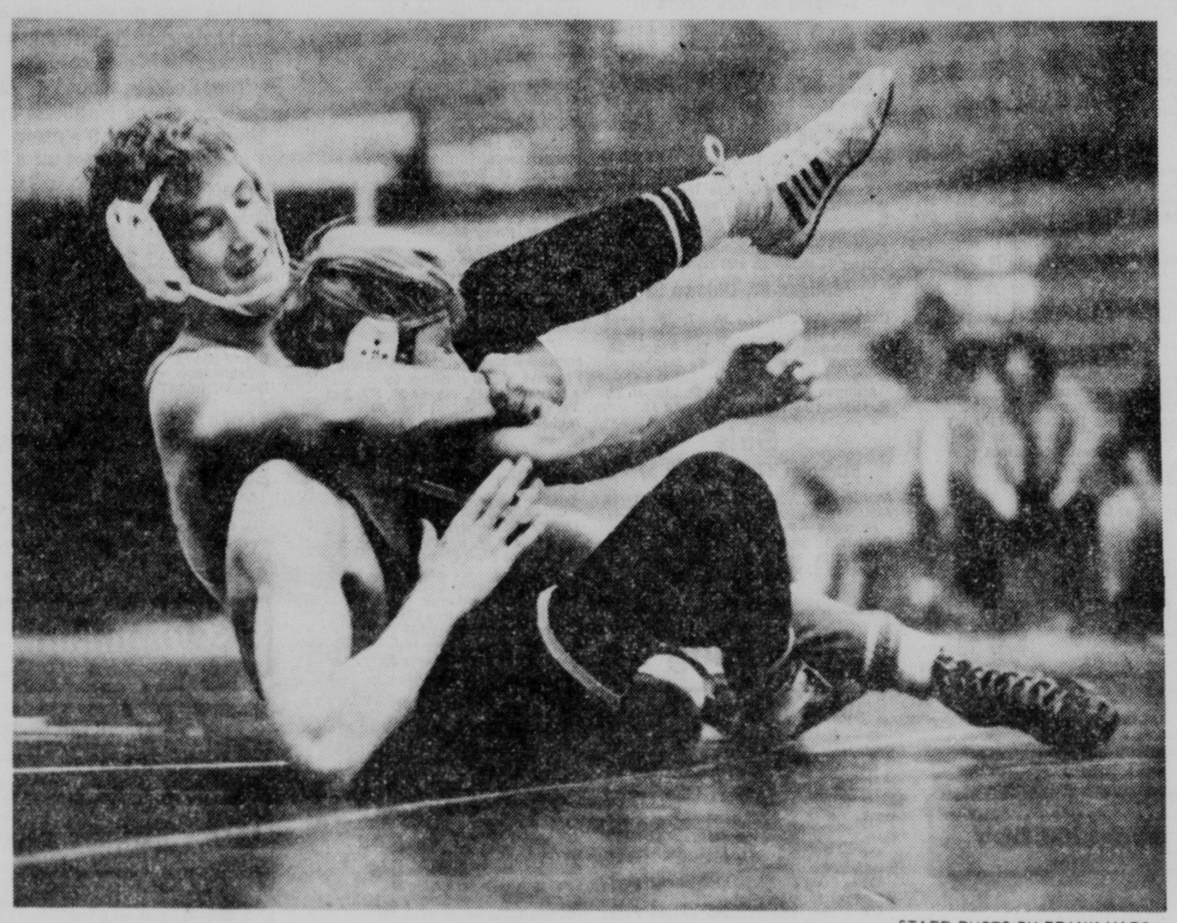

"We're enjoying running with the basketball," Maupin said. "At Northeast, I learned the very patterned, very disciplined approach. You can't knock a control game. It works."

Maupin also played three years at Nebraska Wesleyan, a staunch fast-breaking program. "I enjoyed that, too," he said. "I just wish we had won more games with it."

The Friend coach has tried to analyze both extremes and decide when his own team should get the green light to run.

"If we got it (the break), we go with it," Maupin said. "If we don't, we won't."

Very simple. Very logical.

Mahovolich Leads All-Star Win

Philadelphia (UPI) — The dynamite line of Peter Mahovolich, Rick Martin and Guy LaFleur accounted for 10 points Tuesday night to power the Prince of Wales Conference to a 7-5 victory over the Clarence Campbell Conference in the 29th annual national hockey league all-star game.

The only consolation for the Campbell Conference was provided by Vancouver's Dennis Ververgaert, who set an All-Star record by scoring two goals in the span of 10 seconds. Bryan Trottier of the New York Islanders assisted on both goals, but they came in the final period after the Wales Conference had built a crushing 7-1 advantage.

Mahovlich, a big center for the Montreal Canadiens, equalled three All-Star records by scoring a goal and three assists and was named the game's MVP. His total of four points tied the mark shared by Ted Linsday and Gordie Howe of Detroit; his three assists equalled a mark shared by three others; and his two assists in one period tied another mark.

The 12 goals scored by both teams was another All-Star record.

Lafleur, Mahovlich's Montreal teammate, and Martin of the Buffalo Sabres each had a goal and two assists in a winning effort.

The Wales Conference, by scoring six consecutive goals, enjoyed a 7-1 advantage after two periods, equalling the score by which it won last year's All-Star game. But the Campbells scored in two-goal flurries to make it interesting. Following Ververgaert's feat, Denis Potvin scored an unassisted goal at 14:17 of the third period and Steve Vickers of the New York Rangers followed 29 seconds later.

The goal was Potvin's third in as many All-Star games and he was the only player to score Tuesday night who had a previous All-Star goal.

48 Limit Didn't Hurt

Now that the NCAA has rescinded all limits on travel squads and the number of players who will be permitted to dress for home football games, let's analyze what happened in 1975.

Statistics compiled by the NCAA Statistics Service fail to confirm that a 48-man travel limit hurt visiting teams. Visiting teams posted the best winning record in five years despite a 12-man disadvantage.

Home teams won only 56.4 per cent of the 785 games played by Division I teams last autumn. That compares with three consecutive years during which home teams had over a 60 per cent mark of success.

In 1972 and 1974, home teams won 62.5 per cent of the games played and the home squad was victorious in 60.7 per cent of the 1973 games.

What about tie games? Since the American Football Coaches Association has proposed a tie-breaker, it's interesting to note that only 74 Division One games in the last five seasons have ended in a deadlock.

It would be interesting to learn if limits on the number of players who were permitted to dress at home had any effect on the margin of victory of home teams in the games that obviously were mismatches.

Large Stadiums And Divisions

One of the problems — or hangups — in coming up with a division of the Division I teams into two divisions is the size of stadiums. This is an indication of the commitment some schools have made toward excellence in football.

For example, the Reclassification Committee set up by the NCAA at its August special convention cmae up with 81 schools for Division I and put the remainder of the top division teams in Division IA.

While there were more things considered than stadium size, it is interesting to note that only three of the 81 recommended for Division I had stadiums smaller than 28,000. By the same token, only three recommended for Division IA had stadiums larger than 28,000.

The seven major conferences averaged 44,626 fans a game in 1975, which was an all-time record. The major independents, who are among those schools recommended for the "super" football division, averaged 25,605 a game.

Even counting those major independents, all other teams in the nation averaged just 6,022 a game. So you can see there is a wide range of size in football crowds past the seven major conferences.

Catching Up On Sports

The absurdity of the 10-man travel squad for college basketball, rescinded at last week's NCAA convention, was pointed up on Jan. 10 when St. Joseph's of Pennsylvania finished its game against Cincinnati with just two players on the floor. St. Joe lost in two overtimes 109-96.

It's not true that one of the American collegiate all-star football teams playing in Tokyo last Sunday used the "Slant-I formation."

Important dates coming up: Big Eight football tenders can be signed beginning Feb. 3 while the national letter-of-intent date is Feb. 18.

Houston McTear scored impressively over Valery Borzov, the Russian sprint star, in the 50-yard dash last week in Los Angeles. He went :05.1 seconds, a tenth of a second slower than the indoor world record. McTear ran against the Russian junior team in the meet in Lincoln last summer.

Nebraska athletic director Bob Devaney was appointed a member of the NCAA's Extra Events Committee at last week's convention in St. Louis.

Butler, Lilly Pace Wesleyan Past Concordia

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

Seward — Junior Blake Butler and Angelo Lilly gave the sagging Nebraska Wesleyan basketball hopes a big shot in the arm Tuesday night as they paced the Plainsmen to a 106-85 win over Concordia in a Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference game.

Butler, a 6-9 center, completely dominated the offensive boards and scored 28 points while Lilly, a 6-0 guard tallied 26 for Wesleyan, now 2-11 overall and 1-1 in the NIAC.

Butler, who had been battling the flu recently, hit his first six shots and connected on eight of nine field goals in the first half, while Lilly hit 12 of 18 shots from the field for the game.

The Bulldogs, now 2-15, overcame an early NWU lead and tied the score at 14-all with 13:10 left in the first half on a shot by forward Reggie Smith.

But the pressing Plainsmen forced five quick turnovers and established a 26-14 lead in the next three minutes on two three point plays by Butler and one by Lilly.

Reserve guard Rob Ketterer and Kim Veerhusen then kept the margin intact while Concordia's Tom Daniels and Smith burned the nets for 14 points in the next three minutes.

Ketterer finished with 10 points and Veerhusen 12 for the Plainsmen, while Smith tallied 18 and Daniels 16.

Riding a 52-44 halftime lead, Wesleyan continued to dominate the game and with seven minutes gone in the second half, NWU held a 71-52 lead, as turnovers plagued the Bulldogs. Concordia finished the game with 32 turnovers while Wesleyan committed just 17 errors.

NWU's biggest margin was 27 points when Veerhusen hit a basket at 5:56 to make the score 90-63.

Concordia freshman forward Mark Tiemann, who hit three of three field goals in the first half, closed the gap by himself scoring 16 points in the last seven minutes of the game, to finish with 28 points.

Tiemann grabbed 15 rebounds to lead the Bulldogs while Butler hauled in 16 caroms.

"Maybe we'll start to play now," said NWU coach Irv Peterson. "We shot as good as we have in our past games but tonight we had the rebounding we've been looking for. I credit Butler with the turnaround."

The Plainsmen hit 53 per cent from the field as did Concordia, but NWU hit 43 ot 80 shots while the Bulldogs hit 39 of 73.

"We really needed the win," Peterson said. "That evens us in the conference and I think it will give us some needed confidence."

"I think that our press was effective tonight and that will help us in the future," Peterson added.

Expanded Trans-Nebraska Athletic Conference Proposed

Grand Island — Dr. Wesley Lauterbach, Lincoln Southeast's principal, came away from a Class A athletic meeting here Monday night confident an expanded Trans-Nebraska Conference will work.

Athletic directors and school administrators from 16 Class A high schools drafted and tentatively approved a proposal for a statewide cooperative athletic plan.

The plan calls for the continuation of the present Big 10 Conference and a two-division Trans-Nebraska Conference.

"Allowing two sections of the Trans-Nebraska, divided by size, is the strength of the plan," Lauterbach said. "Personally, I like the smaller schools having their cake and helping Lincoln out, too."

Two Divisions

The plan, subject to development of schedules and approval in home communities, would include these Trans-Nebraska alignments:

Big school division — Lincoln East, Lincoln High, Lincoln Northeast, Lincoln Southeast, Grand Island, Fremont and North Platte.

Small school division — Norfolk, Columbus, Hastings, Kearney, Beatrice, South Sioux City and possibly McCook.

The plan is tentatively scheduled to begin during the fall of 1977. Athletic directors are to begin work on schedules for all sports and a set of by-laws for the conference organization in another meeting next Tuesday in Grand Island.

"Unlike other organizational meetings I've attended, there was a desirable feeling at this one," Lauterback said. "I thought the spirit was one of acceptance. The elements of a workable conference are definitely there."

Different Atmosphere

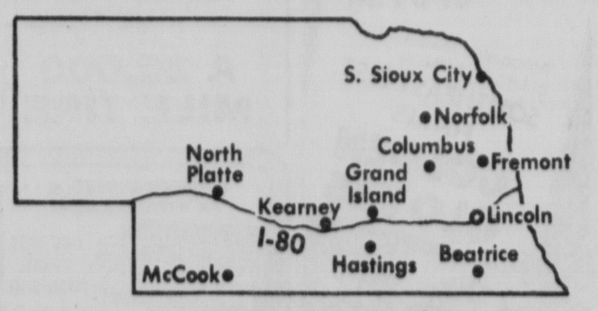

"The atmosphere was totally different yesterday," Lauterbach said. "People went to the meeting with the idea to go to work and get things done. There wasn't the usual bickering and we all were appreciative of that."

Northeast principal Harold Dietrich and all four Lincoln Class A athletic directors joined Lauterbach at the meeting.

Other commitments prevented East principal Jim Huge and Lincoln High principal Bill Bogar from attending.

Lincoln's school board has indicated it will support the decision of its principals and athletic directors on conference realignment.

The most conspicuous part of the expanded Trans-Nebraska would be present Trans-Nebraska member Hastings leaving the bigger school ranks for the smaller division ranks and being replaced by Fremont.

Shown on the map are the 16 non-Omaha (Metro Conference) Class A Nebraska schools. Under the tentatively approved new conference setup, the four Lincoln A schools would join Fremont, Grand Island and North Platte in one division, while Norfolk, Columbus, Hastings, Kearney, Beatrice, South Sioux City and possibly McCook would form the other division.

"It's no secret. Hastings has felt for a long time that steady competition against Lincoln teams was too severe," Lauterbach pointed out. "You can understand a smaller school's reluctance to play four Lincoln teams in one season."

South Sioux City is the most doubtful link in the proposed Trans-Nebraska expansion, according to Lauterbach.

Lauterbach acknowledged that "thousands of questions came up and will need answered eventually. But before tackling them, the athletic directors need to work out scheduling. Then, with a new constitution, they can be answered."

The Southeast principal believes "the strength of the plan is that the umbrella is large enough to insure full scheduling. Sure, things still need to be worked out. But the alignment makes it mutually protective for both divisions to schedule."

Lincoln High's Bogar Tuesday expressed displeasure with Hastings' desire to join the smaller school division of the proposed Trans-Nebraska realignment.

The plan proposed by the Big 10 schools may get pressure from Lincoln High to block, Bogar indicated.

"I prefer a single Trans-Nebraska to one with two divisions," he said. "Hastings wants to be the big dog in a small team conference. There could be some pressure politics from us."

Lincoln athletic directors met Tuesday to initiate disengagement from the Eastern I-80 Conference, severing ties with Papillion, Millard and Ralston by 1977.

Northeast principal Dietrich respects the feelings of the smaller schools in their scheduling conflicts.

"Throughout the years, the Lincoln schools have pretty well dominated the league and you have to respect the feelings of the small schools," Dietrich noted. "You have to respect and know how meeting all four Lincoln teams in one year might affect their programs.

"There are some of the 'smaller schools and Hastings, which just don't want to schedule all four at the same time," he added.

Total Support

"Things really went smooth and the way it looks now, it looks good and I support it totally," Dietrich said. "Wes (Lauterbach) and I represented the Lincoln principals and along with the four athletic directors, we visited and caucused together and all approved the plan."

SeTech Board Favors Present Setup

By LIANE GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College (SeTech) Area Board Tuesday voiced its opposition to a bill introduced in the Nebraska Legislature by Sen. Richard Maresh of Milligan.

Under Maresh's LB762, Lancaster County would be carved out of what has been a 15-county Southeast Nebraska area, with campuses in Lincoln, Milford and Fairbury.

To retain a "positive" approach, the board unanimously approved a resolution favoring the Community College system as it currently exists rather than lambasting LB762.

SeTech Area President Robert S. Eicher of Lincoln said shuffling counties "is going to create chaos within the Community College System."

However, considering the board last September had resolved to close down the Fairbury campus, Eicher said "I think the people of Fairbury (and their State senator, Maresh) are reacting in a normal manner."

During its Jan. 6 meeting, the board rescinded its plan to close the Fairbury campus, but in so doing left the impression the school would continue in operation only through the 1976-77 school year.

Lloyd Wright, board member from Reynolds, said the feeling in Fairbury "is they're cutting off our nose an inch at a time."

Eicher said Tuesday he would "like to scratch out 1976-77" from the proposal. "My honest intent was to continue the program at Fairbury" indefinitely, he said.

On the Pershing College issue, the board voted 8 to 3 to support a resolution currently pending before the Legislature that would allow SeTech to acquire Pershing from the University of Nebraska Foundation through the NU Regents.

Board member Loretta Draper of Plattsmouth reversed her position on acquiring Pershing, since Fairbury is to remain open. Mrs. Draper contended SeTech "can't afford to operate four campuses" and noted that any expansion should first be at Peru.

Explaining his opposition, Ted Doyle of Fairbury said "it's like using a Cadillac for transportation while a bicycle would serve adequately.

"My reason for opposition from the start has been we can't use it all," Dunlap said, noting that only about 110 students would initially be utilizing the $3.1 million facility at Beatrice.

In other business, the board heard a suggestion from G. Alan Dunlap of Milford to buy an 11-unit Milford motel, priced at $50,000, and convert it into a wmen's dormitory.

The Milford campus currently has two men's dormitories but offers no dormitory facilities for the 25-28 female students. The board decided to inspect the motel during its next meeting in Milford before making a decision.

Robert Wekesser was re-elected chairman of the SeTech board and Dunlap was re-elected vice chairman. Re-appointed to positions as secretary and treasurer were Dr. Eicher and Dick Safarik, respectively.

Fairbury Campus Decision Seen Differently By Opposing Sides

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

The recent decision by the Southeast Community College (SCC) area board to leave its Fairbury campus open at least for next year is drawing vastly different interpretations.

Beatrice community leaders generally are acclaiming the move as a compromise that "should make both towns happy." Closely linked with the vote on Fairbury was a reaffirmation of the board's intent to acquire defunct Pershing College, then use it for a satellite vocational program.

Many Fairburians, on the other hand, say the yoked decision was designed mainly to put down opposition to Pershing and is little more than a temporary reprieve for the Fairbury campus.

Peters: Smokescreen

"The proposal is just a smokescreen to shut us up long enough to acquire Pershing," said Fletcher Peters, chairman of a Fairbury committee dedicated to saving the campus there. "After the one-year guarantee is up, we'll be told that two campuses are too expensive, and then comes another back stabbing."

Noting that the Legislature has before it a resolution that would convey Pershing to SCC via the University of Nebraska Board of Regents, Peters said that decision is the one that is crucial to Fairbury's future. "Once Pershing gets into the hands of Southeast, Fairbury's campus is dead," he predicted.

In Beatrice, Chamber of Commerce President Dan Ferguson said the proposed vocational program is "just the beginning" for Pershing. But he feels there is no intention to shift Fairbury's academic program to Beatrice eventually.

Loss to Lincoln

"The fear by many of us is that we're going to lose the whole thing to Lincoln and that's what we want to forestall," he said. "There's a really big need for vocational programs here in the southeast and it appears this is the best that's going to be available for everybody concerned."

Mayor Bob Sargent said it probably will take two or three years to determine the "economic feasibility" of maintaining both campuses. The perpetuations of either would depend upon future enrolment, he said.

"We'll just have to see which of the schools survives — perhaps both and maybe neither one."

Subject To Change?

Ted Doyle, Fairbury SCC board member who has vigorously resisted closing his town's campus, said the one-year aspect of the proposal "obviously makes it a decision subject to change

"When a board's vote is to keep a campus open for 1976-77, you can read almost anything into that you want to," said Doyle. "Always the eternal optimist, I hope it means Fairbury forever, but words mean different things to different people."

Doyle said he is not against the vocational offerings proposed for Pershing, but he does question their location on a $3 million campus. "When a bicycle would do for your transportation, you don't buy a Cadillac," he reasoned.

Peters also objected to using Pershing for a satellite operation. He said he expects considerable opposition to the plan "once taxpayers of our 15-county area realize all that's involved here.

"The same board that's talking about a ton of money for Pershing is considering a new $7 million campus for Lincoln," he continued. "Where is all this money going to come from?"

Mrs. Deloris Henney, Fairbury campus staff member who also has fought the closing there, said she at least found solace in the board's decision to continue an academic transfer program somewhere.

"I am delighted that the board finally recognizes the full concept of a community college, including academic transfer," said the veteran educator. "It justifies our being for all these years."

CTU's Sale Of Cengas Announced

The sale of Cengas by Central Telephone and Utilities to Minnesota Gas Co. announced Tuesday is expected to be finalized by the end of March.

According to CTU Executive Director E.P. Alfonsin, the agreement in principle between CTU and the Minnesota firm has been reached, but purchase price based on net book value will not be determined until a more definitive agreement is reached.

He said that the transaction is not expected to affect the Lincoln operation management or location.

The sale, which will permit deferral of CTU's previously announced sale of common equity and reduce 1976 short and long-term borrowing, is not expected to affect the company's net income in 1976, Alfonsin said.

CTU and Minnesota Gas Tuesday submitted a joint filing to the South Dakota Public Utilities Commission in connection with the proposed sale. However, similar state regulatory procedures are not required in Nebraska where CTU serves 57 additional communities.

Leads Run Out In Arson Probe Of Pius X High

Authorities have "run out of leads" in the fire bombing of Pius X High School on Jan. 10, according to Chief Fire Inspector Dale Boettcher.

The fire did about $10,000 to $15,000 worth of damage to the office of Principal John Strope. Investigators found shards of thick glass, like that of a pop bottle, and traces of gasoline in the office.

Boettcher said that a number of people have been questioned in connection with the incident, including one youth who, as it turned out, had burned his hand on a popcorn popper.

"We haven't given up on it yet," Boettcher said. "We're hoping something new will come up."

Indiana's top-ranked basketball team boasted a 15-game winning streak and was within two games of tying the all-time Big Ten conference streak of 27.

An annual salary of $79,125 may not lead to raised eyebrows in the United States where people like Joe Namath earn in excess of $400,000, but for Australian fast bowler Jeff Thomson, it marked a milestone in his career and made him the highest paid cricketer in history.

The Oregon Board of Higher Education voted to make a study of intercollegiate athletics, including whether they should be continued competitively and at what level at the state's three major universities.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Highlight specific plans, details — be frank, honest in appraisal of concepts — and property. Accent on security, the evaluation of a closed-door session. One who "pulls strings" will aid if convinced you intend to remain.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Friend could be aggressive in pressing for a decision. Key now is to leave room for options. Refuse to be painted into corner. Short trips, messages, close neighbors and relatives figure prominently. Affair of heart is also on your busy agenda!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Emphasis on values, payments, collections, ability to protect assets. Taurus, Libra individuals could play important roles. A deal can be concluded and will be profitable. Know it and be confident.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Define meanings — refine techniques. Take initiative. Refuse to be discouraged by one of little faith. Heed your own inner voice. Pisces, Virgo individuals could be very much in picture. A new start in new direction is favored.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Power play could be in offing — get facts, figures organized. Perform duties without whining. One in authority is observing and weighing major decision — affecting you. Cancer, Capricorn could figure in important ways.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Finish what you start — leave no loose ends. Strive to reach beyond current expectations. You're due for more recognition, you will obtain a better participation-distribution arrangement. Aries, Libra figure prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): What was moribund comes to life. There is a general revival of spirit. Those around you become more optimistic. Job, career opportunities are spotlighted. You could meet someone who stimulates creative juices.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Obtain valid hint from Sagittarius message. Expand horizons. Keep mind open to fresh concepts. Brush up on language, communications techniques. Puzzle pieces fall into place. You receive credit long due.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Highlight versatility; realize you are more attractive than might be imagined. Means boost your own ego. One who has been "running you down" is a destructive influence. Don't sell yourself short.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Hank Stram
New Saints Coach

Saints' Contract To Stram

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Hank Stram returned to the National Football League Tuesday as the head coach of the New Orleans Saints with a five-year contract totaling more than $1 million.

The hiring of the former Kansas City Chiefs head coach, which had been rumored throughout the league, was announced by John Mecom Jr., the Saints owner whose teams have never finished better than 5-9 in nine seasons in the NFL.

"I'm looking forward to the season," Mecom said.

Stram, who coached the Chiefs to victory in the 1970 Super Bowl but was fired after his 1974 club posted a losing record, said he would "spend every available moment" revitalizing the club.

The race will start from north of Pinewood Bowl at 1 p.m.

LA Questions Namath Tag: $500,000

NEW YORK (AP) — They're all waiting for the telephone to ring to find out whether Joe Namath will play with the New York Jets or the Los Angeles Rams next season.

"Joe hasn't said a word to me about being traded," Phil Iselin, president of the Jets, said Tuesday. "Sure, if he wished, we would be willing to trade him, granting we get what we wanted."

Across the continent, Carroll Rosenbloom, owner and president of the Rams, conceded that Namath was a "nice man and longtime friend" but insisted that the Rams were unable to initiate any move—even if they wanted to—without risking a slap from Commissioner Pete Rozelle of the National Football League for tampering.

"Joe keeps saying in television interviews that he would like to be traded and would like to play with the Rams," Rosenbloom told The Associated Press by telephone from Los Angeles. "But he is another team's property. We have no right to start negotiations."

It is the opinion of the forceful, outspoken Los Angeles executive that the current waves of small talk, innuendoes and rumors involving the game's highest paid quarterback are serving no good purpose.

"If Joe really wants to be traded, why doesn't he go to Phil Iselin and tell him so?" Rosenbloom said. "Then Iselin could let word out that he wants to make a deal. He could call me and we could talk.

"We ought to stop all this conversation. If Joe wants to go somewhere else and if Iselin is anxious to trade him, then put it out on the table. Do it."

Namath, who struggled agonizingly through a 3-11 season with the Jets, twice has gone on national television programs—the last time at Sunday's Super Bowl in Miami—to announce that he felt the Jets should undertake a rebuilding program next season under a new, unannounced coach and that he should find employment elsewhere.

There is one rub: Namath's $500,000 salary on a contract with another year to run.

"I think the second year is $500,000 instead of $450,000," Rosenbloom said. "We are not in a position to pay that kind of money, never would be. It would hurt our football team.

"But the Jets are committed to pay it. So, if the Jets are really thinking about a complete overhaul, they may be willing to pay a major portion of Joe's outstanding contract. But, as I say, it is not my business, it is theirs."

He said to pay such a salary to one man, even one of Namath's stature, would jeopardize team morale.

"But quarterback is not one of our problems," he added. "We have three good quarterbacks in Pat Haden, Ron Jaworski and James Harris. Harris won for us before he got his shoulder hurt. We think he can win for us again when he is healthy."

"Attendance doesn't figure into it," Rosenbloom said. "Undoubtedly, Joe would like to play in the warm weather we have here and I am sure he would be a hit with all the show people. He is show biz himself.

Nannen Revives Basketball Tradition

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Even though Jeff Nannen is steeped in basketball tradition, the 6-6 Syracuse senior doesn't feel it.

"I wasn't born when my uncles played on those state championship teams," says the Sunday Journal and Star prep Player of the Week.

He was referring to uncles Gene and Neil, members of Syracuse's Class B state championship basketball team in 1959, and to Lyle, a Class C all-state player in 1954.

"Their accomplishments really aren't a part of me," Jeff says, "because I wasn't really a part of them."

He is a part of a basketball program on the move though. Syracuse, winner of only seven games the past two seasons, has an 8-2 record and No. 10 Class B rating this season.

Nannen pushed Syracuse to those heights last week with 85 points and 54 rebounds in his team's three-game march to the Twin Rivers Conference tournament championship at Auburn.

"Winning feels better than the statistics," Jeff claims. "We won five games when I was a sophomore and two last season. Losing like that for two years would get to anybody.

"I had some good games last year," Jeff recalls, "but they don't mean much when you're losing. I'd go home, think about how I played the game individually, get up the next morning and go to practice.

"When I go home and look at each game now," he says, "I look at it from a team standpoint. We've got confidence now. We played a lot last summer. We just want to keep improving."

Nannen just turned 17 last September. Last summer at age 16, he set a Midwest age group Jr. Olympic high jump record with a leap of 6-7⅛ at Des Moines.

No Detriment

"I've never thought about being young for my class," Jeff says. "I've played against older guys all my life."

He's also lived with the Nannen name all his life. "I've never felt any pressure because of it," Jeff insists. "I don't see my relatives that much except during holidays.

"I'm glad there's a tradition," he says. "Sure, I'd like to equal their accomplishments. I don't know. They're pretty high. It doesn't bother me though. I think I'd still be part of the same family, even if I were doing crummy. My 25-point average doesn't make any difference in that respect."

Others who will receive Player of the Week cards include:

Mark McVicker, Hastings — Six-seven senior center scored 26 points in 69-60 win over Norfolk and 32 points in 67-54 victory over Columbus as Tigers moved into Class A ratings.

Bob O'Rourke, North Platte — Six-five junior cashed pair of free throws with 18 seconds remaining to finish with 19 points in 61-58 West Big 10 Conference win over McCook.

Mark Rogers, Sidney — Five-nine guard scored 14 points, had five recoveries and was credited with seven assists in top-ranked Class B team's lopsided Western Conference triumph over Alliance.

Craig Jochim, Friend — Against Exeter, 6-4 senior hit 10 of 15 field goals, scored 21 points, grabbed 10 rebounds, had three steals and six assists. In unbeaten team's other weekend win over Sandy Creek, he hit 8 of 17 field goals and 6 of 7 free throws, scored 22 points, collected 13 rebounds, had six steals and was credited with 11 assists.

Steve Troyer, Arnold — In team's weekend wins over Medicine Valley and Eustis, 6-0 senior forward scored 54 points, hitting 18 of 29 field goal attempts and 18 of 23 free throw tries. He also had 17 rebounds. In team's 10-1 start, he is shooting 51.4% from the field and 78.2% from the free throw line.

Mike Swanson, York — Five-seven guard powered York to 79-59 upset win over Crete with 21 points, including 11 free throws in the fourth quarter.

Dan Lliteras, Hemingford — Six-three center was instrumental in Bobcats' avenging a December loss to Alliance St. Agens with 22 points, including 14 in the third quarter, and 19 rebounds.

Kelly Ficken, Davenport — Six-one senior registered 32 points on 56% shooting and collected nine rebounds in team's win over Giltner. For 11 games, he's averaging 28.3 points and 12 rebounds and shooting 49% from the field. He's scored more than 30 points six times.

Bryan McCormick, Wheatland — In wins over Hayes Center and Venango, 6-4 sophomore scored 21 and 16 points, respectively, and collected 20 rebounds. He's averaging 16.6 points and 12 rebounds per game. He's also averaging three blocked shots and shooting 55% from the field.

Rick Mazour, Nelson — Against Alma, 6-0 senior hit 11 of 19 field goals, scored 27 points and grabbed nine rebounds. A 5-for-5 free throw performance extended his string to 17 without a miss. He's also Class D top-rated team's leading defensive player.

Bill To Help Wildlife Habitat Comes Alive

By United Press International

The unicameral's Constitutional Revision and Recreation Committee last year decided not to introduce a bill designed to promote a statewide wildlife habitat program.

But today, that bill was tossed in the legislative hopper by Sen. Donald Dworak of Columbus.

Under the bill, sportsmen would have to have a habitat stamp, the revenue of which would be used, in part, to underwrite the habitat conservation and promotion program.

In addition, hunting and trapping license fees would be increased.

The resident hunting license fee would increase from $4.50 to $6.50, the fishing license fee would increase from $4 to $7.50 and the fee for a combination license would increase from $8 to $13.50.

The trapping license fee would increase from $100 to $200.

Nonresident fees would increase from $25 to $30 for hunting. The special five-day fishing license would cost $7.50 instead of $5 and the 12-month fishing license would cost $20 instead of $15.

Musselman Resigns Post

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — Bill Musselman resigned Tuesday night as head coach of the struggling ABA Virginia Squires.

There was no immediate explanation for Musselman's resignation but it was speculated it may have centered on the conflict between Musselman and rookie sensation Ticky Burden.

Svare Fired

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Harland Svare was fired Tuesday as general manager of the San Diego Chargers, a post he held since 1971, and he immediately blamed a psychiatrist's book about him.

The book, still unpublished, was written by Dr. Arnold Mandell of the University of California at San Diego, whom Svare allowed to spend a season with the National Football League club two years ago.

In it Svare reportedly is described as bumbling and inept, taking orders from Eugene Klein, the Chargers' owner.

A statement announcing Svare's dismissal was circulated at noon at a luncheon for sports writers and broadcasters.

No successor was named for the one-time New York Giants standout player who had been head coach for both the Chargers and the Los Angeles Rams.

Threatt Rejoins Okla. St. Cagers

Stillwater, Okla. (AP) — Lafayette Threatt, starting senior forward for Oklahoma State, rejoined the Cowboys Tuesday after a mistake indicating failing grades was corrected, OSU Athletic Director Floyd Gass announced.

"According to a release by the registrar's office of OSU an error was made in the reporting of Lafayette Threatt's grade and he has been declared eligible for competition," Gass said.

Threatt missed the Cowboy home opener against Iowa State.

Action Slated For Women

Nebraska's women athletes will see action this weekend in basketball, swimming and gymnastics.

The basketball team, now 8-4, will travel to Wayne Friday to meet defending state champions Wayne State. The junior varsity will play at 6 p.m. and the varsity is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

The swimmers will travel to Northern Iowa for a dual meet against both Northern Iowa and Northern Illinois. Coach Pat Sullivan said the pool isn't regulation, so times won't be taken for national qualification.

The women's gymnastics team will host Drake University and Augustana College in the home opener Saturday at 10:30 a.m. at the Women's Physical Education building.

Even Larry Cox can't understand why he saves his best basketball games for the Oklahoma Sooners.

"Oklahoma is just another team. I don't like to play them any more or any less than other teams," admitted Nebraska's senior center. "I guess it's just one of those things. It's not that I enjoy playing against them more than other teams. I really can't explain it."

Still, the 6-6 center has always played well against the Sooners. Cox and his Nebraska teammates get their second chance against OU this season in a 7:35 p.m. Wednesday match at the NU Coliseum.

In the first game, Cox paced Nebraska with 19 points as the Huskers rolled to an easy 75-53 victory over Oklahoma in the Big Eight Tournament in late December.

That was the first time that Cox had been matched with OU center Rick McNeil. In past years, Cox was forced to guard all-American Alvan Adams, who is now a standout with the Phoenix Suns of the National Basketball Association.

"Maybe that (competing against an all-American) had something to do with my good games against OU," Cox said. "Oklahoma is a different team now and you have to play them differently."

"I faced McNeil in the Big Eight Tournament. He's a lot smaller (6-7 against Adams' 6-9). He's a good player but there was only one Alvan Adams."

Cox had perhaps his best game all last season in a 68-61 Nebraska victory at Norman. He scored 20 points and consistently made the big play in the crucial stretch run.

Nevertheless, without Adams, the Sooners have had troubles this season under first-year coach Dave Bliss, a former Indiana assistant.

The Sooners have dropped 10 of 13 contests, including a double-overtime 71-69 game Saturday night at Colorado.

Kevin Jones, a 6-7 freshman forward from Indianapolis is the team scoring leader with a 9.9 average. He hit his season-high of 21 points in the earlier Nebraska contest.

McNeil, a junior from Lawton, Okla., is averaging eight points-per-game. He took team honors against Colorado with 18 points.

While Oklahoma has lost its last three games, the Huskers have won five straight and nine of their last 10.

But this is just the type of game that scares the Huskers and head coach Joe Cipriano.

Last season, Nebraska beat OU in Big Eight play and then won at Norman. That didn't bother OU as it tallied an upset 65-57 overtime triumph at the NU Coliseum. That was also a game NU was "supposed" to win.

"We have to win all our home games and especially the ones we're supposed to win," Cox said of NU's chances for a Big Eight title.

"I think it's good playing them here first this year," the Denver resident continued. "They'll be tougher since we know they'll be out to get us."

Luncheon Set

The Nebraska Rebounders Club has scheduled a Wednesday noon luncheon at the Villager Motel.

Open to the public, the luncheon will feature talks by Cipriano and Bliss.

Preliminary Game

A University intramural basketball game will begin at 5:15 p.m. in the NU Coliseum as a preliminary to the Nebraska-Oklahoma game.

Series Records

Oklahoma leads the NU series, 63-57. Of the 49 Lincoln affairs, Nebraska holds a slight 26-23 advantage.

Maupin's Career As Sub Reflected In Coaching Ideas

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Some basketball coaches may lack compassion for the bench jockeys on their teams.

Friend's Tom Maupin is just the opposite.

He earned his reputation as a player, coming in off the bench. His respect for that role has carried over into his first year of coaching.

Enjoyed Bench

"I really enjoyed coming in off the bench in high school and college," Maupin says of his roles at Lincoln Northeast and later at Nebraska Wesleyan.

"I started the first five games my senior year of high school and was sixth man the rest of the season," he recalls. "At Wesleyan, I was a sub until after the first five games my senior year. Then I was a starter.

"I think I liked the bench role better," he says. "It gave you a chance to see what the other guy's doing, so you might capitalize on it, offensively or defensively, when you got your chance."

The ability to change is part of Maupin's coaching doctrine.

Clinic Helpful

"My assistant coach and I went to a two-day basketball clinic in late September in Bloomington, Minn.," he offered. "The speakers were outstanding — John Wooden, Hank Iba, Al McGuire, Dick Motta, Tom Apke, Lou Henson . . ."

Essentially, Maupin learned "how a team should operate personality-wise and how a coach should treat a team personality-wise. You should let the players know where you stand, but still take ideas from them."

There should be no question, Maupin said, where the final decision rests. "Like Al McGuire said: 'I'm the one who gets paid for it, so I'm the one who has the final responsibility,'" noted Maupin.

"I've been able to implement that philosophy already," Maupin said. "Craig Jochim loves to rebound and we didn't have him in the best place to rebound at the start of the season.

"Since we've changed our offense completely, he's where he wants to be. He belonged there all the time. I've never seen anyone throw the outlet pass on the break better than he does.

Pinpoint Accuracy

"He can throw a two-hand, over-the-head pass three quarters downcourt with pinpoint accuracy," according to Maupin. "All our players pass well. We may be Class C, but I think we pass as well as a lot of Class A teams.

Such team play has laid the foundation for Friend's 10-0 start and No. 2 Class C rating behind Wood River in the Sunday Journal and Star.

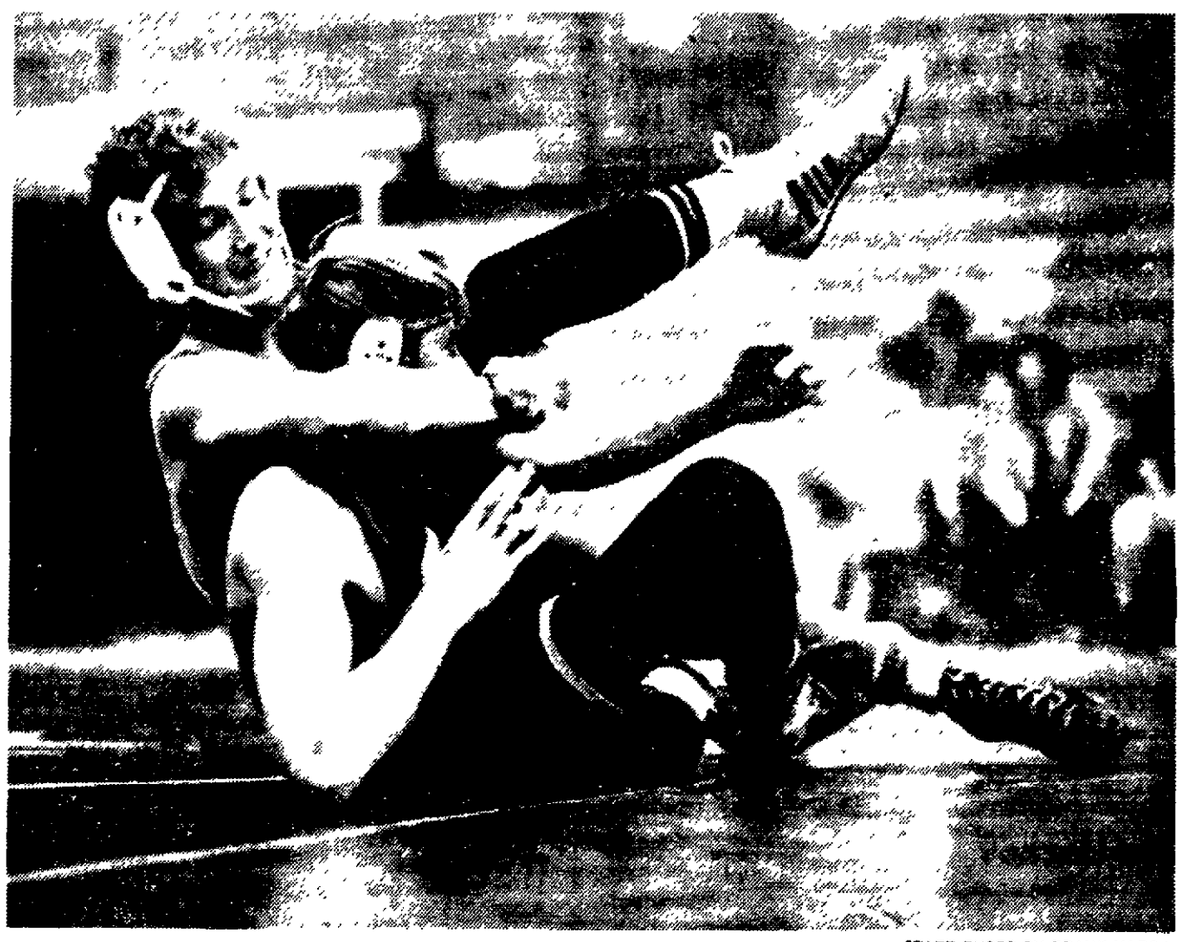

"We're enjoying running with the basketball," Maupin said. "At Northeast, I learned the very patterned, very disciplined approach. You can't knock a control game. It works."

Maupin also played three years at Nebraska Wesleyan, a staunch fast-breaking program. "I enjoyed that, too," he said. "I just wish we had won more games with it."

The Friend coach has tried to analyze both extremes and decide when his own team should get the green light to run.

"If we got it (the break), we go with it," Maupin said. "If we don't, we won't."

Very simple. Very logical.

Mahovolich Leads All-Star Win

Philadelphia (UPI) — The dynamite line of Peter Mahovolich, Rick Martin and Guy LaFleur accounted for 10 points Tuesday night to power the Prince of Wales Conference to a 7-5 victory over the Clarence Campbell Conference in the 29th annual national hockey league all-star game.

The only consolation for the Campbell Conference was provided by Vancouver's Dennis Ververgaert, who set an All-Star record by scoring two goals in the span of 10 seconds. Bryan Trottier of the New York Islanders assisted on both goals, but they came in the final period after the Wales Conference had built a crushing 7-1 advantage.

Mahovlich, a big center for the Montreal Canadiens, equalled three All-Star records by scoring a goal and three assists and was named the game's MVP. His total of four points tied the mark shared by Ted Linsday and Gordie Howe of Detroit; his three assists equalled a mark shared by three others; and his two assists in one period tied another mark.

The 12 goals scored by both teams was another All-Star record.

Lafleur, Mahovlich's Montreal teammate, and Martin of the Buffalo Sabres each had a goal and two assists in a winning effort.

The Wales Conference, by scoring six consecutive goals, enjoyed a 7-1 advantage after two periods, equalling the score by which it won last year's All-Star game. But the Campbells scored in two-goal flurries to make it interesting. Following Ververgaert's feat, Denis Potvin scored an unassisted goal at 14:17 of the third period and Steve Vickers of the New York Rangers followed 29 seconds later.

The goal was Potvin's third in as many All-Star games and he was the only player to score Tuesday night who had a previous All-Star goal.

48 Limit Didn't Hurt

Now that the NCAA has rescinded all limits on travel squads and the number of players who will be permitted to dress for home football games, let's analyze what happened in 1975.

Statistics compiled by the NCAA Statistics Service fail to confirm that a 48-man travel limit hurt visiting teams. Visiting teams posted the best winning record in five years despite a 12-man disadvantage.

Home teams won only 56.4 per cent of the 785 games played by Division I teams last autumn. That compares with three consecutive years during which home teams had over a 60 per cent mark of success.

In 1972 and 1974, home teams won 62.5 per cent of the games played and the home squad was victorious in 60.7 per cent of the 1973 games.

What about tie games? Since the American Football Coaches Association has proposed a tie-breaker, it's interesting to note that only 74 Division One games in the last five seasons have ended in a deadlock.

It would be interesting to learn if limits on the number of players who were permitted to dress at home had any effect on the margin of victory of home teams in the games that obviously were mismatches.

Large Stadiums And Divisions

One of the problems — or hangups — in coming up with a division of the Division I teams into two divisions is the size of stadiums. This is an indication of the commitment some schools have made toward excellence in football.

For example, the Reclassification Committee set up by the NCAA at its August special convention came up with 81 schools for Division I and put the remainder of the top division teams in Division IA.

While there were more things considered than stadium size, it is interesting to note that only three of the 81 recommended for Division I had stadiums smaller than 28,000. By the same token, only three recommended for Division IA had stadiums larger than 28,000.

The seven major conferences averaged 44,626 fans a game in 1975, which was an all-time record. The major independents, who are among those schools recommended for the "super" football division, averaged 25,685 a game.

Even counting those major independents, all other teams in the nation averaged just 6,022 a game. So you can see there is a wide range of size in football crowds past the seven major conferences.

Catching Up On Sports

The absurdity of the 10-man travel squad for college basketball, rescinded at last week's NCAA convention, was pointed up on Jan. 10 when St. Joseph's of Pennsylvania finished its game against Cincinnati with just two players on the floor. St. Joe lost in two overtimes 109-96.

It's not true that one of the American collegiate all-star football teams playing in Tokyo last Sunday used the "Slant-I formation."

Important dates coming up: Big Eight football tenders can be signed beginning Feb. 3 while the national letter-of-intent date is Feb. 18.

Houston McTear scored impressively over Valery Borzov, the Russian sprint star, in the 50-yard dash last week in Los Angeles. He went :05.1 seconds, a tenth of a second slower than the indoor world record. McTear ran against the Russian junior team in the meet in Lincoln last summer.

Nebraska athletic director Bob Devaney was appointed a member of the NCAA's Extra Events Committee at last week's convention in St. Louis.

Butler, Lilly Pace Wesleyan Past Concordia

By KEN HAMBLETON
Star Sports Writer

Seward — Junior Blake Butler and Angelo Lilly gave the sagging Nebraska Wesleyan basketball hopes a big shot in the arm Tuesday night as they paced the Plainsmen to a 106-85 win over Concordia in a Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic Conference game.

Butler, a 6-9 center, completely dominated the offensive boards and scored 28 points while Lilly, a 6-0 guard tallied 26 for Wesleyan, now 2-11 overall and 1-1 in the NIAC.

Butler, who had been battling the flu recently, hit his first six shots and connected on eight of nine field goals in the first half, while Lilly hit 12 of 18 shots from the field for the game.

The Bulldogs, now 2-15, overcame an early NWU lead and tied the score at 14-all with 13:10 left in the first half on a shot by forward Reggie Smith.

But the pressing Plainsmen forced five quick turnovers and established a 26-14 lead in the next three minutes on two three point plays by Butler and one by Lilly.

Reserve guard Rob Ketterer and Kim Veerhusen then kept the margin intact while Concordia's Tom Daniels and Smith burned the nets for 14 points in the next three minutes.

Ketterer finished with 10 points and Veerhusen 12 for the Plainsmen, while Smith tallied 18 and Daniels 16.

Riding a 52-44 halftime lead, Wesleyan continued to dominate the game and with seven minutes gone in the second half, NWU held a 71-52 lead, as turnovers plagued the Bulldogs. Concordia finished the game with 32 turnovers while Wesleyan committed just 17 errors.

NWU's biggest margin was 27 points when Veerhusen hit a basket at 5:56 to make the score 90-63.

Concordia freshman forward Mark Tiemann, who hit three of three field goals in the first half, closed the gap by himself scoring 16 points in the last seven minutes of the game, to finish with 28 points.

Tiemann grabbed 15 rebounds to lead the Bulldogs while Butler hauled in 16 caroms.

"Maybe we'll start to play now," said NWU coach Irv Peterson. "We shot as good as we have in our past games but tonight we had the rebounding we've been looking for. I credit Butler with the turnaround."

The Plainsmen hit 53 per cent from the field as did Concordia, but NWU hit 43 of 80 shots while the Bulldogs hit 39 of 73.

"We really needed the win," Peterson said. "That evens us in the conference and I think it will give us some needed confidence."

"I think that our press was effective tonight and that will help us in the future," Peterson added.

Expanded Trans-Nebraska Athletic Conference Proposed

Grand Island — Dr. Wesley Lauterbach, Lincoln Southeast's principal, came away from a Class A athletic meeting here Monday night confident an expanded Trans-Nebraska Conference will work.

Athletic directors and school administrators from 16 Class A high schools drafted and tentatively approved a proposal for a statewide cooperative athletic plan.

The plan calls for the continuation of the present Big 10 Conference and a two-division Trans-Nebraska Conference.

"Allowing two sections of the Trans-Nebraska, divided by size, is the strength of the plan," Lauterbach said. "Personally, I like the smaller schools having their cake and helping Lincoln out, too."

Two Divisions

The plan, subject to development of schedules and approval in home communities, would include these Trans-Nebraska alignments:

Big school division — Lincoln East, Lincoln High, Lincoln Northeast, Lincoln Southeast, Grand Island, Fremont and North Platte.

Small school division — Norfolk, Columbus, Hastings, Kearney, Beatrice, South Sioux City and possibly McCook.

The plan is tentatively scheduled to begin during the fall of 1977. Athletic directors are to begin work on schedules for all sports and a set of by-laws for the conference organization in another meeting next Tuesday in Grand Island.

"Unlike other organizational meetings I've attended, there was a desirable feeling at this one," Lauterback said. "I thought the spirit was one of acceptance. The elements of a workable conference are definitely there."

Different Atmosphere

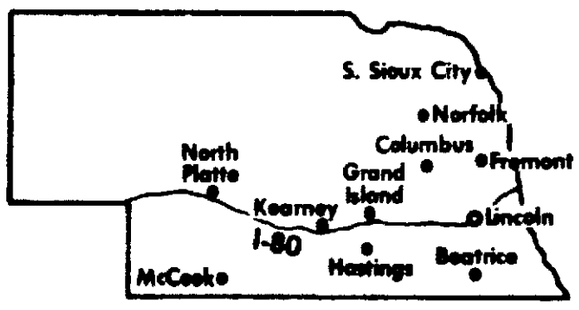

"The atmosphere was totally different yesterday," Lauterbach said. "People went to the meeting with the idea to go to work and get things done. There wasn't the usual backering and we all were appreciative of that."

Northeast principal Harold Dietrich and all four Lincoln Class A athletic directors joined Lauterbach at the meeting.

Other commitments prevented East principal Jim Huge and Lincoln High principal Bill Bogar from attending.

Lincoln's school board has indicated it will support the decision of its principals and athletic directors on conference realignment.

The most conspicuous part of the expanded Trans-Nebraska would be present Trans-Nebraska member Hastings leaving the bigger school ranks for the smaller division ranks and being replaced by Fremont.

Shown on the map are the 16 non-Omaha (Metro Conference) Class A Nebraska schools. Under the tentatively approved new conference setup, the four Lincoln A schools would join Fremont, Grand Island and North Platte in one division, while Norfolk, Columbus, Hastings, Kearney, Beatrice, South Sioux City and possibly McCook would form the other division.

"It's no secret Hastings has felt for a long time that steady competition against Lincoln teams was too severe," Lauterbach pointed out. "You can understand a smaller school's reluctance to play four Lincoln teams in one season."

South Sioux City is the most doubtful link in the proposed Trans-Nebraska expansion, ac-

Lauterbach acknowledged that "thousands of questions came up and will need answered eventually. But before tackling them, the athletic directors need to work out scheduling. Then, with a new constitution, they can be answered."

The Southeast principal believes "the strength of the plan is that the umbrella is large enough to insure full scheduling. Sure, things still need to be worked out. But the alignment makes it mutually protective for both divisions to schedule."

Lincoln High's Bogar Tuesday expressed displeasure with Hastings' desire to join the smaller school division of the proposed Trans-Nebraska realignment.

The plan proposed by the Big 10 schools may get pressure from Lincoln High to block, Bogar indicated.

"I prefer a single Trans-Nebraska to one with two divisions," he said. "Hastings wants to be the big dog in a small team conference. There could be some pressure politics from us."

Lincoln athletic directors met Tuesday to initiate disengagement from the Eastern I-80 Conference, severing ties with Papillion, Millard and Ralston by 1977.

Northeast principal Dietrich respects the feelings of the smaller schools in their scheduling conflicts.

"Throughout the years, the Lincoln schools have pretty well dominated the league and you have to respect the feelings of the small schools," Dietrich noted. "You have to respect and know how meeting all four Lincoln teams in one year might affect their programs.

"There are some of the smaller schools and Hastings, which just don't want to schedule all four at the same time," he added.

Total Support

"Things really went smooth and the way it looks now, it looks good and I support it totally," Dietrich said. "Wes (Lauterbach) and I represented the Lincoln principals and along with the four athletic directors, we visited and caucused together and all approved the plan."

Evidence Points To Gas As Cause Of Hotel Blast

Fremont (AP) — A preliminary investigation into the Jan. 10 explosion that ripped through the Pathfinder Hotel here indicates the blast was caused by the ignition of a gas leak outside the building. The blast killed 18 persons and injured more than 40 others.

At a news conference Tuesday, Fremont Fire Chief Howard Schneider said sub-zero temperatures in the area several days before the blast occurred may have also contributed to the disaster.

Schneider said he could not speculate on whether the blast could have been prevented or the loss of life reduced.

The fire chief said a written report on the investigation would be available in several weeks.

Probe Continuing

Schneider said his department, the U.S. Department of Transportation, the Nebraska fire marshall's office and Fremont's gas supplier, Nebraska Natural Gas Co., are continuing their probe of the explosion.

Schneider said he does not have sufficient information to determine whether the explosion resulted from human or mechanical error.

He told newsmen: "On consideration of the preliminary reports from the agencies conducting the investigation . . . it would appear the cause of the explosion was escaping gas from a gas line located about 15 feet from the northwest corner of the buiding. Ignition was from an unknown source."

Coupling Suspect

Schneider said Department of Transportation investigators are testing materials taken from the explosion site, including a broken piece of plastic distribution line coupling from under the street directly north of the hotel.

He said he believes the broken coupling on the two-inch line was the source of the gas leak, but that ignition could have come from "a whole bunch" of possibilities.

"There are too many ignition sources. It could range all the way from a static spark to someone walking across the floor with a nail in his shoe to an electrical switch . . ." Schneider said.

Schneider explained that in warm temperatures, the ground would have been porous, and gas would have diffused upwards.

Surface Sealed

But in the Pathfinder explosion, sub-zero temperatures froze the ground and probably caused the natural gas to diffuse laterally into the lower levels of the hotel.

Schneider said the gas line involved in the explosion was located about four feet under the surface of the street and under the frost line.

The diffusion was probably the reason three gas company employes failed to locate the source of the leak outside the building, he said. The three died in the explosion.

Schneider said if the leak had occurred in the summer, there might have been no explosion.

Corps Forecasts Runoff

Omaha (AP) — The Reservoir Control Center of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has announced tentative plans for regulating the Missouri River reservoirs during 1976.

The control center said the plans are preliminary because most of the snows and warm-season rainstorms which feed the reservoirs are yet to come.

According to snow surveys made about Jan. 1, snow accumulations in the mountain areas of the upper Missouri Basin averaged about 50% above normal, double the amount a year ago.

Based on the snow information and runoff forecasts prepared by the National Weather Service, the reservoir center said it expects the 1976 runoff above Sioux City to be 26.7 million acre-feet, 8% above normal. The forecast assumes that normal snows and rainfall will be experienced for the remainder of the year.

Storage in the system of six reservoirs in mid-January was 60.7 million acre-feet, about 1.6 million acre-feet greater than this time last year, the center said.

But the center said as of mid-January, the main stem reservoirs and upper tributary reservoir system contained about 14.7 million acre-feet of unfilled storage space available for flood control in 1976.

The center said, in view of the above normal inflow forecast and relatively high storage system level, reservoir releases are expected to be above normal again this year, but not as high as in 1975.

Dry Weather Fans Range Fires

More range fires were reported during the drought years of 1974 and 1975 than for the previous three years, according to Joe E. Range, Extension assistant state forester at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The number of fires in Nebraska decreased in 1975, although more acres were burned. The 2,302 fires in 1974 burned 35,824 acres, while the 1,759 fires in 1975 blackened 53,565 acres of fields, timber and rangeland. The estimated 500 fires in October burned more than 27,000 acres, according to Range.

The most frequent causes of fires were railroads (535) and burning debris (420). Lightning caused 107 fires, 185 resulted from equipment, children started 27, electric fences caused 28, smokers caused 108 and campers started three fires.

Over half the acreage lost to wildfire during 1975 was caused by debris burning on private property. One October fire caused by trash burning blackened 18,000 acres of rangeland. Wildfires occurred in every month of 1975, according to Range.

Range praised Nebraska volunteer firemen for holding fires to small acreage.

"Almost 90% of the fires are kept to less than 10 acres. However, 10 fires burned over 1,000 acres each," he said.

Help Sought For Douglas Hospital

Omaha (AP) — Douglas County commissioners Tuesday urged legislation that would shift all or part of the burden of operating Douglas County Hospital to the state.

Commissioners contended more state financial help is needed because Douglas County is paying for care that the state underwrites in other counties.

Commissioner Daniel Lynch, chairman of the board's hospital committee, said the hospital is now operating at a $7 million annual deficit.

Lynch said Douglas County pays, for example, for care of persons committed by a Board of Mental Health at a cost of about $2 million annually while the state reimburses only about $150,000.

Under the commissioners' proposal, the county would either surrender the entire operation to the state or the state would contract for hospital services supplied by the county.

Lynch said the county might save $3 million to $5 million depending on what arrangment is reached.

County lobbyist James Moylan said that if the state takes over the hospital, employes would not lose their retirement benefits under the proposed legislation.

Moylan said he would try to get the proposal introduced through a committee of the Legislature.

Prisoners Jaycees Discuss Legislation

By The Associated Press

The Prisoners Jaycees at the Nebraska Penal Complex held their annual legislative symposium Monday night at the complex.

Current and pending bills in the Unicameral were the focus of the meeting but inmate spokesman David Rice of Omaha talked about future possibilities in a special interview.

Rice said a Parole Board reconstruction proposal drafted by the prisoner group would require the board to have ethnic and social representation reflecting the makeup of the prison population.

Rice said the inmates are working to get the federal minimum wage for their work inside the walls. He said Canadian prisons already have a similar provision.

And, Rice talked of legislation which some day might let private industry employ inmates on production lines inside the prison.

Rice said the prison Jaycees have been working most closely with State Sens. Steve Fowler of Lincoln, Ernest Chambers of Omaha and the staff of Lincoln Sen. Roland Luedtke.

However, none of the several state senators invited to the meeting attended.

Rice was sentenced to prison in connection with the boobytrap slaying of Omaha policeman Larry Minard.

Business Activities Mixed In September

Overall business activity in Nebraska during September did not hold up quite as well as in August, according to the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Bureau of Business Research.

Although the dollar volume of production was slightly higher, the physical volume was a little lower than in August, the bureau pointed out in its Business in Nebraska publication.

Nebraska's agricultural dollar index was up, but only because of the large increase in agricultural prices. Agriculture's physical volume was down, below the September 1974 level by 15% after being below by 11% in August.

The one bright spot in the report was in the distributive sector of the state's economy. Retail sales figures showed a big jump over last year.

The only cities showing a decline in retail sales from September 1974 were Bellevue, Fairbury and Sidney.

Some of the jumps in retail sales for individual cities were outstanding, with Norfolk more than 50% above last year, and six cities more than 20% above.

According to the bureau, not a single city in the state had a decline in banking activity in September. Norfolk also reported banking up 50%.

In building activity, about half of the cities fared better than last year and half did worse. The total for all cities down more than 15%.

Power consumption was up in every city except Chadron and Sidney, the bureau said.

Net taxable retail sales of Nebraska cities, adjusted for price changes, follow:

Region Number and City	City Sales: Sept., 1975 as percent of Sept., 1974	Sales in Region: Sept., 1975 as percent of Sept., 1974	Sales in Region: Year to Date '75 as percent of Year to Date '74

Rates To Insure Autos May Rise

Omaha (AP) — An insurance industry spokesman says auto insurance will become more expensive and less available unless drivers are willing to take cost-cutting advice from their insurance agents and companies.

Harold W. Traub of Lakewood, N.J., president of the National Association of Mutual Insurance Agents, is scheduled to speak in Omaha Wednesday.

In remarks prepared for that appearance, Traub said the property and casualty insurance industry is in the worst financial crisis of its 225-year history because insurance rates haven't been keeping pace with inflation.

Traub said the insurance industry suffered a record underwriting loss of $2.4 billion in 1974. Estimated losses of $4 billion in 1975 forced 30 insureres out of business.

"If there are more insolvencies," Traub said, "large segments of the public will be hard pressed to find other sources of coverage." He said many consumers already are finding some coverages hard to obtain.

Inflation and inadequate rates were cited by Traub as the causes of the problem.

He said premium increases are needed in many states to prevent other companies from going out of business.

Drivers can minimize the effect of the higher costs by electing to purchase higher deductibles for comprehensive and collision coverage, he said. Higher deductibles become available in Nebraska Feb. 1, he said.

Traub said when $50 deductible insurance became available in the 1940s, the average worker was earning $50 per week. Now, he said, salaries have gone up more than 400%, while deductibles have remained unchanged.

Traub said he recommends a $200 deductible.

Some 50 persons are scheduled to attend a Missouri Valley Conference of the National Association of Mutual Insurance Agents in Omaha on Thursday.

Those attending will be from Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma, the Dakotas and Wisconsin.

Stahmer To Pay Student To File Suit

Omaha (AP) — Former state Sen. David H. Stahmer of Omaha said Tuesday he will pay up to $5,000 in legal fees for any University of Nebraska-Omaha student who would sue the state to increase UNO's share of the NU system budget.

Stahmer said his offer will appear in a paid advertisement in Wednesday's edition of the Gateway student newspaper.

He said a funding study by NU indicates that UNO would need $1.6 million to catch up with the level of per student state support on the Lincoln campus.

Stahmer said UNO students pay the same tuition as those at UNL, but do not get "equal treatment."

Robber Hits Gas Station

A lone gunman robbed the station attendant at Treasure City gas station, 48th & Leighton Ave., Tuesday night of more than $100, police said.

The gunman, was described as a white male, 20, 5-feet-6, 150 pounds. He wore a green CPO jacket, blue jeans, black gloves, a green stocking cap and was armed with a large handgun. He left the area on foot, police said.

Truck Collision Kills 1

Norfolk (UPI) — Robert Maas, 37, Norfolk, was killed early Tuesday when the pickup truck he was driving struck the rear of a semi-trailer truck.

Police said the semi-trailer truck driver, Larry R. Briese, 31, told officers he was westbound on U.S. 275 and slowed down to cross rough railroad tracks in South Norfolk when the mishap occurred.

Police said the Maas pickup bounced off the rear of the cattle truck. Maas, who was pinned inside his vehicle, was freed by police and firemen. He was pronounced dead on arrival at a Norfolk hospital.

Both drivers were traveling alone, police said, and Briese escaped injury.

UNL Meat Judgers Place Sixth In Meet

Denver — The University of Nebraska-Lincoln meats judging team placed sixth overall in an intercollegiate contest held in connection with the current National Western Stock Show here.

Team coach Jim Wise, NU animal science instructor, said his team placed first in lamb judging, fourth in beef grading, seventh in beef judging and eighth in pork judging.

Nebraska's win in the lamb judging division kept the contest from being a complete shutout by Texas A & M University, which took home the first place trophies in all other divisions and the overall team trophy.

Two Nebraska team members also tied for first place in individual rankings in the lamb judging division. The two were Steve Pritchard of Spalding and Pat Hecox of Gothenburg. Pritchard was 11th high among 48 individuals competing.

UNL also won a first place in carload judging and an 11th place in livestock judging. Both teams are coached by R. B. Warren, UNL animal science professor.

In the carload event, Nebraska placed first, aided by the fifth place individual ranking of Darrel Gerdes of Wymore and a three-way tie for eighth between Patti Dobesh of Seward, Bob Engle of Geneva, and Jack Eberspacher of Beaver Crossing.

In the livestock judging contest, the UNL team placed eleventh overall, first in judging beef cattle, first in breeding beef and fifth in market beef. Patti Dobesh and Jack Eberspacher tied for third in beef, and Kevin Jorgensen of Exeter was third in sheep judging. Also on both teams was Rod Uhrig of Hemingford.

Nebraska 4-H and FFA members also took honors at the show.

Patty Hattan of Wahoo got closest to bagging a grand champion trophy when her mediumweight Suffolk wether was named champion of its breed and went on to become reserve grand champion market wether in the junior lamb show.

Hattan also showed the second place mediumweight Hampshire wether and the sixth place heavyweight Hampshire wether.

In the beef show, Ann Henderson of Alliance again displayed the form that helped her win beef showmanship at Ak-Sar-Ben, taking first place in the Hereford Division of beef showmanship. Her brother, Bryan, placed third in the same event.

Another showmanship ribbon went to Tami Fred of Sargent, who placed fourth in Charolais breeding heifer showmanship. The Custer County 4-H'er also gathered first place wins in both the summer yearling and junior yearling Charolais heifer classes; the junior yearling was later named champion Charolais breeding heifer.

Other breed winners from Nebraska included the champion Polled Hereford steer shown by Carla Doolittle of Amelia and the reserve champion Angus breeding heifer shown by Judson Baldridge of North Platte.

SPEED READING COURSE
TO BE TAUGHT IN LINCOLN & OMAHA AREA

The Iowa Reading Lab, of Des Moines, will offer a 4 week course in speed reading to a limited number of qualified people in the Lincoln & Omaha area. A person is required to attend only one 2½ hour class per week, on the evening of their choice for 4 weeks only. The course guarantees to triple the person's reading speed with a marked improvement in comprehension and concentration. The guarantee, however, is a bare minimum as the average graduate will read 7 to 10 times faster. They can read almost any average book in less than one hour.

For those who would like additional information, a series to free, one hour orientation lectures have been scheduled. At these free lectures the course will be explained in complete detail, including classroom procedures, instruction methods, class schedule and a special 1 time only introductory tuition that is less than one-third the cost of similar courses. You must attend only one of the free meetings for complete details. You may attend any of the meetings for information about the Lincoln or Omaha classes.

These orientations are open to the public, above age 14, (persons under 18 should be accompanied by a parent if possible.)

If you have always wanted to be a speed reader but found the cost prohibitve or the course too time consuming . . . now you can! Just by attending 1 evening per week for 4 short weeks you can read 7 to 10 times faster, concentrate better; comprehend more.

If you are a student who would like to make A's instead of B's or C's or if you are a business person who wants to stay abreast of today's everchanging accelerating world, then this course is an absolute necessity. These Free one hour meetings will be held at the following times and places:

LINCOLN
Tues. Jan. 20 at 6:30 and again at 8:30 p.m.
Wed. Jan. 21 at 6:30 and again at 8:30 p.m.

These meetings will be held in the conference room of the Y.M.C.A. downtown, 430 South 20th St. Omaha.

If you are a businessman, student, housewife or executive, this course which took 5 years of intensive research to develop, is a must. You can read 7-10 times faster, comprehend more, concentrate better, and remember longer. Students are offered an additional discount. This course can be taught to industry or civic groups at "Group rates" upon request. Be sure to attend whichever free orientation that fits in your schedule.

Hank Stram
New Saints Coach

Saints' Contract To Stram

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Hank Stram returned to the National Football League Tuesday as the head coach of the New Orleans Saints with a five-year contract totaling more than $1 million.

The hiring of the former Kansas City Chiefs head coach, which had been rumored throughout the league, was announced by John Mecom Jr., the Saints owner whose teams have never finished better than 5-9 in nine seasons in the NFL.

"I'm looking forward to the season," Mecom said.

Stram, who coached the Chiefs to victory in the 1970 Super Bowl but was fired after his 1974 club posted a losing record, said he would "spend every available moment" revitalizing the club.

Ski Racers Hope For Snow

Lincoln's first three-kilometer Citizen's Cross Country Ski race will be held Sunday in Pioneers Park.

Alternate dates are Feb. 1 and Feb. 8 if snow cover is not adequate. Prizes will be given for various men's and women's age groups.

Registration forms can be picked up at Bivouac, Lawlor's and Mr. Bike before Saturday.

The race will start from north of Pinewood Bowl at 1 p.m.

LA Questions Namath Tag: $500,000

NEW YORK (AP) — They're all waiting for the telephone to ring to find out whether Joe Namath will play with the New York Jets or the Los Angeles Rams next season.

"Joe hasn't said a word to me about being traded," Phil Iselin, president of the Jets, said Tuesday. "Sure, if he wished, we would be willing to trade him, granting we get what we wanted."

Across the continent, Carroll Rosenbloom, owner and president of the Rams, conceded that Namath was a "nice man and longtime friend" but insisted that the Rams were unable to initiate any move—even if they wanted to—without risking a slap from Commissioner Pete Rozelle of the National Football League for tampering.

"Joe keeps saying in television interviews that he would like to be traded and would like to play with the Rams," Rosenbloom told The Associated Press by telephone from Los Angeles. "But he is another team's property. We have no right to start negotiations."

It is the opinion of the forceful, outspoken Los Angeles executive that the current waves of small talk, innuendoes and rumors involving the game's highest paid quarterback are serving no good purpose.

"If Joe really wants to be traded, why doesn't he go to Phil Iselin and tell him so?" Rosenbloom said. "Then Iselin could let word out that he wants to make a deal. He could call me and we could talk.

"We ought to stop all this conversation. If Joe wants to go somewhere else and if Iselin is anxious to trade him, then put it out on the table. Do it."

Namath, who struggled agonizingly through a 3-11 season with the Jets, twice has gone on national television programs—the last time at Sunday's Super Bowl in Miami—to announce that he felt the Jets should undertake a rebuilding program next season under a new, unannounced coach and that he should find employment elsewhere.

There is one rub: Namath's $500,000 salary on a contract with another year to run.

"I think the second year is $500,000 instead of $450,000," Rosenbloom said. "We are not in a position to pay that kind of money, never would be. It would hurt our football team.

"But the Jets are committed to pay it. So, if the Jets are really thinking about a complete overhaul, they may be willing to pay a major portion of Joe's outstanding contract. But, as I say, it is not my business, it is theirs."

He said to pay such a salary to one man, even one of Namath's stature, would jeopardize team morale.

"But quarterback is not one of our problems," he added. "We have three good quarterbacks in Pat Haden, Ron Jaworski and James Harris. Harris won for us before he got his shoulder hurt. We think he can win for us again when he is healthy."

"Attendance doesn't figure into it," Rosenbloom said. "Undoubtedly, Joe would like to play in the warm weather we have here and I am sure he would be a hit with all the show people. He is show biz himself.

Nannen Revives Basketball Tradition

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

Even though Jeff Nannen is steeped in basketball tradition, the 6-6 Syracuse senior doesn't feel it.

"I wasn't born when my uncles played on those state championship teams," says the Sunday Journal and Star prep Player of the Week.

He was referring to uncles Gene and Neil, members of Syracuse's Class B state championship basketball team in 1959, and to Lyle, a Class C all-state player in 1954.

"Their accomplishments really aren't a part of me," Jeff says, "because I wasn't really a part of them."

He is a part of a basketball program on the move though. Syracuse, winner of only seven games the past two seasons, has an 8-2 record and No. 10 Class B rating this season.

Nannen pushed Syracuse to those heights last week with 85 points and 54 rebounds in his team's three-game march to the Twin Rivers Conference tournament championship at Auburn.

"Winning feels better than the statistics," Jeff claims. "We won five games when I was a sophomore and two last season. Losing like that for two years would get to anybody.

"I had some good games last year," Jeff recalls, "but they don't mean much when you're losing. I'd go home, think about how I played the game individually, get up the next morning and go to practice.

"When I go home and look at each game now," he says, "I look at it from a team standpoint. We've got confidence now. We played a lot last summer. We just want to keep improving."

Nannen just turned 17 last September. Last summer at age 16, he set a Midwest age group Jr. Olympic high jump record with a leap of 6-7⅛ at Des Moines.

No Detriment

"I've never thought about being young for my class," Jeff says. "I've played against older guys all my life."

He's also lived with the Nannen name all his life. "I've never felt any pressure because of it," Jeff insists. "I don't see my relatives that much except during holidays.

"I'm glad there's a tradition," he says. "Sure, I'd like to equal their accomplishments. I don't know. They're pretty high. It doesn't bother me though. I think I'd still be part of the same family, even if I were doing crummy. My 25-point average doesn't make any difference in that respect."

Others who will receive Player of the Week cards include:

Mark McVicker, Hastings — Six-seven senior center scored 26 points in 69-60 win over Norfolk and 32 points in 67-54 victory over Columbus as Tigers moved into Class A ratings.

Bob O'Rourke, North Platte — Six-five junior cashed pair of free throws with 18 seconds remaining to finish with 19 points in 61-58 West Big 10 Conference win over McCook.

Mark Rogers, Sidney — Five-nine guard scored 14 points, had five recoveries and was credited with seven assists in top-ranked Class B team's lopsided Western Conference triumph over Alliance.

Craig Jochim, Friend — Against Exeter, 6-4 senior hit 10 of 15 field goals, scored 21 points, grabbed 10 rebounds, had three steals and six assists. In unbeaten team's other weekend win over Sandy Creek, he hit 8 of 17 field goals and 6 of 7 free throws, scored 22 points, collected 13 rebounds, had six steals and was credited with 11 assists.

Steve Troyer, Arnold — In team's weekend wins over Medicine Valley and Eustis, 6-0 senior forward scored 54 points, hitting 18 of 29 field goal attempts and 18 of 23 free throw tries. He also had 17 rebounds in team's 10-1 start, he is shooting 51.4% from the field and 78.2% from the free throw line.

Mike Swanson, York — Five-seven guard powered York to 79-59 upset win over Crete with 21 points, including 11 free throws in the fourth quarter.

Dan Lilleras, Hemingford — Six-three center was instrumental in Bobcats' avenging a December loss to Alliance St. Agens with 22 points, including 14 in the third quarter, and 19 rebounds.

Kelly Ficken, Davenport — Six-one senior registered 32 points on 56% shooting and collected nine rebounds in team's win over Giltner. For 11 games, he's averaging 28.3 points and 12 rebounds and shooting 49% from the field. He's scored more than 30 points six times.

Bryan McCormick, Wheatland — In wins over Hayes Center and Venango, 6-4 sophomore scored 21 and 16 points, respectively, and collected 20 rebounds. He's averaging 16 6 points and 12 rebounds per game. He's also averaging three blocked shots and shooting 55% from the field.

Rick Mazour, Nelson — Against Alma, 6-0 senior hit 11 of 19 field goals, scored 27 points and grabbed nine rebounds. A 5-for-5 free throw performance extended his string to 17 without a miss. He's also Class D top-rated team's leading defensive player.

Bill To Help Wildlife Habitat Comes Alive

By United Press International

The unicameral's Constitutional Revision and Recreation Committee last year decided not to introduce a bill designed to promote a statewide wildlife habitat program.

But today, that bill was tossed in the legislative hopper by Sen. Donald Dworak of Columbus.

Under the bill, sportsmen would have to have a habitat stamp, the revenue of which would be used, in part, to underwrite the habitat conservation and promotion program.

In addition, hunting and trapping license fees would be increased.

The resident hunting license fee would increase from $4.50 to $6.50, the fishing license fee would increase from $4 to $7.50 and the fee for a combination license would increase from $8 to $13.50.

The trapping license fee would increase from $100 to $200.

Nonresident fees would increase from $25 to $30 for hunting. The special five-day fishing license would cost $7.50 instead of $5 and the 12-month fishing license would cost $20 instead of $15.

Musselman Resigns Post

NORFOLK, Va. (UPI) — Bill Musselman resigned Tuesday night as head coach of the struggling ABA Virginia Squires.

There was no immediate explanation for Musselman's resignation but it was speculated it may have centered on the conflict between Musselman and rookie sensation Ticky Burden.

Svare Fired

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Harland Svare was fired Tuesday as general manager of the San Diego Chargers, a post he held since 1971, and he immediately blamed a psychiatrist's book about him.

The book, still unpublished, was written by Dr. Arnold Mandell of the University of California at San Diego, whom Svare allowed to spend a season with the National Football League club two years ago.

In it Svare reportedly is described as bumbling and inept, taking orders from Eugene Klein, the Chargers' owner.

A statement announcing Svare's dismissal was circulated at noon at a luncheon for sports writers and broadcasters.

No successor was named for the one-time New York Giants standout player who had been head coach for both the Chargers and the Los Angeles Rams.

Track Club Sets Meet

The newly-formed Lincoln Track Club is sponsoring the first in a series of all-comer track meets this Sunday, Jan. 25, at the Nebraska indoor track in the old field house at 3 p.m.

Men and women, 16 years of age and older and of all levels of ability are welcome. Awards will be given by age groups.

Events include the 60 yard dash, 60 yard intermediate hurdles, 440, 880, mile, three-mile, long jump, high jump and shot put. An entry fee of 50 cents will be charged except to LTC members. Enter from the northeast door of the old field house, which will open at 2 p.m., with no dressing room facilities available.

Threatt Rejoins Okla. St. Cagers

Stillwater, Okla. (AP) — Lafayette Threatt, starting senior forward for Oklahoma State, rejoined the Cowboys Tuesday after a mistake indicating failing grades was corrected, OSU Athletic Director Floyd Gass announced.

"According to a release by the registrar's office of OSU an error was made in the reporting of Lafayette Threatt's grade and he has been declared eligible for competition," Gass said.

Threatt missed the Cowboy home opener against Iowa State.

Action Slated For Women

Nebraska's women athletes will see action this weekend in basketball, swimming and gymnastics.

The basketball team, now 8-4, will travel to Wayne Friday to meet defending state champions Wayne State. The junior varsity will play at 6 p.m. and the varsity is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

The swimmers will travel to Northern Iowa for a dual meet against both Northern Iowa and Northern Illinois. Coach Pat Sullivan said the pool isn't regulation, so times won't be taken for national qualification.

The women's gymnastics team will host Drake University and Augustana College in the home opener Saturday at 10:30 a.m. at the Women's Physical Education building.

Evidence Points To Gas As Cause Of Hotel Blast

Fremont (AP) — A preliminary investigation into the Jan. 10 explosion that ripped through the Pathfinder Hotel here indicates the blast was caused by the ignition of a gas leak outside the building. The blast killed 18 persons and injured more than 40 others

At a news conference Tuesday, Fremont Fire Chief Howard Schneider said sub-zero temperatures in the area several days before the blast occurred may have also contributed to the disaster.

Schneider said he could not speculate on whether the blast could have been prevented or the loss of life reduced.

The fire chief said a written report on the investigation would be available in several weeks.

Probe Continuing

Schneider said his department, the U.S. Department of Transportation, the Nebraska fire marshall's office and Fremont's gas supplier, Nebraska Natural Gas Co., are continuing their probe of the explosion.

Schneider said he does not have sufficient information to determine whether the explosion resulted from human or mechanical error.

He told newsmen: "On consideration of the preliminary reports from the agencies conducting the investigation . . . it would appear the cause of the explosion was escaping gas from a gas line located about 15 feet from the northwest corner of the buiding. Ignition was from an unknown source."

Coupling Suspect

Schneider said Department of Transportation investigators are testing materials taken from the explosion site, including a broken piece of plastic distribution line coupling from under the street directly north of the hotel.

He said he believes the broken coupling on the two-inch line was the source of the gas leak, but that ignition could have come from "a whole bunch" of possibilities.

"There are too many ignition sources. It could range all the way from a static spark to someone walking across the floor with a nail in his shoe to an electrical switch . . ." Schneider said.

Schneider explained that in warm temperatures, the ground would have been porous, and gas would have diffused upwards.

Surface Sealed

But in the Pathfinder explosion, sub-zero temperatures froze the ground and probably caused the natural gas to diffuse laterally into the lower levels of the hotel.

Schneider said the gas line involved in the explosion was located about four feet under the surface of the street and under the frost line.

The diffusion was probably the reason three gas company employes failed to locate the source of the leak outside the building, he said. The three died in the explosion.

Schneider said if the leak had occurred in the summer, there might have been no explosion.

Corps Forecasts Runoff

Omaha (AP) — The Reservoir Control Center of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has announced tentative plans for regulating the Missouri River reservoirs during 1976.

The control center said the plans are preliminary because most of the snows and warm-season rainstorms which feed the reservoirs are yet to come.

According to snow surveys made about Jan. 1, snow accumulations in the mountain areas of the upper Missouri Basin averaged about 50% above normal, double the amount a year ago.

Based on the snow information and runoff forecasts prepared by the National Weather Service, the reservoir center said it expects the 1976 runoff above Sioux City to be 26.7 million acre-feet, 8% above normal. The forecast assumes that normal snows and rainfall will be experienced for the remainder of the year.

Storage in the system of six reservoirs in mid-January was 60.7 million acre-feet, about 1.6 million acre-feet greater than this time last year, the center said.

But the center said as of mid-January, the main stem reservoirs and upper tributary reservoir system contained about 14.7 million acre-feet of unfilled storage space available for flood control in 1976.

The center said, in view of the above normal inflow forecast and relatively high storage system level, reservoir releases are expected to be above normal again this year, but not as high as in 1975.

Dry Weather Fans Range Fires

More range fires were reported during the drought years of 1974 and 1975 than for the previous three years, according to Joe E. Range, Extension assistant state forester at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The number of fires in Nebraska decreased in 1975, although more acres were burned. The 2,302 fires in 1974 burned 35,824 acres, while the 1,759 fires in 1975 blackened 53,565 acres of fields, timber and rangeland. The estimated 500 fires in October burned more than 27,000 acres, according to Range.

The most frequent causes of fires were railroads (535) and burning debris (420). Lightning caused 107 fires, 185 resulted from equipment, children started 27, electric fences caused 28, smokers caused 108 and campers started three fires.

Over half the acreage lost to wildfire during 1975 was caused by debris burning on private property. One October fire caused by trash burning blackened 18,000 acres of rangeland. Wildfires occurred in every month of 1975, according to Range.

Range praised Nebraska volunteer firemen for holding fires to small acreage.

"Almost 90% of the fires are kept to less than 10 acres. However, 10 fires burned over 1,000 acres each," he said.

Help Sought For Douglas Hospital

Omaha (AP) — Douglas County commissioners Tuesday urged legislation that would shift all or part of the burden of operating Douglas County Hospital to the state.

Commissioners contended more state financial help is needed because Douglas County is paying for care that the state underwrites in other counties.

Commissioner Daniel Lynch, chairman of the board's hospital committee, said the hospital is now operating at a $7 million annual deficit.

Lynch said Douglas County pays, for example, for care of persons committed by a Board of Mental Health at a cost of about $2 million annually while the state reimburses only about $150,000.

Under the commissioners' proposal, the county would either surrender the entire operation to the state or the state would contract for hospital services supplied by the county.

Lynch said the county might save $3 million to $5 million depending on what arrangment is reached.

County lobbyist James Moylan said that if the state takes over the hospital, employes would not lose their retirement benefits under the proposed legislation.

Moylan said he would try to get the proposal introduced through a committee of the Legislature.

Prisoners Jaycees Discuss Legislation

By The Associated Press

The Prisoners Jaycees at the Nebraska Penal Complex held their annual legislative symposium Monday night at the complex.

Current and pending bills in the Unicameral were the focus of the meeting but inmate spokesman David Rice of Omaha talked about future possibilities in a special interview.

Rice said a Parole Board reconstruction proposal drafted by the prisoner group would require the board to have ethnic and social representation reflecting the makeup of the prison population.

Rice said the inmates are working to get the federal minimum wage for their work inside the walls. He said Canadian prisons already have a similar provision.

And, Rice talked of legislation which some day might let private industry employ inmates on production lines inside the prison.

Rice said the prison Jaycees have been working most closely with State Sens. Steve Fowler of Lincoln, Ernest Chambers of Omaha and the staff of Lincoln Sen. Roland Luedtke.

However, none of the several state senators invited to the meeting attended.

Rice was sentenced to prison in connection with the boobytrap slaying of Omaha policeman Larry Minard.

Business Activities Mixed In September

Overall business activity in Nebraska during September did not hold up quite as well as in August, according to the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Bureau of Business Research.

Although the dollar volume of production was slightly higher, the physical volume was a little lower than in August, the bureau pointed out in its Business in Nebraska publication.

Nebraska's agricultural dollar index was up, but only because of the large increase in agricultural prices. Agriculture's physical volume was down, below the September 1974 level by 15% after being below by 11% in August.

The one bright spot in the report was in the distributive sector of the state's economy. Retail sales figures showed a big jump over last year.

The only cities showing a decline in retail sales from September 1974 were Bellevue, Fairbury and Sidney.

Some of the jumps in retail sales for individual cities were outstanding, with Norfolk more than 50% above last year, and six cities more than 20% above.

According to the bureau, not a single city in the state had a decline in banking activity in September. Norfolk also reported banking up 50%.

In building activity, about half of the cities fared better than last year and half did worse. The total for all cities down more than 15%.

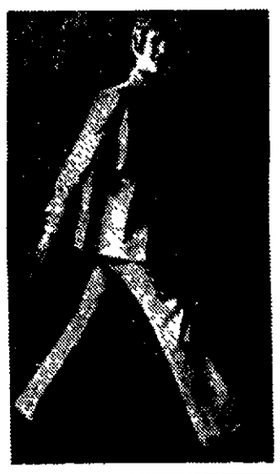

Power consumption was up in every city except Chadron and Sidney, the bureau said.

Net taxable retail sales of Nebraska cities, adjusted for price changes, follow:

Region Number and City	City Sales: Sept., 1975 as percent of Sept., 1974	Sales in Region: Sept., 1975 as percent of Sept., 1974	Sales in Region: Year to Date '75 as percent of Year to Date '74

Omahans Protest At City's Hearing On Abortion Issue

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha City Council, which last year got itself embroiled in a moral-legal hassle over the operation of a city lottery, has done it again — but it's a new year, and the controversy is a new one also:

— Should the city, through the use of taxpayer dollars, provide its estimated 800 women employes with medical insurance covering abortions and maternity benefits for single women workers?

Therapeutic abortions have been covered since 1966, but when the Supreme Court liberalized abortion laws in 1972, the coverage was also liberalized.

Under later negotiations with union representing city workers, the abortion and maternity coverage was extended to all women city employes, not just those who are married.

The whole thing has caused an outburst from local residents, and more than 200 of them showed up Tuesday for a public hearing on the subject.

The hearing was held on a bill by Councilman Jerry Hassett which would eliminate the maternity and abortion coverage for single women and all but therapeutic abortion coverage for married women. Many council members said they were not aware of the coverage before it was brought to light earlier this month in the Omaha World-Herald, but all seven say they are against abortion. They will vote next Tuesday.

Testimony during Tuesday's hearing was overwhelmingly against abortions and benefits for unwed mothers.

In letters read to the council, several local church groups expressed "shock" and "great concern" over the benefits.

Backers of the coverage claim the question is not a moral one, but a legal and fiscal one. However, Hassett disagrees.

Noting that there have been several big scandals in the federal government over the past three years, Hassett said, "I think people want more morality in government. We don't want our tax dollars to subsidize abortions, pre-marital sex and fornication."

Representing the Federated Women's Clubs of Nebraska, Mrs. W. Ralph Scott of Omaha said the coverage, as now written, "could not be accepted by responsible individuals."

Mrs. Scott said she does not want to dictate, nor does she care what kind of recreation the women employes of the city indulge in.

"I don't care if they go out with every Tom, Dick or Harry . . . I don't care if she plays house with some long-haired moose . . . but I do care what the results are," said Mrs. Scott. "You cannot have laws without morals."

Representing the local Hibernian chapter, a national group of Catholic Irishmen, Joseph W. O'Connor of Omaha said his organization is opposed to abortion in any form. On his own behalf, O'Connor said, "I do not wish my tax money to be spent in this manner."

Metro Right to Life and the Nebraska Coalition of Life also sent representatives to oppose abortion, one of them saying that if the council wants to spend money, "please channel the money into human life . . . not to destroy human life."

William Fast of Omaha said, "My wife and I have worked hard to build our family. We would not like to see it undermined." Fast also said insurance companies are not legally required to write coverage for excessive risks.

There were several others speaking out against the coverage, all of them drawing applause as they finished their presentations, but there was also applause, when the three persons testifying for the coverage completed their arguments.

Mrs. Marcia Hakala, executive director of Mayor Edward Zorinsky's Commission of the Status of Women, said rejection of the coverage will open "an insurance can of worms." She said federal law prohibits discrimination because of sex or marital status, or between men and women when it comes to fringe benefits.

Such discrimination, said Mrs. Hakala, would jeopardize Omaha's revenue sharing and other federal funding to the tune of $25 million.

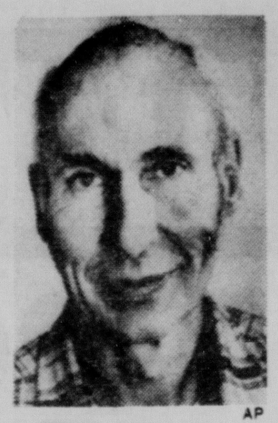

Mrs. Hakala noted that not one single woman employe of the city has filed a claim for maternity or abortion benefits, and added that the costs of the coverage is minimal when compared with the amount of federal funds that could be lost if legal action is brought against the city over the insurance controversy.

A local representative of Planned Parenthood, Fred Hines, also appeared to oppose the elimination of the coverage. Hines said his organization feels Hassett's proposed ordinance will not deter single women from having sexual relations, and will actually have a negative effect in that single women employes who do get pregnant will be more liable to seek abortions because they will have to bear the financial burden of having a baby without the help of insurance coverage through their jobs.

In rebuttal, O'Connor called Mrs. Hakala's comments on possible legal action and the possible loss of federal funds "scare tactics."

Hassett, noting Mrs. Hakala's "no claims have been filed to date" statement, said, "As far as I'm concerned, there will be no claims because there will be no coverage."

Mrs. Janice Miller of Omaha, the mother of two boys, ended the hearing by asking the council to "give life a chance."

4 Arrests May End Gang Rule

Bartow, Fla. (AP) — Police say they hope they have put an end to a nine-month reign of mayhem by a band of ski-masked marauders in central Florida by arresting four persons Tuesday.

Authorities said they believed the gang was responsible for a trail of murder, rape, torture and robbery through central Florida the past nine months.

But those arrested were only charged with buying, receiving and concealing stolen property. They were identified as four Bartow residents: Daniel Morris Thomas, 27; his wife, Lottie Mae, 25; Lee Otis Martin, 19, and a 16-year-old boy police did not identify.

Asked if additional charges would be filed against the four, William Troelstrup said, "If such charges are warranted, the investigation will bear it out."

"Investigatively, we're optimistic at this time," said Troelstrup, commissioner of the Florida Department of Criminal Law Enforcement.

"We believe this is the group that has been terrorizing the people the last several months," Hillsborough County Sheriff Malcolm Beard said. However, police indicated that there may be more arrests.

"Since April the gang, its members always wearing ski masks, has invaded 15 rural homes," said Orange County Sheriff Mel Coleman. "Authorities have blamed the gang for three murders and five rapes."

The four were jailed in lieu of $250,000 bond each, and a preliminary hearing was set for Wednesday.

NETV Board To Review Logo Status

Nebraska Educational Television Network General Manager Jack McBride will review the status of the controversy with NBC-TV over network identification symbols, when the NETV Commission meets Tuesday, Jan. 27.

Commissioner Edwin C. Nelson of Chadron will report on the work of the study committee he chairs examining the possibility of establishing a Nebraska public radio network.

Commissioners will also elect new officers for the 1976 calendar year at the 1:30 p.m. meeting in the Nebraska Educational Telecommunications Center, 1800 N. 33rd.

Dr. Philip Heckman, president of Doane College in Crete, has served as 1976 commission chairman. Vice chairman Mrs. Don Popken of Brady will preside at the session Tuesday.

The agenda includes the quarterly budget report, status of fiscal year 1977 appropriations request, and a network program report including discussion of the national public television Station Program Cooperative for selection nationally broadcast programs in 1976-77.

The operations report will cover tower space requests, the technical advisory committee, and construction permits recently granted by the Federal Communications Commission to begin building ETV translators to serve Calbertson, Stratton and Neligh.

In conjunction with McBride's report on the carbon-copy logos used by NETV and NBC, the commission will hear a review of the Nebraska network's art and graphic center.

Nebraskans for Public Television officials will report on recent membership activities and plans for Festival '76 scheduled in March.

Military Spending Protested

About 50 demonstrators stood outside the Federal Building, 16th and O Sts., Tuesday in silent protest of the nation's military's spending.

The hour-long vigil, sponsored by Nebraskans for Peace (NFP) and the War Resister's League, was one of 30 nationwide aimed at "turning around the whole idea of spending money for the military," said Merle Hansen, NFP president.

"Through thick or thin, peace or war, every year we spend more for the military," he said. "It's a Frankenstein monster . . . everything else is secondary to that."

The noon demonstration was aimed specifically at the Air Force's B-1 bomber program, which Hansen called "a terrible and frightful boondoggle — a terrible assault upon the environment."

NFP wants military spending, such as that for the B-1, to be diverted to social programs.

According to NFP, the cost of one empty B-1 ($86 million) would pay for 3,990 low-income housing units, a new state reformatory, annual child care for 3,060 Lancaster County children, all Lincoln-Lancaster Commission on Aging programs, the expenses of five city departments and would restore budget cuts made in the Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation and Open Door Health Center budgets.

Pension Plans Now Protected By Reform Law

Washington (UPI) — More than 150,000 workers whose private pension plans were canceled last year are now protected by a federal law, Rep. Charles Thone, R-Neb., said Tuesday.

He said the pension reform law of 1974 set up a pension benefit guaranty corporation. Premiums paid into it guaranteed minimum benefits of the 5,035 private pension plans which folded last year and covered some 150,000 persons, he said.

Full benefits of the 1974 law went into effect last Jan. 1 and "more than 42 million workers and their families now have guarantees they didn't have before," Thone said. "I was cosponsor of the legislation."

The law does not require any private employer to have a pension plan but does require that any private pension plan originated or maintained must meet certain standards.

Thone said the new law provides if a private employer puts money into a pension plan for an employe, he will get full rights to the money after no more than 15 years employment. The worker, when he reaches 65 or the specified retirement age, will have full rights to the pension benefits provided by the money set aside for him.

Docking Forbidden

San Francisco (UPI) — Waitresses and busboys can keep their tips under a new California law which forbids employers from deducting any amount from their pay because of tips.

Rates To Insure Autos May Rise

Omaha (AP) — An insurance industry spokesman says auto insurance will become more expensive and less available unless drivers are willing to take cost-cutting advice from their insurance agents and companies.

Harold W. Traub of Lakewood, N.J., president of the National Association of Mutual Insurance Agents, is scheduled to speak in Omaha Wednesday.

In remarks prepared for that appearance, Traub said the property and casualty insurance industry is in the worst financial crisis of its 225-year history because insurance rates haven't been keeping pace with inflation.

Traub said the insurance industry suffered a record underwriting loss of $2.4 billion in 1974. Estimated losses of $4 billion in 1975 forced 30 insureres out of business.

"If there are more insolvencies," Traub said, "large segments of the public will be hard pressed to find other sources of coverage." He said many consumers already are finding some coverages hard to obtain.

Inflation and inadequate rates were cited by Traub as the causes of the problem.

He said premium increases are needed in many states to prevent other companies from going out of business.

Drivers can minimize the effect of the higher costs by electing to purchase higher deductibles for comprehensive and collision coverage, he said. Higher deductibles become available in Nebraska Feb. 1, he said.

Traub said when $50 deductible insurance became available in the 1940s, the average worker was earning $50 per week. Now, he said, salaries have gone up more than 400%, while deductibles have remained unchanged.

Traub said he recommends a $200 deductible.

Some 50 persons are scheduled to attend a Missouri Valley Conference of the National Association of Mutual Insurance Agents in Omaha on Thursday.

Those attending will be from Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma, the Dakotas and Wisconsin.

Stahmer To Pay Student To File Suit

Omaha (AP) — Former state Sen. David H. Stahmer of Omaha said Tuesday he will pay up to $5,000 in legal fees for any University of Nebraska-Omaha student who would sue the state to increase UNO's share of the NU system budget.

Stahmer said his offer will appear in a paid advertisement in Wednesday's edition of the Gateway student newspaper.

He said a funding study by NU indicates that UNO would need $1.6 million to catch up with the level of per student state support on the Lincoln campus.

Stahmer said UNO students pay the same tuition as those at UNL, but do not get "equal treatment."

Robber Hits Gas Station

A lone gunman robbed the station attendant at Treasure City gas station, 48th & Leighton Ave., Tuesday night of more than $100, police said.

The gunman, was described as a white male, 20, 5-feet-6, 150 pounds. He wore a green CPO jacket, blue jeans, black gloves, a green stocking cap and was armed with a large handgun. He left the area on foot, police said.

Truck Collision Kills 1

Norfolk (UPI) — Robert Maas, 37, Norfolk, was killed early Tuesday when the pickup truck he was driving struck the rear of a semi-trailer truck.

Police said the semi-trailer truck driver, Larry R. Briese, 31, told officers he was westbound on U.S. 275 and slowed down to cross rough railroad tracks in South Norfolk when the mishap occurred.

Police said the Maas pickup bounced off the rear of the cattle truck. Maas, who was pinned inside his vehicle, was freed by police and firemen. He was pronounced dead on arrival at a Norfolk hospital.

Both drivers were traveling alone, police said, and Briese escaped injury.

Sentencing was deferred. Holloway faces a sentence of from three to 50 years in prison under Nebraska's old rape laws. The incident allegedly took place in July and a new law, with a lighter maximum sentences, became effective in August. UNL Meat Judgers Place Sixth In Meet

Denver — The University of Nebraska-Lincoln meats judging team placed sixth overall in an intercollegiate contest held in connection with the current National Western Stock Show here.

Team coach Jim Wise, NU animal science instructor, said his team placed first in lamb judging, fourth in beef grading, seventh in beef judging and eighth in pork judging.

Nebraska's win in the lamb judging division kept the contest from being a complete shutout by Texas A & M University, which took home the first place trophies in all other divisions and the overall team trophy.

Two Nebraska team members also tied for first place in individual rankings in the lamb judging division. The two were Steve Pritchard of Spalding and Pat Hecox of Gothenburg. Pritchard was 11th high among 48 individuals competing.

UNL also won a first place in carload judging and an 11th place in livestock judging. Both teams are coached by R. B. Warren, UNL animal science professor.

In the carload event, Nebraska placed first, aided by the fifth place individual ranking of Darrel Gerdes of Wymore and a three-way tie for eighth between Patti Dobesh of Seward, Bob Engle of Geneva, and Jack Eberspacher of Beaver Crossing.

In the livestock judging contest, the UNL team placed eleventh overall, first in judging beef cattle, first in breeding beef and fifth in market beef. Patti Dobesh and Jack Eberspacher tied for third in beef, and Kevin Jorgensen of Exeter was third in sheep judging. Also on both teams was Rod Uhrig of Hemingford.

Nebraska 4-H and FFA members also took honors at the show.

Patty Hattan of Wahoo got closest to bagging a grand champion trophy when her mediumweight Suffolk wether was named champion of its breed and went on to become reserve grand champion market wether in the junior lamb show.

Hattan also showed the second place mediumweight Hampshire wether and the sixth place heavyweight Hampshire wether.

In the beef show, Ann Henderson of Alliance again displayed the form that helped her win beef showmanship at Ak-Sar-Ben, taking first place in the Hereford Division of beef showmanship. Her brother, Bryan, placed third in the same event.

Another showmanship ribbon went to Tami Fred of Sargent, who placed fourth in Charolais breeding heifer showmanship. The Custer County 4-H'er also gathered first place wins in both the summer yearling and junior yearling Charolais heifer classes; the junior yearling was later named champion Charolais breeding heifer.

Other breed winners from Nebraska included the champion Polled Hereford steer shown by Carla Doolittle of Amelia and the reserve champion Angus breeding heifer shown by Judson Baldridge of North Platte.

SPEED READING COURSE
TO BE TAUGHT IN LINCOLN & OMAHA AREA

The Iowa Reading Lab, of Des Moines, will offer a 4 week course in speed reading to a limited number of qualified people in the Lincoln & Omaha area. A person is required to attend only one 2½ hour class per week, on the evening of their choice for 4 weeks only. The course guarantees to triple the person's reading speed with a marked improvement in comprehension and concentration. The guarantee, however, is a bare minimum as the average graduate will read 7 to 10 times faster. They can read almost any average book in less than one hour.

For those who would like additional information, a series to free, one hour orientation lectures have been scheduled. At these free lectures the course will be explained in complete detail, including classroom procedures, instruction methods, class schedule and a special 1 time only introductory tuition that is less than one-third the cost of similar courses. You must attend only one of the free meetings for complete details. You may attend any of the meetings for information about the Lincoln or Omaha classes.

These orientations are open to the public, above age 14, (persons under 18 should be accompanied by a parent if possible.)

If you have always wanted to be a speed reader but found the cost prohibitve or the course too time consuming . . . now you can! Just by attending 1 evening per week for 4 short weeks you can read 7 to 10 times faster, concentrate better; comprehend more.

If you are a student who would like to make A's instead of B's or C's or if you are a business person who wants to stay abreast of today's everchanging accelerating world, then this course is an absolute necessity. These Free one hour meetings will be held at the following times and places:

LINCOLN
Tues. Jan. 20 at 6:30 and again at 8:30 p.m.

If you are a businessman, student, housewife or executive, this course which took 5 years of intensive research to develop, is a must. You can read 7-10 times faster, comprehend more, concentrate better, and remember longer. Students are offered an additional discount. This course can be taught to industry or civic groups at "Group rates" upon request. Be sure to attend whichever free orientation that fits in your schedule.

Omahans Protest At City's Hearing On Abortion Issue

Omaha (AP) — The Omaha City Council, which last year got itself embroiled in a moral-legal hassle over the operation of a city lottery, has done it again — but it's a new year, and the controversy is a new one also — Should the city through the use of taxpayer dollars, provide its estimated 800 women employes with medical insurance covering abortions and maternity benefits for single women workers?

Therapeutic abortions have been covered since 1966 but when the Supreme Court liberalized abortion laws in 1972, the coverage was also liberalized

Under later negotiations with union representing city workers, the abortion and maternity coverage was extended to all women city employes, not just those who are married

The whole thing has caused an outburst from local residents, and more than 200 of them showed up Tuesday for a public hearing on the subject

The hearing was held on a bill by Councilman Jerry Hassett which would eliminate the maternity and abortion coverage for single women and all but therapeutic abortion coverage for married women Many council members said they were not aware of the coverage before it was brought to light earlier this month in the Omaha World-Herald but all seven say they are against abortion They will vote next Tuesday

Testimony during Tuesday's hearing was overwhelmingly against abortions and benefits for unwed mothers

In letters read to the council, several local church groups expressed "shock" and "great concern" over the benefits

Backers of the coverage claim the question is not a moral one, but a legal and fiscal one. However, Hassett disagrees.

Noting that there have been several big scandals in the federal government over the past three years, Hassett said, "I think people want more morality in government. We don't want our tax dollars to subsidize abortions, pre-marital sex and fornication."

Representing the Federated Women's Clubs of Nebraska, Mrs W Ralph Scott of Omaha said the coverage, as now written, 'could not be accepted by responsible individuals

Mrs Scott said she does not want to dictate, nor does she care what kind of recreation the women employes of the city indulge in

"I don't care if they go out with every Tom, Dick or Harry . I don't care if she plays house with some long-haired moose but I do care what the results are,' said Mrs. Scott. "You cannot have laws without morals."

Representing the local Hibernian chapter, a national group of Catholic Irishmen, Joseph W. O'Connor of Omaha said his organization is opposed to abortion in any form. On his own behalf, O Connor said, "I do not wish my tax money to be spent in this manner"

Metro Right to Life and the Nebraska Coalition of Life also sent representatives to oppose abortion, one of them saying that if the council wants to spend money, 'please channel the money into human life . not to destroy human life"

William Fast of Omaha said, 'My wife and I have worked hard to build our family. We would not like to see it undermined." Fast also said insurance companies are not legally required to write coverage for excessive risks

There were several others speaking out against the coverage, all of them drawing applause as they finished their presentations, but there was also applause, when the three persons testifying for the coverage completed their arguments.

Mrs. Marcia Hakala, executive director of Mayor Edward Zorinsky's Commission of the Status of Women, said rejection of the coverage will open "an insurance can of worms." She said federal law prohibits discrimination because of sex or marital status, or between men and women when it comes to fringe benefits

Such discrimination, said Mrs. Hakala, would jeopardize Omaha's revenue sharing and other federal funding to the tune of $25 million.

Mrs Hakala noted that not one single woman employe of the city has filed a claim for maternity or abortion benefits, and added that the costs of the coverage is minimal when compared with the amount of federal funds that could be lost if legal action is brought against the city over the insurance controversy

A local representative of Planned Parenthood, Fred Hines, also appeared to oppose the elimination of the coverage Hines said his organization feels Hassett's proposed ordinance will not deter single women from having sexual relations, and will actually have a negative effect in that single women employes who do get pregnant will be more liable to seek abortions because they will have to bear the financial burden of having a baby without the help of insurance coverage through their jobs

In rebuttal, O'Connor called Mrs Hakala's comments on possible legal action and the possible loss of federal funds "scare tactics"

Hassett, noting Mrs Hakala's "no claims have been filed to date' statement, said, 'As far as I'm concerned, there will be no claims because there will be no coverage"

Mrs. Janice Miller of Omaha, the mother of two boys, ended the hearing by asking the council to "give life a chance"

To Marry

The Rev John S. Duryea, Roman Catholic chaplain to students at Stanford University in Palo Alto, Calif, told his congregation that he's in love. He plans to marry Eve DeBona, 34, divorced mother of two daughters. Duryea, 58, wants to remain a priest but says he is being forced out

4 Arrests May End Gang Rule

Bartow, Fla (AP) — Police say they hope they have put an end to a nine-month reign of mayhem by a band of ski-masked marauders in central Florida by arresting four persons Tuesday

Authorities said they believed the gang was responsible for a trail of murder, rape, torture and robbery through central Florida the past nine months

But those arrested were only charged with buying, receiving and concealing stolen property. They were identified as four Bartow residents Daniel Morris Thomas, 27; his wife, Lottie Mae, 25, Lee Otis Martin, 19, and a 16-year-old boy police did not identify

Asked if additional charges would be filed against the four, William Troelstrup said, "If such charges are warranted, the investigation will bear it out."

"Investigatively, we're optimistic at this time,' said Troelstrup, commissioner of the Florida Department of Criminal Law Enforcement

'We believe this is the group that has been terrorizing the people the last several months," Hillsborough County Sheriff Malcolm Beard said. However, police indicated that there may be more arrests.

"Since April the gang, its members always wearing ski masks, has invaded 15 rural homes," said Orange County Sheriff Mel Coleman. "Authorities have blamed the gang for three murders and five rapes."

The four were jailed in lieu of $250,000 bond each, and a preliminary hearing was set for Wednesday

Military Spending Protested

About 50 demonstrators stood outside the Federal Building, 16th and O Sts., Tuesday in silent protest of the nation's military's spending

The hour-long vigil sponsored by Nebraskans for Peace (NFP) and the War Resister's League, was one of 30 nationwide aimed at "turning around the whole idea of spending money for the military," said Merle Hansen, NFP president

'Through thick or thin, peace or war, every year we spend more for the military," he said. "It's a Frankenstein monster . everything else is secondary to that"

The noon demonstration was aimed specifically at the Air Force's B-1 bomber program, which Hansen called "a terrible and frightful boondoggle — a terrible assault upon the environment."

NFP wants military spending, such as that for the B-1, to be diverted to social programs.

According to NFP, the cost of one empty B-1 ($86 million) would pay for 3,990 low-income housing units, a new state reformatory, annual child care for 3,060 Lancaster County children, all Lincoln-Lancaster Commission on Aging programs, the expenses of five city departments and would restore budget cuts made in the Lancaster Office of Mental Retardation and Open Door Health Center budgets.

Pension Plans Now Protected By Reform Law

Washington (UPI) — More than 150,000 workers whose private pension plans were canceled last year are now protected by a federal law, Rep. Charles Thone, R-Neb., said Tuesday.

He said the pension reform law of 1974 set up a pension benefit guaranty corporation Premiums paid into it guaranteed minimum benefits of the 5,035 private pension plans which folded last year and covered some 150,000 persons, he said.

Full benefits of the 1974 law went into effect last Jan. 1 and "more than 42 million workers and their families now have guarantees they didn't have before." Thone said "I was cosponsor of the legislation."

The law does not require any private employer to have a pension plan but does require that any private pension plan originated or maintained must meet certain standards

Thone said the new law provides if a private employer puts money into a pension plan for an employe, he will get full rights to the money after no more than 15 years employment. The worker, when he reaches 65 or the specified retirement age, will have full rights to the pension benefits provided by the money set aside for him.

San Francisco (UPI) — Waitresses and busboys can keep their tips under a new California law which forbids employers from deducting any amount from their pay because of tips.
